Heah Prozac: You must have the night shift, ah?

Yes doesn't Moparholic do a fine job.

I have guys like you that work for me, I have them doing remedial tasks to keep the moral up of the real contributors. Same here on the ng.

Illegal Radio equipment seized in police raid in Trinidad

From the Trinidad Express...
TRINIDAD - Arima man on $45,000 bail

ARIMA businessman Mervyn Dedier being brought to the Port of Spain Magistrates' Court yesterday.

THOUGH police allegedly seized 76 pieces of electronic equipment from his home, Arima businessman Mervyn Dedier appeared in court yesterday charged with possession of just seven of the items.

Shortly before 4 p.m. the dishevelled-looking Dedier was escorted from the Port of Spain CID to appear before senior magistrate Deborah Thomas-Felix in the Port of Spain Fourth Court.

On Wednesday, police raided Dedier's home on Columbus Street, Arima, where close to a "quarter million" dollars worth of scanners, Citizens Band radios, transmitters, receivers and amplifiers were allegedly seized. The items, which also allegedly included devices that could monitor cellular calls, were deemed a "threat to national security".

In court yesterday, however, Dedier was charged with one count of possession of wireless apparatus without obtaining a licence from the relevant authorities. The apparatus included four Yeasu HF transceivers, one Kenwood HF transceiver, and two HF transceivers. The charge is said to have stemmed from a 1936 ordinance.

Dedier pleaded not guilty.

Magistrate Thomas-Felix granted him $45,000 bail to be approved by the Clerk of the Peace, either in Arima or Port of Spain. The matter was then transferred to the Arima Magistrate's First Court and Dedier was ordered to re-appear there on August 23.

Yes I suspose I could and You could, We could. We could TALK about it all we wanted. Going and buying or even offering to buy or sell it is more than talk. Those are considered to be actions...

Any way. Do what ever you / who ever wants with the FAQ. It's not like the real problem posters in this group are going to pay any attention anyway.Feedback was solicited...I offered my 2 cents, There is a beach and a board calling me...discuss this matter all ya want. I may pop back in in a few days and check it out.

Time for my input.

I some time long ago had decided to ressurect the FAQ as the orioginal authors abanoned the project.

I contacted all the authors and asked their permission to update and post it. Those still on the net agreed.

My revisions brought the FAQ up to date. I included the Family Radio Service (FRS), which is technically one of the CB services.

By and large, the vast majority of the origional FAQ was left unchanged.

I, also, at the time was one of the most vocal opponents of illegal operation. I still am, however, I consider it pointless to constantly spew off insults and rule quotes.

Quite simply, I can peacefully live with everyone, and do not want to stress out over a simple radio service.

I gave up the FAQ and Bill asked if he coulf take it over.... I happily agreed.

The FAQ has been handed down over the years and I honestly believe it need not be considered "illegitimate". It has simply progressed.

Remember, "illegal operation" is a criminal act... whether or not by Statute or regulation, it is still frowned upon by any Government Authority.

Citizens may or may not agree with Laws and regulations. Still they exist, and people are supposed to comply.

Morally, we all have to decide for ourselves how we want to live, and behave.

Everyone has the right to their opinions and we need to respect that. Insults, threats, and provocation are not the way to go. Not everyone will believe the way we want them to. Respect that.

Private mailing lists exist for the purpose of discussion of beliefs that fit our own. Stick to them if Usenet offends. Some newsreaders allow extensive filtering of offensive subjects. If I do not like a thread, I "turn it off".

Take care folks and live in peace.

I would like to see 11m get cleaned up. The mess on 11m was the primary reason why I lost interest in it all those years ago. After a while the super amplifier powered stations, the operators with the potty mouths, and every channel seem to have a local "channel control" bozo who would key up on top of you, with his amp if he had one, if you didn't ask their permission to talk on "their channel". Enough is enough. Time to put an end to the mess.

When I tune in to monitor some of the local CB channels, and all I hear are echo mics turned way up, over modulated audio, some stations obviously running dirty amplifiers and or radios because they are washing out one to two channels on either side of the channel they are on, and these people are interested in a communications hobby?!! I don't think so. Most of those operators you can't understand more than one word out of five due to the noise effects or severe audio distortion. They seem to do their best to make their signal difficult to clearly understand. In MHO they only thing they do seem to be interested in is getting attention, and seeing how far up scale they can make that little needle swing.

> I still don't see what this has to do with CB. As you've stated,you're not > a CBer.

I can see where you intend to go with this leading type of question so I'll just nip it in the bud right now. Nobody needs to be involved with anything to have a strong informed opinion about the issues and to actively pursue a course of action to realize them. A classic example is Abortion. Men don't get pregnant, and have babies, only females do. By the logic you would like to try to apply, men should have zero interest, and involvement in all abortion issues. After all it's not their body. But yet you will find many men outside of abortion clinics protesting, right along side females, and making their opinion count in the voting booth on election day. I can go on and point out the same sort of logic with gun laws, laws banning cell phone use while driving, sale of liquor and tobacco products to under age people, etc. The interest shown by non CBers in 11m is no different.

The same thing can be said about all those drunk "tourists" who show up in your neck of the woods too. How many times have you found yourself secretly wishing there was a way to clean up the problem? Other news groups publish their FAQ's, or charter, on a regul

Bah! The FCC pretty much ignores llegal CB operation, as long as the operators remain in the legal frequency segment. This has always been the case - with the FCC only going after the most troublesome.

Unless enforcement funds increase drastically, this is likely to continue. There are far more important areas of concern than half a MHz of unreliable bandwidth.

Not quite true. If the modulation was from 100 Hz to 1000 Hz, then the upper sideband would be 27.3851 to 27.386 MHz. That is why it is called a "band" - it is not a single frequency. The rf modulation IS the sideband.

Now, it happens that most of the intelligence part of speech is carried in the frequency range of about 400 Hz to 1500 Hz - so that is the range where the modulation is optimized. Frequencies above 1.5 KHz mostly add character to the voice - and there is little below 400 Hz, even for a person with a very deep voice.

27. Have you hugged your Linear Amplifier Today?

Hello All: The subject line says it all here, have you hugged your linear amplifier today?

As summer is breaking here in the Mojave Desert, (Southern California) daily temperatures in the 100's to 110 plus, degree's F are a common daily thing, and easing of the hot temperatures is very easy to detect. During such hot summer months the locals have large fans to keep the linear amplifiers cooled off as best they can.

One of the locals has a Ram Air scoop on the front of his 74 Dodge Blue's Mobile, ah yes this car has it all. Cop tires, cop engine, cop muffler, duel 102 inch stainless steel whip antennas, off the back quarter panels, cop spot light, complete with a none matching door.

Nimrod Norman calls the car "Nitro Nilley" and he says his car just doesn't accelerate fast, "It zooms off towards Pluto at Mach 7, leaving a patch of rubber ah 100 feet long"

The Ram Air Scoop in the front grill has a 2 to 3 inch corrugated hose running from the Ram Air pick up opening, in the front grill, to the linear amplifier in the trunk. At least Norman says so.

Nimrod Norman says: "Its best ta keep em kool than let em get all hot and burn out, ya can tell when there ah goin because you can smell the carpet ah smokin, like last time" ..... "But when it rains it fills the car up with rain water and freeze's in the night time, not good for the neat carpet we found at the junk yard"

There you have it, I laughed till I feel out of my chair, while listening to the local channel. Remember to properly seal the 2 to 3 inch hose going thru your fire wall of your own "Nitro Nilley"

Thought I would share this with all of ya's.

Have I lost my reading skills or did you just say transmitters are not on the same freq. Yes it is trivial but damned hard to organize. It is technically possible to lock your TV set to the control desk at the network - one manufacturer came out with VIR sets -- Went over like a pork chop at a bar mitzvah. If you live in an area that now and again transmits a test pattern you will note that it is more than likely flattened on top in your set; people do not like a real picture. Are you proposing that everyone use WWVL as a time/frequency base?

There are a few more variables than that actually. You can get the 3 dead birds tuning AM with the sideband filter -- bandwidth is receiver dependent.
And six dB will somewhat more than double range if you live in North Dakota and the antennas are high enough. All depends on how you look at it. This was not a technical audience (read the original post) and I got too complicated as it was.

You'll note that I leftout Ed's callsign. I don't think it's polite or appropriate to include it in a forum in which he does not actively participate without his permission.

Hi Ed,

Thanks, this is actually the perfect response and the desired result. If the league would follow you lead, there'd be no need to let them "feel' the voice of 11 meter enthusiasts. Thanks for the reply and 73.

Mark

My point, Mark, is your posting advocates changes and/or improvements for 11 meters. As such, it does not belong on a ham radio oriented site. Were you advocating CB operators enter ham radio, even then, you would be better off reaching CBers, not hams - that is, not "preaching to the converted."

It is certainly true that CB radio has been one of the 'farm teams' for ham radio, though not the only one. Hams have come from grade and high school science classes, from the military, from aviation, any place there is radio. And, prior to the allocation of Class D CB, virtually no hams were created by that service.

We welcome new hams whose interest is ham radio. We do not - and I am sure I speak for many, probably the majority - welcome new hams who are here solely for the purpose of advancing 11 meter radio. That is what you advocate by suggesting 11 meter ops join the ARRL in order to make it represent you in Washington. The FCC does not pay a lot of attention to CB organizations (though it does listen a little) and if the ARRL becomes known as a CB organization, it would lose its effectiveness. You would be cooking your hoped-for golden goose.

I don't blame the "New Ham Radio" increase in profanity, interference and jamming on CBers coming into the hobby, though they are a contributing factor. It is just a reflection of society in general, and the 'up yours' attitudes of Americans everywhere. But I don't like to hear a lot of "what's your 10-20" and "Yeah, 10-4" on the repeaters, and most especially on HF. I feel the burden is upon the ham community to not only teach the license, but to teach the ham operating procedures. At this time we have a "body count" attitude - teach 'em, test 'em, pass 'em, forget 'em. The remark is heard "we passed 55 this session" or "we got 23 through this time" by the VEs, and that is the mark of honor they wear on their sleeves - body counts. But no one teaches ham radio practices and skills.

We are growing too rapidly. There IS a blending of services because so many CB ops are entering the hobbyh without being truly oriented.

My response to you basically was that ham radio and cb radio are different animals. That's true. They have never been the same thing. I really wish I could say "never have been, aren't now, never will be." That isn't true, though. I suspect in the near future they will be very close indeed.

It just isn't now.

73, thanks for your comments
Ed

Hi again Ed,

"We welcome new hams whose interest is ham radio. We do not - and I am sure I speak for many, probably the majority - welcome new hams who are here solely for the purpose of advancing 11 meter radio. That is what you advocate by suggesting 11 meter ops join the ARRL in order to make it represent you in Washington. The FCC does not pay a lot of attention to CB organizations (though it does listen a little) and if the ARRL becomes known as a CB organization, it would lose its effectiveness. You would be cooking your hoped-for golden goose"

Truth be told, I really do NOT want The ARRL to represent 11 meter radio in DC or anyplace else for that matter. I simply want them to NOT involve themselves in the LEGAL efforts of CB/11 meter groups/individuals to effect rule changes re. 11 meters. The RM-9807 fiasco is a case in point. The ITU agreement re. int'l communications below 30MHz would likely have shot down RM-9807 in any event, but perhaps RM-9807 might've set the stage for 2003.

So you see, this idea did not come about as a result of myself (or anybody else for that matter) wanting the league to "advance" 11 meter radio. 11 meter radio can handle that on it's own, just check out www.sugar delta.com or www.alfatango.org for proof of that. By using its "lobbying" power (what little's left) to adversely affect RM-9807, The ARRL involved itself in the affairs of a band for which it claims to have NO interest or concern. I did NOT make this up, Ed...these are the league's own words. No Ed, I think The ARRL just announced its candidacy all on its very own.

I'll also take the opportunity to address a common statement that I'm a freebander. I haven't engaged in "freebanding" in well over ten years now and I discourage everybody I talk with from doing it. Does that mean I have to lie about my past, absolutely NOT! I encourage those reading to learn from my mistakes, I took a foolish chance and "lucked out." Sorry if that bothers some of you, but those are the facts and I don't see it necessary to hide this from anyone.

If the wonderful world of amateur radio is "opened up" to some 11 meter operators as a result of this then so much the better. They'll be amazed at the breadth and scope of the hobby. I just don't feel that the titles of 11 meter operator and amateur radio operator need to be mutually exclusive. Thanks for your reply and 73,

Mark

That is how Mark starts his article. "Hello fellow 11 meter enthusiasts."

That is a "letter" to CB operators, not hams, and he addresses it as such. And as such, it belongs on a CB site, not a ham radio site. This is neither positive nor negative about CB radio, but it should remind us the two services are not the same, and efforts to combine them should not be tolerated by either group. We, as hams, should leave the CB frequencies alone, as well as their problems with illegal operation. That is their business, and is not in the slightest the interest of ham radio or ham radio organizations. Butt out. We have our own problems, ever increasing.

CB operators should not be on this site for the purpose of advancing or promoting CB radio, or subverting, or attempting to survert, the ARRL. I reiterate: Mark's posting is addressed to CBers. It belongs on a CB site. It would not be appreciated if we hams visited the CB sites and began attempting to damage their organizations by infiltrating them with ham radio memberships and votes. We should not tolerate similar activity.

This is not an attack on CB radio, on Mark, or on anyone who likes 11 meter operations. It is simply a reminder we are different ervices with different goals. Mark's posting is not directed at making CBers into hams. It is directed solely at ballot-stuffing of votes within the ARRL to force that organization to represent CB radio.

Most of us welcome those who are sincerely interested in amateur radio. What we do not - or should not - welcome are more of the "family radio" types of users in our hobby whose singular focus is on utility communications; that is the "bring home a loaf of bread" operations. These do nothing for amateur radio, do not promote it, do not advance it, except in sheer numbers. If sheer numbers was indeed the goal, we should be seeking blanket upgrades for all CB operators into ham radio without any testing whatsoever, as that would definitely increase our hobby's membership.

But we need to make the decisions concering what amateur radio is, and where we, as hams, want it to go in the future. There is a 'quantity versus quality' approach in place, but it need not expand to the point where anyone who can buy a radio at a flea market is automatically stamped "ham radio operator."

If that is indeed where ham radio is to head, it will certainly open many doors. But it will close others. One of those closed will be the respect, and therefore the good graces, of the FCC. The end result of that could be a monster we do not wish to contemplate.

Hi Ed,

You're the best. You pretty much outline the crux of this whole matter. Yes I did address this proposal to 11 meter enthusiast, because they are here too. You might disagree and that's fine, there's certainly nothing wrong with disagreement as long as it's kept civil. I'm an 11 meter enthusiast and I've visited many a ham forum to learn about antennas, technology, and amateur radio in general...why should I believe that I alone do/did/will continue to do this. This proposal is also on many 11 meter forums as well, and there are literally hundreds of them. The "sandbagging" 11m ops. are here Ed, believe it.

"We, as hams, should leave the CB frequencies alone, as well as their problems with illegal operation. That is their business, and is not in the slightest the interest of ham radio or ham radio organizations. Butt out. We have our own problems, ever increasing."

Bingo! I don't want 11 meter operators to join The ARRL so the ARRL can go to bat for us. I just want them to know that it is in their best political interest to no longer involve themselves in the LEGAL attempts of CB/11 meter interests to effect Part 95 rule changes. This can best be done via the ballot booth. Let's be frank, we...er, you really do have enough to deal with re. Part 97. You see, that's really not so bad now, is it?

"This is not an attack on CB radio, on Mark, or on anyone who likes 11 meter operations. It is simply a reminder we are different ervices with different goals. Mark's posting is not directed at making CBers into hams. It is directed solely at ballot-stuffing of votes within the ARRL to force that organization to represent CB radio."

Point taken Ed but let me ask you this. When The ARRL "involved" itself with RM-9807, what did YOU do as a league member to discourage it? If you DID do something; Thank you, but I fear that you're in the minority. If you did nothing, then how long should 11 meter interests wait and/or tolerate it before they should take some form of action on their own? Kind of puts in in a different perspective. Remember Ed, this is not an action, it's a reaction.

"Most of us welcome those who are sincerely interested in amateur radio. What we do not - or should not - welcome are more of the "family radio" types of users in our hobby whose singular focus is on utility communications; that is the "bring home a loaf of bread" operations. These do nothing for amateur radio, do not promote it, do not advance it, except in sheer numbers. If sheer numbers was indeed the goal, we should be seeking blanket upgrades for all CB operators into ham radio without any testing whatsoever, as that would definitely increase our hobby's membership."

I wholeheartedly agree with you and I don't think it's unreasonable to expect that a decent percentage of 11 meter operators will enjoy their new "privileges" and the associated learning that comes along with it. As for your other concerns; Ed, you really need to look closer to home and truly have the league itself to thank. They really did anounce their own candidacy. I suppose nobody ever thought that CBer's would/could actually effect change as constitiuents. Another thing Ed, we really aren't a disease, merely a "forced" constituency that merely wants a fair shake at attempting Part 95 proposals without interference or hindrance. I don't think we'll be ruining The ARRL anytime soon. (Besides, I think they're quite capable at that task all on their very own...meant in an affectionate way, I assure you.;-))

I agree 100%. Maybe it's time we both come up with a solution. Sure we're separate services but you know...an kind Elmer goes a lot farther than an angry ham calling someone a "chicken bander." Ed, we're really not as far off as you think, but I implore you to be a little more introspective on this. Thanks for the good meaningful repsonse. I prefer these, some of the others just wear me out at times. Take care and 73.

We both re-p"a"sted our comments, pretty much verbatim, on eHam. Bert contributed the following post. Ed and I continued to correspond via e-mail. very friendly and pleasant. He even put an 11 meter antenna link on his website for me. If passion for amateur radio were measured in drops of water, Ed would be an ocean. A great example for all to follow.

Hello xxxxx,

"most CBers do not visit ham radio sites to learn more about ham radio. They visit them to learn more about how to make ham radio easier for them to move into, or to learn how to modify ham rigs so they can operate illegally."

FYI, I've visited many an amateur radio website long before I became a licensed amateur. I don't break the rules, I'm courteous, I'm nobody's lid, and I certainly didn't sign up here or on QRZ to "learn more about how to make ham radio easier for them to move into, or to learn how to modify ham rigs so they can operate illegally." Much of what I've learned here and on QRZ helped me in my decision to become licensed and go beyond the 40 channels, doesn't mean I have to turn my back on 11 meters though. After all, my 11 meter experience sparked (pun intended) my interest in electronics and helped prep me for my FCC GROL.

I read Mark's reply to your posts on QRZ and quite frankly, I think he let you off the hook gracefully. You both had some good points but now I too am interested in the answer to his question. "When The ARRL "involved" itself with RM-9807, what did YOU do as a league member to discourage it?" Care to respond, xxxxx? It's a very valid and pertinent query given your statements.

Given that another poster on QRZ explained their pre-amateur ham-site surfing/posting history to you, I find it somewhat odd that you would repeat your mis-statement. You don't strike me as the type to make the same mistake twice.

Hello Mrmiik: I am not exactly sure which one the best one is, but for way better working results use a outside antenna (like a magnet mount antenna) with the hand held radio. Much less engine noise and it will hear and transmit farther.

Hello Packrati¿½: Yes the VHF and UHF (military) Aircraft Bands use Amplitude Modulation, AM.

I believe the AM was chosen over FM as the mode.

The reason I hear is why AM is used for the aircraft bands is so that a heterodyne can heard should two aircraft stations are transmitting at the same time, so that the tower radio operator can know this. I probably didn't explain this in the best use of words. But AM is still in use for the aircraft bands.

I also believe that SSB would be much better a mode for the aircraft band use. But remember aircraft communications are usually pretty strong and solid signals levels to each other, and works pretty darn good. With the exception of the aircraft flying over the earths horizon or curvature, then cutting off radio communications, but that would happen with any mode.

So it would be hard to convince the FAA, all the defence airline radio people that a different mode like SSB should be used. And I am most sure it won't be cheap. Besides if they did that we would half to modify or buy new scanners. Listen in on 123.45 AM for the VHF Aircraft Band, there's a lot of chit chat between planes and ground stations there, and its a kick to listen to.

39. REDNECK RULES OF ETIQUETTE

Subject: REDNECK RULES OF ETIQUETTE

GENERAL
1. Never take a beer to a job interview.
2. Always identify people in your yard before shooting at them
3. It's considered tacky to take a cooler to church.
4. If you have to vacuum the bed, it is time to change the sheets
5. Even if you're certain that you are included in the will, it is still rude to drive the U-Haul to the funeral home.

DINING OUT
1. When decanting wine from the box, make sure that you tilt the paper cup and pour slowly so as not to "bruise" the fruit of the vine.
2. If drinking directly from the bottle, always hold it with your hands.

ENTERTAINING IN YOUR HOME
1. A centerpiece for the table should never be anything prepared by a taxidermist.
2. Do not allow the dog to eat at the table, no matter how good his manners are.

PERSONAL HYGIENE
1. While ears need to be cleaned regularly, this is a job that should be done in private using one's OWN truck keys.
2. Even if you live alone, deodorant is not a waste of good money.
3. Use of proper toiletries can only delay bathing for a few days.
4. Dirt and grease under the fingernails is a social no-no, as they tend to detract from a woman's jewelry and alter the taste of finger foods.

DATING (Outside the Family)
1. Always offer to bait your date's hook, especially on the first date.
2. Be assertive. Let her know you're interested: "I've been wanting to go out with you since I read that stuff on the bathroom wall two years ago."
3. Establish with her parents what time she is expected back. Some will say 10:00 PM, others might say "Monday." If the latter is the answer, it is the man's responsibility to get her to school on time.

THEATER ETIQUETTE
1. Crying babies should be taken to the lobby and picked up immediately after the movie has ended.

2. Refrain from talking to characters on the screen. Tests have proven they can't hear you.

WEDDINGS
1. Livestock, usually, is a poor choice for a wedding gift.
2. Kissing the bride for more than 5 seconds may get you shot.
3. For the groom, at least, rent a tux. A leisure suit with a cummerbund and a clean bowling shirt can create a tacky appearance.
4. Though uncomfortable, say "yes" to socks and shoes for this special occasion.

DRIVING ETIQUETTE
1. Dim your headlights for approaching vehicles, even if the gun is loaded and the deer is in sight.
2. When approaching a four-way stop, the vehicle with the largest tires does not always have the right of way.
3. Never tow another car using panty hose and duct tape.
4. When sending your wife down the road with a gas can, it is impolite to ask her to bring back beer too.
5. Do not lay rubber while traveling in a funeral procession

TALKIN ON THE CB
1. Only use as much power as it takes to shoot skip, no need to let Ma in the Super Market hear ya shotin skip over the Markets PA System while she is ah shopin.
2. Never buy a Linear Amplifier from ah guy with green teeth.
3. Always mount the 102 inch whip antenna on top of the truck.
4. When at the CB Break, Shootout, Dance, and Drag Race always be polite and don't dance with others wives in a slow dance!
5. Don't take anybody's word on output power, bring your own Bird meter with the 1000 watt slug and dummy load.
6. Never try to shoot skip during a emergency on the radio, always be a gentleman and change channels.

Hello Jeff: Yes that was Steve and his girl friend, I think!

They do a little mountain topping and talk all over on the radio. I don't like the hate and discontent rotine, but enjoy talking all over.
Steve is using a old Mastodon 5/8 Prototype 5/8 ground plane antenna, that he takes mobiling with him.

We where up in the mountains last weekend talking all over on the bowl, and on the sideband channels. And had a blast. Camping, beer, and more beer, and a lot of laughs. A good time was had by all.

Did ya ever get your Highly modified, Penetrator 500 5/8 up yet. If you

Not on HF they don't. It is used in the VHF band because the capture effect of FM would present a hazard; they want to hear the weak distress signals. At the time it was standardized, 10 kHz spacing did not exist for FM. Life has moved on.

Hand held and CB radio are mutually exclusive terms. A hand held will only work a short distance, even with a mag mount antenna. They're pitiful. If you must have a hand held for some purpose, consider getting a pair of frs radios to share with your travel buddy. They will at least go close to two miles--better than a handheld cb, and the channel will be yours.

Judge Bans Radio Gear Ownership by Florida CBer (Aug 31, 2001) --
A Florida man who's already facing thousands of dollars in fines for unlicensed radio operation and for interfering with local hams was sentenced to probation August 30 in state court. William Flippo was found guilty of criminal mischief, a Class 1 misdemeanor, during a jury trial last spring. Palm Beach County Judge Charles Burton further ordered Flippo--a Jupiter CBer known as "Rabbit Ears"--to dispose of any radio equipment now in his possession.

No, but I did give it a guick pat on the rump as I walked by this morning.
Told it, "Good job, little fella!". :-)
By the way, there were a couple of folks out here in Ventura from your neck 'o the woods a few nights ago. I didn't write down their handles but it was a guy and a girl. They parked up on the local hill and threw out some hate and discontent. Some of the locals got a little upset. It was classic.
I asked them if they knew Jay in the Mojave and they said, Yeah, we sure do". They said you spend most of your time on the HAM bands but they knew who you were. Called you that "Antenna Dude". :-) I told them to tell you hello from Jeff in Ventura.

That's not quite correct. I agreed to switch to web-only so I could still access the archives in the event that something of relevance was actually discussed there. At first Billy agreed to that, but then, after I pissed him off again, he kicked me out completely. Of course that doesn't stop anyone from signing back up under another name--which I did--and Billy knows who it is. As soon as he makes the archives public I'll very likely unsubscribe the alias. He said he would do that, but he hasn't done it yet. Deep down he still wants me there, but he wants me to play by his rules.

Both of these orgs are active on "freeband", which does little for their credibility with legislators. As I mentioned some time earlier, albeit jokingly, CB suffers from a bad public image already. People associate its origins with truckers seeking to circumvent speed limits. More recently it has been associated with foul-mouthed illegal high power operators disturbing citizens to the point where local enforcent legislation was passed.

My observation is that 'freebanders', having acquired the taste for HF dx by stealing the privilege - merely wish to legitimize their theft - rather than advance to the amateur radio hobby.

Again, I realize that the RM petition did not specifically address the 'freeband', however I feel that because the use of 'extra channels' by the average cber has become so epidemic, any discussion of CB 'dx' includes the freeband as its unspoken subject.

I would have to say that your input added to the group. I can see where attitudes should be checked at the door in that little forum though. It does have it's drawbacks but has become more of what this newsgroup should be and used to be than the NG is now.

A felony conviction on your record will prevent you from voting in certain states but this is NOT the case with ALL states. I know AZ is one state that allows felons to vote.

Hello Scott: Let me disagree with you here.

The antennas do not half to be spaced 108 inches apart to work, yes maybe for the figure 8 pattern, but it will be hard to detect. With the broke up ground from the vehicle.

The coax has to a 1/4 wavelength, and don't you have to figure in the velecoitiy factory, 108 inches times .66 equals 5.94 feet, or rounded off to 6 feet?

However, both these groups boast a relatively affluent (read upper middle class) membership. This translates into "tax-paying constituents" to a politician, which does little for the FCC's budget allocation. The FCC itself is quite another matter, however. They'll heartily disapprove, no matter what the sentiment of the affected "constituency" is.

I suggest that you read the FCC enforcement logs. You will see that is not the case. High power users have been busted along with those operating out of band and shops selling amplifiers too. Your comments are just the sort of misinformation that does nothing but perpetuates the perception that the FCC is doing nothing about 11m enforcement. They are.

I failed to purchase a co-phase harness and would appreciate some tips on coax length/design. I'm putting two 6' Wilson silvertips on a truck bed. I've got plenty of coax & connectors, including a couple of 'T' connectors...which I'm wondering if I should cut the coax to about 6' off each antenna, then T them together and run another 6' length in to the radio. Any help would be appreciated.

You need 9 feet of 75 ohm coax going from the "T" to each antenna. From there any length of 50 ohm coax goes to the radio.

Except for special purposes like co-phase, coax length is immaterial.

If SWR changes when the coax length changes, something is wrong with your setup when running one antenna.

Go to www.google.com and do a search on "co-phase" for more tips, tricks and tuning hints from previous posts.

BTW, the two antennas need a quarter wave separation in order to achieve the figure eight radiation pattern from proper co-phasing. That's 108" at 27.185 MHz.

If you're doing it for looks, that's one thing. If you want performance, one single antenna is better.

You had to wonder when this "screen-name" was going to show up.

In any case, I've received the shipment of bumper sticker. Demand was such that because the first fifty went so quickly, I ordered the second batch right on the heels of the initial run. Well, they shipped together so I'll send out approximately seventy-five on Monday. Thanks for the response people, I really do appreciate it.

For those reading that ordered, I just want to advise you of a slight change. Although the .jpg file shows royal blue lettering, it is red. The graphics are the same though, very nice work.

I've been known to keyover a putz or three myself. Once in a while, I'm on 19, cause I'm on the highway, and chatting with a few drivers, and some PUTZ with start with foul language, racial BS, or just some unnecessary rudeness of some kind, and I'll reach over and flip the switch to high, from barefoot, no need to blast the driver 2500' away, and continue to talk to even more drivers about whatever it was we were talking about to begin with. Have a gooder, Prof. Time to go out and meet some friends. And, yes, I'll take a radio station with me tonight. I'll just take the TS-250 thats bolted to my PC-122 and use the forklift battery connector on it and have a good quick power supply for my box and radio. It talks skip just as well as my TRC-451/TS-667V combo. That combo is a power pig! Until I upgrade my 4x4 alternator, I'll stick with the two-banger in it. I'll listen for your one-banger. If conditions are there to the w-w-windy city, I'll put the spokes on ya. Don't know what channel I'll be on. Probably 17. See ya.

Hello Jerry: Let me throw this in here, as a addition piece of advice for the lightening protection.

While stationed in Panama a lot of antennas got hit with lightening and damaged the antenna installation and radio equipment. The fix was to have the coax come to a ground rod that had a lightening protection device on it like a Polyphase unit, that was grounded to the ground rod, and then the coax was then routed to the radio equipment. This saved many us from a lot of lightening strikes.

The method the the ARRL Handbook shows, having the ground rod or strip in the shack, is wrong in my opinion, it all belongs outside.

See Polyphase at:

I'm looking for something small and discrete for occasional base use and came across the Isotron antennas:

http://www.rayfield.net/isotron/

They look very strange but are not very big. Their claim is that they are comparable in performance to a 1/2 wave dipole which would be fine for me.

Anybody have any experience with these antennas or can suggest something else (maybe a FirestiK IBA-5) ?

Cheers,

Richard.

I think it is already being done! AT least, as far as radio regulations is concerned. It is clearly spelled out in FCC rules, both CB and ham. There is a standard that is used for this, and it applies especially to words that describe sexual or bodily functions. That is why I point to www.rainreport.com for examples of it already being done. It can, it has, and FCC can successfully cite people for obscenity.

Guys,

I offer this as a bit of a safety tip. Today, I heard a fellow say that, as a protection against lightning, he unscrews his coax and puts it into a glass jar! Unfortunately, this piece of bad advice continues to be handed down from one radio operator to another. Please! NEVER, ever do this! It would actually be better, given the choice of the two, to let the bolt hit the radio than to put your coax into a jar. If lightning hits your station, and your coax is in a jar, it could shatter into a thousand shards of lethal darts potentially killing people in the room, or causing serious injury. Most experienced ops know not to do this, but, unfortunately, some people are given this advice. Just thought I'd pass this along.

Hello Aaron: This is how 16 Million US Citizens view #11, and ah bunch more all ove rhte world:

RULE 11 - Linear Amplifiers, must match the radio for bitchen looks.
{A} You may attach the following items (power amplifiers) to your type-accepted or none type accepted CB transmitter in any way:
[1] External radio frequency [RF] power amplifiers, also called linear amplifiers, or linears;
or
[2] Any other devices which, when used with a radio transmitter as a signal source, are capable of amplifying the signal.
{B} There are no exceptions to this rule and use of a power amplifier will get you out there a hole lot better.
{C} The FCC will presume you have used a linear or other external [RF] power amplifier if-
[1] It is in your possession or on your premises; and your brand of beer can is on it.
[2] There is OTHER EVIDENCE that you have operated your CB station with more power than allowed by CB Rule 10. Smaoking coax, a no no.
{D} Paragraph C above in this section does apply if you hold a license in another radio service (HAM, etc.) which allows you to operate an external RF power amplifier.

In order to be convicted of a felony, you have to go to court.

When the FCC finds that you have broken one of its rules, you do not go to court. They just fine you.

DXing on CB is not a felony. DXing on CB IS a violation of FCC rules.

Shops selling cb amps is not part of operating on the CB bands - as is operation out of band. I was not talking about such operations.

Generally, when a CBer is busted, it is due to numerous local complaints.

I have used a Larson mag-mount NMO 27 MHz antenna for years with good service. You can safely run 300 watts AM/FM and 500 watts P.E.P SSB into it with NO problems so I'm told from an engineer from Larson in Vancouver, Canada when I asked about 5 years ago. I have run 125 watts SSB with NO problems and excellent V.S.W.R! If space is a concern then the Larson is a good choice, but I had better performance with the Wilson 5000 mag-mount...but it's a big antenna with a long whip. Hope this helps.

Hello Bill: Good call there.

Yes you will see Aaron miss quote many things. This is why his credibility is very low, and no one believes his postings. This goes hand in hand with going nut cake over such insignificant things as illegal CB use.

If one really believed so strongly in illegal CB is a threat to national defence and such, wouldn't you push Amateur radio, in a friendly way. Help people out to get on the ham bands, and such. Many times on the CB radio I invite the crowd to come up to 2 meters, for our chit chat and comrodarey, and tell them where the local ham club offers class's and testing location and times. That's how I do it. But as usually we will always have a whiner and complainer in our mists. Kind of entertaining at times.

So this illogical behaviour can only be interrupted as someone who wants to harass everyone one else, hate and discontent, or stirring the pot. So the intent of preaching legal CB use is lost in Aaron's and others lack of credibility, Ten-4.

Hello All: Thiought you may like this one too.

Damn, It's Good to Be a Man!

Your last name stays put.
The garage is all yours.
Wedding plans take care of themselves.
Chocolate is just another snack.
You can be president.
You can wear a white T-shirt to a water park.
Car mechanics tell you the truth.
You don't give a rat's ass if someone notices your new haircut.
The world is your urinal.
You never have to drive to another gas station because this one's just too icky.
Same work... more pay.
Wrinkles add character.
Wedding Dress $5000; Tux rental $100.
People never stare at your chest when you're talking to them.
The occasional well-rendered belch is practically expected.
New shoes don't cut, blister, or mangle your feet.
Your pals can be trusted never to trap you with: "So, notice anything different?"
One mood, ALL the damn time.
Phone conversations are over in 30 seconds flat.
You know stuff about tanks.
A five-day vacation requires only one suitcase.
You can open all your own jars.
Dry cleaners and hair stylists don't rob you blind.
You can leave the motel bed unmade.
You get extra credit for the slightest act of thoughtfulness.
If someone forgets to invite you to something, he or she can still be your friend.
Your underwear is $8.95 for a three-pack.
If you are 34 and single, nobody notices.
Everything on your face stays its original color.
You can quietly enjoy a car ride from the passenger's seat.
Three pairs of shoes are more than enough.
You don't have to clean your apartment if the maid is coming.
You can quietly watch a game with a buddy for hours without thinking: "He must be mad at me."
You don't mooch off other's desserts.
You can drop by to see a friend without having to bring a little gift.
You are not expected to know the names of more than five colors.
You don't have to stop and think of which way to turn a nut on a bolt.

You almost never have strap problems in public.
You are unable to see wrinkles in your clothes.
The same hairstyle lasts for years, maybe decades.
You don't have to shave below your neck.
Your belly usually hides your big hips.
One wallet and one pair of shoes, one color, all seasons.
You can "do" your nails with a pocketknife.
You have freedom of choice concerning growing a mustache.
You can do Christmas shopping for 25 relatives, on December 24th, in 45 minutes.

Of course as always, Jay in the Mojave

I used these orgs as an example of how CB radio has "evolved" into 11 meter "hobby" radio. No political overtones here.

This is sadly true. However, illegality of freeband operation notwithstanding, I'd say orgs like this are a much better image than the examples you've mentioned. The thing is that hardly anybody (neighbors, hams, local law enforcement, etc...) notices or much cares about (FCC?) these clean and realtively low powered stations. Don't hear too many "freeband" busts in middle class suburbia, do you? If you do manage to find a couple, they're usually associated with more egregious offenses. The "local enforcement bill" was the FCC's way out.

>My observation is that 'freebanders', having acquired the taste for HF

My observation is that they often do become hams...whether or not they completely abandon the "freeband."

No, I disagree. Those with the "extra channels" speak about it...often. With the FCC's lack of enforcement against "freebander," it's no longer an "unspoken subject." (Not to be confused with illegal amplifiers of incursions into amateur frequencies.) Take care and 73.

Hi Sideband,

Well, sorta kinda right. If the FCC issues a NAL, you can have your day in court...but you must "foot the bill." The onus is on you to prove your innocence before an "administrative" judge. While technically "letter of the law" correct, it (Along with the IRS.) is one of the saddest debacles of "due process" there is in the USA.

With the cost of true "prosecution" vs. the tight FCC budget, the FCC tries its best to "line all its ducks in a row" BEFORE they issue a NAL and then bank on the premise that nobody will put up a fight against such overwhelming evidence. This has backfired recently as Riley Hollingsworth recently has been taken to task by an "affluent" ham who decided to retain the services of a well known communications attorney and fight, tooth and nail, rather that submit to a license modification. Needless to say, Mr. H. is NOT pleased.

Here are the details on QRZ. As you can see, some don't take to kindly to the "questioning of Riley's authority." (Our friend even adds his two cents. ;-))

http://www.qrz.com/comments.pl?sid=01%2F07%2F31%2F1016224&cid=&pid=0&start at=&threshold=0&mode=flat&commentsort=0&op=Change

I happen to agree that the FCC should follow the same legislative process in making their "laws" and the same judiciary "process" in prosecuting those who violate them. The "executive" (enforcement) responsibilities?...those are all yours, Mr. Hollingsworth. It's called "checks and balances" and allot of blood was spilt to put it in place.

>DXing on CB is not a felony. DXing on CB IS a violation of FCC rules.

THIS...is entirely correct. If you ignore the FCC's authority, though...they escalate pretty swiftly. (...and with little common sense, a frightening combination.) Take care and 73.

By its very nature, getting an NAL is saying that you are guilty until you are proven innocent. Logic dictates that you would be very hard pressed to "prove a negative" and they (FCC) are very aware of this and use it as their basis to fine people. The IRS and KGB have also found this tactic to be very effective in most of their past prosecutions.

Double click on the clock in the taskbar. Then click the tab on top labeled "timezone" -0400 is my timezone, EDT. My TZ actually reads
-0500 GMT. That's 5 hours behind UTC minus another hour for DST. You should be GMT -0800 Pacific time.

Actually, you could. It is only illegal if you buy, sell, posess, or use the stuff in a country where these acts are an offence.
As an example, on British TV, they showed a documentary where the presenter went in a cafe where drugs were on offer. The drugs are totally illegal in this country, but it did not stop the program presenter from telling UK citizens where to get and use these drugs legally in another country.

It is common for people to exploit loopholes in the law. In the UK, CB shops openly sell RF amplifiers, Lincolns and Rangers. These can be legally used by amateurs, but few Amateurs will go into a CB shop or buy one of the cheap and nasty amps on sale there.

It is very difficult to stop the few offenders without punishing the legal users. Even if they had to show a licence, they could show someone elses, or buy the equipment second hand.
Amateurs must know when they are selling their old equipment to a CBer, but how many Hams would pay out good cash for an old FT901 or the likes?
Would you take their money, or would you rather "bin" the equipment than let a CBer get it?

Brainbuster

Please do not encourage my fellow UK citizens to break the law by Actually, in the UK, we can use the same frequencies as you, plus another 40. We can get CBs which combine these bands into one 80 channel CB. The latest gossip is that "packet" is about to be legalised on CB frequencies.

Yes, we do have a UK CB newsgroup, but the name of this group suggests that it is an international newsgroup.

Hello All: Thiought you may like this one too.

Damn, It's Good to Be a Man!

Your last name stays put.
The garage is all yours.
Wedding plans take care of themselves.
Chocolate is just another snack.
You can be president.
You can wear a white T-shirt to a water park.
Car mechanics tell you the truth.
You don't give a rat's ass if someone notices your new haircut.
The world is your urinal.
You never have to drive to another gas station because this one's just too icky.
Same work... more pay.
Wrinkles add character.
Wedding Dress $5000; Tux rental $100.
People never stare at your chest when you're talking to them.
The occasional well-rendered belch is practically expected.
New shoes don't cut, blister, or mangle your feet.
Your pals can be trusted never to trap you with: "So, notice anything different?"
One mood, ALL the damn time.
Phone conversations are over in 30 seconds flat.
You know stuff about tanks.
A five-day vacation requires only one suitcase.
You can open all your own jars.
Dry cleaners and hair stylists don't rob you blind.
You can leave the motel bed unmade.
You get extra credit for the slightest act of thoughtfulness.
If someone forgets to invite you to something, he or she can still be your friend.
Your underwear is $8.95 for a three-pack.
If you are 34 and single, nobody notices.
Everything on your face stays its original color.
You can quietly enjoy a car ride from the passenger's seat.
Three pairs of shoes are more than enough.
You don't have to clean your apartment if the maid is coming.
You can quietly watch a game with a buddy for hours without thinking:

"He must be mad at me."
You don't mooch off other's desserts.
You can drop by to see a friend without having to bring a little gift.
You are not expected to know the names of more than five colors.
You don't have to stop and think of which way to turn a nut on a bolt.
You almost never have strap problems in public.
You are unable to see wrinkles in your clothes.
The same hairstyle lasts for years, maybe decades.
You don't have to shave below your neck.
Your belly usually hides your big hips.
One wallet and one pair of shoes, one color, all seasons.
You can "do" your nails with a pocketknife.
You have freedom of choice concerning growing a mustache.
You can do Christmas shopping for 25 relatives, on December 24th, in 45 minutes.

Of course as always, Jay in the Mojave

You need to come up with a "Commie Rules of Etiquitte" list, but I guess that one can't be had. Commies are MURDERERS, Abortionists, and general THUGS. Don't buy ANY CB's that are made in RED BLOODY CHINA !!!!!!!!!! Dave!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

"Jay in the Mojave" <jay123a@qnet.com> wrote in message news:3B90E6DB.FFEFEC87@qnet.com...
Subject: REDNECK RULES OF ETIQUETTE

GENERAL
1. Never take a beer to a job interview.
2. Always identify people in your yard before shooting at them
3. It's considered tacky to take a cooler to church.
4. If you have to vacuum the bed, it is time to change the sheets
5. Even if you're certain that you are included in the will, it is still rude to drive the U-Haul to the funeral home.

DINING OUT
1. When decanting wine from the box, make sure that you tilt the paper cup and pour slowly so as not to "bruise" the fruit of the vine.
2. If drinking directly from the bottle, always hold it with your hands.

ENTERTAINING IN YOUR HOME
1. A centerpiece for the table should never be anything prepared by a taxidermist.
2. Do not allow the dog to eat at the table, no matter how good his manners are.

PERSONAL HYGIENE
1. While ears need to be cleaned regularly, this is a job that should be done in private using one's OWN truck keys.
2. Even if you live alone, deodorant is not a waste of good money.
3. Use of proper toiletries can only delay bathing for a few days.
4. Dirt and grease under the fingernails is a social no-no, as they tend to detract from a woman's jewelry and alter the taste of finger foods.

DATING (Outside the Family)
1. Always offer to bait your date's hook, especially on the first date.
2. Be assertive. Let her know you're interested: "I've been wanting to go out with you since I read that stuff on the bathroom wall two years ago."
3. Establish with her parents what time she is expected back. Some will say 10:00 PM, others might say "Monday." If the latter is the answer, it is the man's responsibility to get her to school on time.

THEATER ETIQUETTE
1. Crying babies should be taken to the lobby and picked up immediately after the movie has ended.
2. Refrain from talking to characters on the screen. Tests have proven they can't hear you.

WEDDINGS
1. Livestock, usually, is a poor choice for a wedding gift.
2. Kissing the bride for more than 5 seconds may get you shot.
3. For the groom, at least, rent a tux. A leisure suit with a cummerbund and a clean bowling shirt can create a tacky appearance.
4. Though uncomfortable, say "yes" to socks and shoes for this special occasion.

DRIVING ETIQUETTE
1. Dim your headlights for approaching vehicles, even if the gun is loaded and the deer is in sight.
2. When approaching a four-way stop, the vehicle with the largest tires does not always have the right of way.
3. Never tow another car using panty hose and duct tape.
4. When sending your wife down the road with a gas can, it is impolite to ask her to bring back beer too.
5. Do not lay rubber while traveling in a funeral procession

TALKIN ON THE CB
1. Only use as much power as it takes to shoot skip, no need to let Ma in the Super Market hear ya shotin skip over the Markets PA System while she is ah shopin.
2. Never buy a Linear Amplifier from ah guy with green teeth.
3. Always mount the 102 inch whip antenna on top of the truck.
4. When at the CB Break, Shootout, Dance, and Drag Race always be polite and don't dance with others wives in a slow dance!
5. Don't take anybody's word on output power, bring your own Bird meter with the 1000 watt slug and dummy load.
6. Never try to shoot skip during a emergency on the radio, always be a gentleman and change channels.

The antenna for the CB Band, I didn't comprehend how it was built.

But if one fact that has been taught to me is the the guy who says he knows how the antenna works is lying. I get a charge everytime I hear a guy say Oh that antenna will load up fine?!?!?!!?

"Load up fine" does that mean it will transfer the energy to a useful pattern, or ya can load it on a truck fine?

BTW: .....
I would think that a 1/2 wavelength dipole antenna would work as well.

No, it didn't upset me. But I did find it quite amusing.
As my original message was no more than 6Kb, and you have sent much larger messages, I think you just sipped the parts that you couldn't reply to, or didn't like.

My original post was not about today, but then you know that.
If you have now stopped sending these multiple copies, then that is all I was suggesting.

> What is so God-awful about > FCC rules that it throws you into a tizzy?

I made it clear that this was about repeating a 22Kb post, not about the actual content. I do not see why you have a problem understanding that.

I never got into any "tizzy", but then I have no reason to as the FCC rules don't apply to me. I can DX where I want, and I can use frequencies in what you call the "freeband".

But you certainly seem to get into a tizzy over people speaking their mind, or quoting the parts of the FAQ that do not suit you.

> >Once is helpful, 4 or more times a day is being a pain in the

> Do you see them posted today? No.

You still seem to have a problem understanding the concept of time, and relating back to when this debate started.

> But give me a good enough reason to post them again and I will.

What do you see as a good reason for anoying the users of this group?

> At least 35 times in a period of 5 days a number of poor,

How many of these were the same text reposted by the same person?
And how many of them were 22Kb long?

> >Because they do not care what the law says. No matter how many > >times you tell them the law, you will not make them stop.
> So that makes them right?

No, it makes your efforts pointless. And your tactics could turn even more legal users against you and the other pro-legal CBers.
You are giving the term "pro-legal" a bad name.

> >As I said, once is helpful. If a person already knows the law, > >then repeating yourself will achieve nothing.
> How do I know they know the law?

Because you have already told them many times.
Because it is in the FAQ.
Because they may break the law, but they are not brainless.

I can see that this does not prove that you are smart enough to realise that they already know it, but I feel quite confident that you are.

I have seen nothing that suggests that they are less human than you.
Can you point me towards a medical book which can prove that someone who breaks a law is no longer a human?

I said DOWNLOAD, not open.
Whether I open it or not, it has still been downloaded.
And it is still clogging news servers and hard drives around the

> maybe you should start a UK cb newsgroup yourself.

There is already one, which I use. But I still like to use "rec.radio.cb" as there are many good people on here.
The name, and faq both suggest that it is an international newsgroup. If you would like to exclude all non-US CBers, then maybe you should start another newsgroup - possibly "usa.radio.cb"

Aaron, am I understanding you correct, is this what you are trying to say?

The US CB dx law does not need to be changed because nobody cares if that law is broken.
You can break this law at will, because nobody will object, and you will not get punished.

I really would like to know your views on this particular rule, and those that break it... honestly.

I would also suggest that you contact Phil Kane (K2ASP) in "rec.radio.amateur.policy". Phil worked for the FCC for a number of years and did his share of CB busts. If anybody has a feel for who gets busted for what and when, he does.

Hello Dave or Debby:

For your information, I won't buy anything that says "made in China" after they tried to force land our P3 air plane, those bastards are off my buying list.

One of the heavy equipment operators broke the track off one of the large Caterpillar Bulldozers, the desert wrinkled forman called the guy everything in the book, and then said he had to be a no good communist SOB, who's family tree must be infested with K9's, and on and on. Especially after the forman told him not to try the manoeuvre, and the driver did. TILT!!! That got em a week off without pay!

The forman a small skinny wirery man, even yelled at me for allowing the incident to happen, because I am a supervisor. I replied in a firm but respectful tone, That if he wanted me to watch out for the heavy equipment, then he needed to send me to the heavy equipment operators school, and tell me of such things, because my crystal ball is out for calibration. And only a communist SOB would yell at me for that, when I wasn't told!

Oh yeah I told him, and the hole crew was in ears shoot. Your suppose to praise in public and chew ass behind closed doors, is the common sense rule.

So this all got up to the old man, he called us both in, the forman and me. We got our ass's chewed out for yelling at each other in front of the crew. And the track being broken. And then the old man called us both communist SOB's and said anymore public display of unprofessional conduct will find us in the unemployment line, with all the other communist SOB's. The forman didn't leave it along. He replied that the old man himself was a college educated communist SOB, and for him to get off his communist ass and come out to the field sites and watch things for himself. After tempers cooled down all us communist SOB's went back to work, and had a good laugh.

Now I got to go to heavy equipment operating school, and not back east for several months, parked in some bitchen Hotel, but here locally, with the communist SOB foreman, and and now the old man will be looking around over our shoulders. Them darn Commies!

Yes maybe we need to write a list of what communist do!

Thats ok maybe I can get one of the antennas on a large crane and take a picture of it?

Bill Gates has an option for a littl more money. He puts out a new version of Winblows.

Anyway, just think of the power you would have if you could set a laser printer on stun. You could have zapped the foreman before he bitched at you!

A handheld may work somewhat if you put a magmount on the roof of the vehicle. Forget it using just the whip antenna - too short and inefficient at 27 MHz. Same goes for the ground if you aren't using an external antenna. I'll throw this out for thought though - if you want a handheld AND you want some range, give some thought into getting a codeless tech amateur license. I've been happy with 440 FM - and enjoyed a good 50 mile consistant 24/7 coverage including being able to access the telephone from the HT - well, until a couple of days ago. I purchased a big gain whip for the thing. I usually use the standard ducky (small), but the results I have had with the big whip (over 36 inches in length) are phenominal. I only have 11 channels programmed at this time (I've got to search for more repeaters) and can use 10 of them sitting in my living room. Some of these repeaters are 40 miles away. From work (4 miles away), I can use all 11. The 11th happens to be the Oswego repeater. That happens to be over 100 miles away. I can open it on low power (although I use high power to ensure a decent signal into that repeater). I've chatted with a couple of different stations through that repeater. I assure you, using just a handheld I've got coverage probably 100 miles and more in radius from my area in Rochester, NY. That repeater in Oswego will certainly reach much farther out than that - especially considering it is likely over 100 miles away from me to begin with. Heck, I've talked to Buffalo using just a local repeater here in Rochester (50 miles or so). Just a though since it is likely anyone wanting the license could likely be ready to pass it in a week or so (tops).

The RIS do not bother unless there are complaints of inteference. They have not got the resources to chase around looking for unreported offences.

You want to know how little they care about illegal CB and inteference ?
If you get inteference in the UK:

1. First you must contact an electrical dealer to see if they can sort it out (at your cost).
2. You must fill in a form, and get the electrical dealer to stamp it as proof that they have tried to cure the problem.
3. You must PAY the investigation service to investigate your inteference.
4. They will NOT deal with inteference to Audio equipment which is not a receiver, MW (AM) radio reception, baby alarms, Satalite TV, cable TV, car radio systems, computers, or telephone equipment.

What I hear is that young people want to get paid without working. Kinda like Mod. kit installers and Moscow's women sweeping the streets. But someone or something has changed the attitude on work in the last Generation. Show the commies that you won't take off on their lazy day. WORK tomorrow! You'll be glad you did! Mr. Vanilla Milk:
Don't get FRS. Get a Uniden Pro-510. This is a CB promoting group. You liberal Hambos push everything BUT CB on this group and we CB people are getting pretty SICK of it! The thing is, IF you're not going to walk around with it, then get a 510 with a 3' magnet mount, at least. If you have to walk around with it (a handhld), then the 3' magnet mount or longer American Made antenna will make a BIG difference in the car. Forget what the liberals say. They are most always wrong anyway, when it comes to CB or any other realm!

Hand held and CB radio are mutually exclusive terms. A hand held will only work a short distance, even with a mag mount antenna. They're pitiful. If you must have a hand held for some purpose, consider getting a pair of frs radios to share with your travel buddy. They will at least go close to two miles--better than a handheld cb, and the channel will be yours.

One of the easiest ways to tell: Where is the mike jack? If it's not on the side of the unit, the radio is too new, and not the quality is should be, could be, or was... Don't buy it if the jack is anywhere but the side of the radio...

I can think of three version of the radio at the moment... The original, with the mike jack on the side. Then they moved the mike jack to the front... Version #2. Then they added Sound Trasher to the unit, with the mike jack still on the front.. Version #3. There may have been others, but those are the three I am aware of currently...

Definitely the older Cobra 148GTL's before '97(?) before Uniden stopped making PCB's for Cobra. Awesome audio and reception. Although Uniden's GrantXL's were top choice also. Ran one for the first time in '91 and never looked back. During that time, Cobra was the most sought after units, Uniden made the same radios at a cheaper price. If you run across any of the Cobra's or Uniden's with the mikes mounted to the side of the radio and it has Phillippines as the manufacturer location, it's a definite find. I have another GrantXL (new in box) and never gonna touch it. It'll stay in the box until the world ends.

I think it is already being done! AT least, as far as radio regulations is concerned. It is clearly spelled out in FCC rules, both CB and ham. There is a standard that is used for this, and it applies especially to words that describe sexual or bodily functions. That is why I point to www.rainreport.com for examples of it already being done. It can, it has, and FCC can successfully cite people for obscenity.

FRS is covered under Part 95. It is one of three unlicensed services

Don't mind Dave. If he doesn't understand something or disagrees with you, you must be a liberal communist. Forget the fact that the guy needed something hand held for short distances. I don't know about you, but I always enjoy walking around with a 2 pound cb with a 5 foot antenna swinging back and forth. Yes, that's the ticket. Those FRS radios always get lost in my shirt pocket anyway.

well im about to trade my x-force 612 for a super lazer 500. my under standing is that the 500 (eight elements on a 40' boom) has a power multiplication factor of 60 times.lets see....60x 12 watts side band= 780 watts of directed power.
or a relative gain of 18db. so whats the difference? i either key my amp into a small antenna....and blow somebodies station clean off the map......or i key up the lazer 500,without the amp......and blow somebodies station clean off the map! so whats next anti key clowns? the fcc gonna go after large arrays???
guess so......ok owners of large beams....better get a crank up tower,so that when the fcc is in town.....you can drop that "evil" antenna into the back yard where it cant be seen!!!! ha elpasogunslinger

I respectfully disagree. I use a handheld CB on my motorcycle. My range is easily 2-3 miles. My last trip I was able to hear bear reports from 5 miles away. I do have an 4ft firestik antenna to run it through which Im sure helps.

I tested an FRS radio. The range was about 3 blocks. I was only using the rubber duck antenna on the FRS so I guess it is a little unfair to compare. The problem is that most FRS radios that I have seen dont allow you to attach a better antenna. The rubber duck does not come off.

Regards,

john

Before everyone and the uncle had amps concentration was always on antennas and the gain acheived. It's ludicrious to equate "legal" antennnas to "illeagal" amps. Beams won't produce spurious harmonics like amps nor wipe entire areas with uneccessay bleedover. I talked all over the world running stock power feeding a PDL Quad II mounted at legal height and was guaranteed 360% 40 mile local coverage area not breaking a single law nor ruining the rest of the spectrum for local operators.

myst..dirty signal in...dirty signal out...amps dont necessarily creat the "dirty signal" but i see the arrow hit the intended mark...agian i say...whats the difference,if the radio is clean,and the signal is clean....whats the difference,they are both extremely "powerfull" signals.whats the difference?????

I have a Johnson Messenger 250 Base that is need of the meter.
Anyone got one laying around that is in working order, they would be willing to part with?

I know you could go to the next CB Break and ask all the CB'ers this.

Please post your results.

One advantage of the big antenna is that the power is directed. Running huge power into a dipole will likely expose you to a lot more RF. High power is particularly bad on the eyes and the family jewels. You're far better off with a beam up on a tower rather than putting all the money into a big amp and running it into a ground mounted vertical or dipole 20 feet off the ground!

Hello Kenneth: Yes the beams are in a world to them selves. Meaning you will appreciate the beams function Vrs the amp.

I use to have a Moonraker 4 element beam antenna. No special modifications where used, just stock out of the box, with the antenna constructed dead nuts on per the assembly instruction dimensions. After a chat with the one of the design engineers, modifications where thrown out. And after running the Moonraker 4 on Eznec 3.0 (a antenna molding program, that shows where the energy goes) the Moonraker showed to be a great beam antenna.

The forward gain was advertised as 14.1 dB gain. But as usually CB Bull Shit, the dB gain figure was not referenced to anything, meaning the gain figure was pie in the sky, or just bull shit. More db gain numbers to impress all the CB'ers. Advertisement hype, created the dB gain figure in the advertisement group, not the engineering department.

I measured the antenna to have approx. 9 to 10 dBd gain as referenced to a dipole antenna. The point of all this is that the advertised dB gain figure was dead wrong as it wasn't referenced to anything, but this didn't mean the antenna would not perform well.

The neat-Oh thing about a beam antenna is that it looks with blinders on allowing you to hear more stations in its forward direction than with a regular omni directional antenna. I talked with stations that the locals said I was goost talking. After having a few over for coffee and a test run on the antenna they believed the antennas performance.

Also the beam antenna has what is called a side null. Meaning that some where between 90 and 110 degree's from the forward direction, there is a sharp and deep null in the antennas pattern. This null allows you to DF (direction find) very accuracy, once you get a feel for the side null. Because the side null can be -40dB and more, as compared to the forward direction of the antenna, you can swing the beam around and drop off the goof balls you don't want to hear.

The back side of the beam will offer in the ballpark of -20 to -30 dB as compared to the forward direction of the beam. This also a neat thing, allowing to point the back side towards the skip and hear the locals, if there in a opposite direction.

You are correct adding 1/4 wave to the front in coax is basically making a phased array . Having a frontal lobe gain which in a cardiod pattern is defantly desired.
Little hint though the magic number is not 9 feet..It is smaller than 9 feet.

Yep he is indeed a crook. Been there and seen his home. Hides inside the house and peeks out the curtains at you. Trashy run down house and yard. But when you talk to him on the phone or internet the first time he claims to have a nice shop and know all about repairing and building the D&A amps. Then you send him your stuff and he stops replying and answering your calls. Local police have been notified about him but they do nothing. Kiss your equipment good by. This guy is old. Plays on a Maco 5/8ths on a tripod mount on his roof. Doesn't talk much locally as everyone is mad at him locally. Mostly listens just incase a pissed off cb'er is coming after him and makes their self known on the cb as they are on their way to his place. This gives him time to turn out the lights and close the drapes. He still isn't smart enough not to peek out and move the curtains around while doing so while you beat on his un answered door. Has a basement full of D&A equipment that he has stolen off the internet. He uses this equipment to keep his own amps running and sells them from time to time when he manages to actually get one working long enough to show someone it works. he has been doing this for at least the last 3 years if not alot longer. Looks like he will continue. Every few months someone asks about him on the NG and complains that their stuff got stolen. Your not the first and won't be the last. He has no shop of any kind. He even got H&Y to refer people to him for repairs, they stopped doing that when their customers started calling and asking where their equipment went. Yep Sean Matney is a real piece of work.....

That's a pretty cool site, Joshua. We used www.makestickers.com and the quality of their finished product is outstanding. If we end up needing more, perhaps we'll try the URL you've supplied.

As a side note, anybody can design and purchase a small quantity of bumper stickers on their own. I'm very pleased at the response and, as a result, am just about out of stock. These websites enable you to custom design your own bumper stickers with your own graphics. You can order a single bumpersticker with a disounted price for as few as 3 to 5.

Nothing would please me more than to see a pro-11-meter bumper sticker on the road that we DIDN'T design. BTW, two of these stickers headed south this weekend on 95. One to Virginia and the other to Florida so they're "on the road" already. Thanks again.

Hello Kenneth: Here's one neat thing to know about stacking beam antennas.

When the beams are feed in phase (phase a fancy word for time, of course) you will receive a 3 dB increase in field strength, in the forward direction, as compared to a single beam antenna, making the pattern narrower. Old stuff everyone knows, right!

Had a friend feed the stacked beam antennas 180 degree's out of phase from each other. This is done by, instead of having equal lengths of coax running to the power splitter from the antennas, to a unequal length of coax, with one at 1/2 wavelength more coax length than the other. This feeds the beams at 180 degree's out of phase or time.

The result is, the forward gain is the same as single beam antenna, but the energy pattern of the forward direction, has a very sharp and deep null, dead center of the forward pattern, allowing for very accurate Direction Finding, capability..... Or the ability to point the beam at two stations in close proximity of a azimuth direction, allowing one station to be nulled out, or attenuated down into the noise, while easily chatting with the other station, or other stations in and around the azimuth compass directions, but not in the sharp and deep null of the forward direction.

This will drive em nuts.

So if a set coax relays can be found some where for cheap, you can have a lot of fun with this experimenting around.

The Annunaki are supposed to be the people who seeded this planet with the early civilizations. They are before the Sumerians. Before Gilgamesh!!
I believe Nannar Sin was one of them. Also Enlil and Enki. They were considered gods by the Sumerians and the earliest of civilizations. That is basically all
I know although I that you can find out more by reading old texts of the Sumerians or research Zecharia Sitchin on the net. He has written about 10 or

Many of you are too young to remember the good old days of the cold war and the era of Joseph McCarthy, but at the time, many people were being accused of being a communist or a spy for the Soviets. As it turned out, some the people pleading innocent the loudest were the most guilty. Where am I going with this? Dave!!! is frequently accusing others of being communists. A thorough analysis of his posts would indicate that his frequent posts only on Sunday, his rantings about those with whom he disagrees, and his often aimless thoughts are obviously geared at supporting the first plank of the communist manifesto, and in so doing also supports the third and fifth planks. Since he is complaining that many of us are supporting the sixth plank, that violates the internal memo from Lenin in 1921 suggesting that this very presumption would violate the second plank. It is apparent that Dave!!! is in all probability a communist. Should he choose to argue against this, we will judge his level of guilt by the degree of his complaint

Just want to wish everyone a safe and happy holiday. Alot of traffic on 38 LSB, I tried to reach out and wave a hand but apparently my mud duck home base isn't getting the job done. Now I am off to work the radio at our REACT holiday weekend Safety Break. I'll be there until 6 pm EST, I'll be switching from 38 LSB, to 13 AM, 2 AM (our teams operating channel) so if you do manage to hear a 218 from N.W. Ohio that would be me.

73's to you and yours from me and mine, God Bless.

P.S. I will also be monitoring channel 9 on a secondary radio. this way I can combine pleasure with my responsibilities.
I am putting some of the pictures I took during my time with the disaster relief on the chapters web page if anyone cares to look.

Don't cry--just LAUGH ! Actually it isn't funny--Sodomites ARE very disgusting SICK people because of what they do. God HATES them and wants them to change their evil VILE sick ways. This applies to Hambozos Rambos as well as CB'ers. What I've heard said is in certain areas on the CB, if people are always talking about FAGS, then they must be near by. (or dey is one)!

I had much fun with a similar device years ago. You can waterproof them by sealing in epoxy as well. A couple of 9 volt batteries in parallel will power them for weeks.

Forgiving only should be done IF one REPENTS (changes, turns) from his SIN and feels sorry for it. No repentance means NO forgiveness! If your "church " teaches otherwise, it is a false harlot "church!"

I'd have to think a bit on what you ask. I guess the MAN today is someone who works hard under an oppressive Socialistic / Communistic Egyptian slave system like OURS, that gets beat up by everyone under the sun, including commie N8, and keeps on SHINE-ing ! He don't put MOD KITS in, doesn't LIE, and does the best job possible with all his might! He be da MAN ! He fears GOD an keeps HIS commandments (not part 95). He gets his reward sometimes now, and after he dies. The media has FEMINIZED boyz today so they can't be DA MAN !!!!!!!!!!!!!!

Wow... From someone who seems to abhor illegal activity, too...

Didn't you know, Auntie, that supporting illegal activity is unethical.
Your statement below supports the THEFT of money and goods from American Citizens, and is, therefore, by your own reckoning, illegal in nature.

Why don't you get your story straight?

The difference being with the beam antenna you are zapping other stations only over a few degrees of azimuth where as with an amplifier run in to an omnidirectional antenna you zap stations for a few 360 degrees around you. Second the high gain on transmit with the beam also works for your receiver too, so you can hear very weak signal coming from far greater distances. That is something you don't get when using an amplifier.

It is against FCC rules to intentionally interfere with another radio station. But that's neither here nor there...

My point wasn't to cite FCC rules.. my point was to prove the hypocrisy of this particular individual...

OK, I'll "try" this one. In a radio signal, there are 3 parts, the center carrier, an upper and lower "sideband". Think of it this way, your car occupies a certain amount of space on the road, and a radio signal occupies a certain amount of space, called "bandwidth". The radio uses up quite a bit of energy to produce this "carrier" on which your voice "rides". What is actually done with SSB, in layman's terms, is that the carrier is removed, and all the power produced is used to project your voice. Now, we said the signal has 3 parts: a center carrier, and 2 "sidebands" occupying "space" on either side of the carrier. By doing away with, or deeply suppressing, this carrier we can do several things: 1) we increase our Peak Envelope Power (PEP) for more punch.
2) we reduce the amount of spectrum needed for this signal, which, 3) decreases the amount of interference to other stations (if the operators are responsible and trained), and, 4) we "increase" the number of "channels" available for use--even though our center frequency is the same. We are just using the lower "half" of the sidebands normally produced with an AM signal, or the upper half as the case may be. You would announce which sideband on CB, I suppose, to let people know which sideband to switch to to call you.

Hey chocolate jay, this stuff is ILLEGAL. -Aaron-

FCC rule 2.815(b): After APR 27, 1978, no person shall manufacture, sell or lease, offer for sale or lease (including advertising for sale or lease), or import, ship, or distribute for the purpose of selling or leasing or offering for sale or lease, any external radio frequency amplifier or amplifier kit capable of operation on any frequency or frequencies between 24 and 35 MHz.

Uh, chocolate jay, this stuff is ILLEGAL. -Aaron-

FCC rule 2.815(b): After APR 27, 1978, no person shall manufacture, sell or lease, offer for sale or lease (including advertising for sale or lease), or import, ship, or distribute for the purpose of selling or leasing or offering for sale or lease, any external radio frequency amplifier or amplifier kit capable of operation on any frequency or frequencies between 24 and 35 MHz.

In a May 13 Public Notice, the FCC points out that it's a violation of FCC regulations to import or market a transmitter designed or intended to operate outside the amateur bands unless the equipment has been issued a grant of equipment authorization for the radio services it's capable of operating. The FCC says it wanted to clarify its rules on equipment that's "intended to operate in various radio services in the high frequency radio spectrum, including '10-meter' Amateur Radio Service (ARS) equipment." The notice--directed to "manufacturers, importers, vendors and users of these transceivers"--emphasizes that transmitters intended for use by FCC-authorized radio services except the Amateur Radio Service must be type-accepted.

Amps are illegal. Beam antennas are not. -Aaron-

RULE 11 - Linear Amplifiers
{A} You may not attach the following items (power amplifiers) to your type-accepted CB transmitter in any way:
[1] External radio frequency [RF] power amplifiers, also called linear amplifiers, or linears;
or
[2] Any other devices which, when used with a radio transmitter as a signal source, are capable of amplifying the signal.
{B} There are no exceptions to this rule and use of a power amplifier voids your authority to operate the station.
{C} The FCC will presume you have used a linear or other external [RF] power amplifier if-
[1] It is in your possession or on your premises; and [2] There is OTHER EVIDENCE that you have operated your CB station with more power than allowed by CB Rule 10.
{D} Paragraph C above in this section does not apply if you hold a license in another radio service (HAM, etc.) which allows you to operate an external RF power amplifier.

The difference being with the beam antenna you are zapping other stations only over a few degrees of azimuth where as with an amplifier run in to an omnidirectional antenna you zap stations for a few 360 degrees around you. Second the high gain on transmit with the beam also works for your receiver too, so you can hear very weak signal coming from far greater distances. That is something you don't get when using an amplifier.

Kenneth,

Now, I am sure we both know that the target market for galaxy, rci, ranger, and connex is NOT 10 meter hams. The truth is, those radios are MARKETED as 10 meter radios in order to get by the FCC and Customs.
Their market segment among amateurs is quite small. How they get in being able to be so easily modified, I don't know. Radio Shack made their HTX10 almost bullet-proof, and people almost went nuts trying to find a simple way to mod it. If these aforementioned rigs WERE ham radios, why don't they do the same as Radio Shack and make 'em unmodify-able? Besides, the majority of hams use multi-band all-mode HF rigs.

Um, the so-called "freeband": Not to be ugly, but the interference caused by unlicensed stations is caused by their BEING there. The amps, wide splatter only exacerbates it. The noisy radios, splatter, and muffled signals are caused, not so much by their amps, but by the fact that they think that MORE , MORE, MORE wattage--even just 1 watt--, MORE, MORE, MORE "modge" is better. Turn everything over to the right, turn "them" screws inside--THAT'S what makes 'em hard to understand. That's what causes interference, or makes it worse. After all, they aren't supposed to be there to start with, right?
When folks start monkeying around inside their radios without the requisite training, what are you gonna get? SPLATTER, MUFFLE, NOISE! It amazes me, the number of people that go out to Walmart, buy a CB, and INSTANTLY become radio "technicians" THAT'S where the trouble is!

The power regulations on 10 meters restrict technicians (I think it's still that way) to 200 watts PEP SSB on the portion between 28.300 and 28.500. Likewise, all OTHER amateurs are subject to the same restriction in that part of the band. Below 28.2(??) is 1500 W. PEP and above 28.500 is 1500 W. PEP. I know very few people that even run that kind of power because it isn't necessary. Contrary to popular belief, it isn't even WORTH running that kind of power most of the time. Right now, both my rigs (base and mobile) are 100 watt Icoms and I talk all over the world with them just like they are.

Dangerous noise? "Most" hams, as well as law-respectful, people-respectful CBers don't creat "dangerous noise." After all, in your post, didn't you just say that Amateur equipment was "fcc certified, filtered, and clean"? There IS a difference in much of the CB equipment that's being built in "secret" locations and the factory-built Kenwoods, Icoms, Alphas, Collins, and Yaesus (amps). They don't have to "hide" and willingly submit to inspection by the authorities.

Theirs also don't operate on 10 meters right out of the box....that's a legal stipulation. A licensed amateur can mod it himself for 10 meters, OR the factory/dealer will do it with PROOF of license from the ham. They CANNOT be sold 10 meter capable. You can thank also the illegal 11 meter ops for that stipulation in the law.

Anti-keyclowns: While I don't approve of illegal operations, it ain't up to me to decide what someone else does. I also don't approve of the anti-keyclowns posting personal insults and getting into arguments on the board. I only post what I know to be the truth and I don't make it a personal vendetta. I WILL say this, however. It has become SO easy to obtain, at least, the technician ticket, I can't see why those the antis keep arguing with don't just get their ham tickets. It really DOES open up a whole new world of radio--even an on-going education in radio and electronics. While you see "geeks" in ham radio, you see 'em in CB, too. The feller that's got those big buck teeth, kinda unrefined, and maybe not so bright. The hams aren't ANY different. You can pick out a few of the ham "geeks", I can pick out the CB "geeks", and neither of these are truly representative of their respective hobbys! They're just PEOPLE that come from all walks of life. IF you take the time to pick out the areas in ham radio that interest you the most (phone, CW, packet, RTTY, EME, antennas, building projects, and others), you will quickly find that "niche" that fits you, and suddenly, it seems that a whole new area of interest is presented to you. Like DX? Get the General ticket, and DX on HF all over the world. Sure, you can do that on "freeband", BUT, it is getting more risky to do that, and you can do it legally on 40, 20, 15, 10 meters without worrying about that! Run into somebody you don't like? Just move to another frequency or band--there's enough room for the freaks, geeks, AND normal people! Just find the normal ones and do like you would on CB. IF you are honest, I betcha there are some CBers you don't like, either! I will admit there are a few hams I don't like, and I just avoid them. It ain't because they happen to be hams, it's just that they were aholes BEFORE they became hams, and getting a license didn't change 'em. IF they were avid golfers instead of being hams, they STILL would be aholes! Would that make golf a terrible hobby just because a few horses butts happened to be golfers? I'll leave it to you to see where I am coming from..

1. I am not selling them

2. As noted, it is a legal piece of test equipment. Next you are gonna say a signal generator is illegal. 15 milliwatts and a 1ft antenna is well within the frame of Part 15, FCC rules. You could sell a 100MW CB walkie talkie and it would also be legal.

3. Hypocrisy? Hardly. Capitalism? CERTAINLY! This unit comforms 100%

Typical 'con man' behavior. You try to con people into believing that illegality is actually legal. If that doesn't work, you try to con people into believing that anyone who opposes your criminality is inconsequential.

Train you are stupid as hell. Does the IRS need to take you to court to enforce a tax related penalty? Does the EPA have to? NOPE. FCC is on the same level and you know it. All you do is try to jabber enough that people will be confused. I hope you try that on the FCC when they are at your door. Then we will all have a good laugh.

Hello Aaron: Boy more whining and complaining, and talk about con man replies.

Its neat to see ya squirm after painted yourself into a corner. And I am a bit disappointed in your reply again, no substance.

My reply had good positive advice to the illegal CB problem, but you just resort to whining and complaining, again a real pity. I have seen this type of approach in court, again and again, the jury or judge can easily see thru it. Why not just admit you really couldn't care less about illegal CB activities, and are just doing all this Anti stuff to stir the pot? You can still recite rules and such, just do it honestly.

Maybe you can help Doug with his jammer?

Odd that you say you're not selling them.. you posted that last one from the SAME IP as the Auntie Keyclown character, who claims to be n8wwm did..

So you're either him, his "roomie" (we won't delve into this one any deeper... the thought is just too sickening to think about) or his little 14 year old punk ass kid who has nothing better to do with his weekends than play with daddy's computer..

You do need to use 75ohm coax for the part of the harness that splits out to the two antennas. Jay is right about figuring in the velocity factor of .66 if your using the old copper braid RG-59 or RG-6 with the hard clear dielectric. If you use foam type you better get the velocity factor from the mfr. I remember the old store bought harnesses were 16 to 18' long which would be about 3/4 wavelength with the velocity factor figured in. This allowed a longer harness to snake through the car to make the install easier.

I never said that, I just asked a question. You seem to be jumping to conclusions.
The above "no right to complain" theory is totally your own work, and I do not wish to take any credit for it. Any "twisted" thinking is also your own.

Was you avoiding giving a straight answer to the question, or are you just suspicious of everyone who asks you a question? This was not intended as a trick question.

Why can't you debate a subject without twisting peoples words in an effort to discredit them? What are you so afraid of ??

So what do you think of the distance rule and those who break it?

Regards,

Mr. Brainstorm.

Phil.

The way to "prove" that is to visit www.rainreport.com and listen to RH tell about the busts of both hams and unlicensed operators. Every other week, Riley gives a summary of the previous two week period and summarizes the current busts. This week is Question and Answer week where he answers a question from a listener. Click the link, then click FCC Enforcement Log, and if you have Real Player, you can hear RH tell what's happening in his own words. It is not happening as fast as some would LIKE it to, but it IS happening on a more regular basis than in the past. I believe you can also go to www.arrl.org and read about FCC activities as well.

You see, ole "Rabbit Ears" thought that he wouldn't get in trouble, the trucker up in Cary, NC thought he wouldn't get hit (they even gave his TAG #), but Rabbit Ears is facing some $40,000 in fines and is forbidden to even OWN radio equipment. If he does, he will go to jail----again! His case was ruled upon by a judge just a couple days ago. The trucking company got a warning letter because the driver involved was operating some of that "export" equipment up in 10 meters. There's no difference in operating on 10 meters without a license or on 27.555 without a license.

Yes, you "might" get away with it--for awhile. But if the agents knock on YOUR door, it suddenly becomes very real and personal. It isn't happening fast, but it IS happening. Riley H. said he was going to do it, and he is doing it. It's not something promised for way out in the future--it's happening now, and happening more regularly than 3 years ago when he first became involved with the now termed Enforcement Bureau. It used to be just hams he popped. Ya gotta start somewhere, and that's where he started. I've listened to rain report for all those 3 years, and the busts of "unlicensed" operators have become more frequent. I heard him say this would happen in person--and he is doing exactly what he said. As time goes by, these busts will increase as FCC upgrades their computers and each "segment" of Riley's plan is dealt with. The Amateur issues are decreasing (he is making believers of outlaw hams), and as that happens, you can be assured, more attention will be given to 11 meters and the so-called "freeband". I don't know about you, but I can't afford a $10,000 fine. I don't want to go to jail, either. So I try to keep within the laws and regulations that apply to my station. Each one has to make that decision for himself.

OK guys, all BS aside. How's DX? I am stuck on 6 aa alkaline batteries and - hold on to you shorts - just talked to Brisbane Austrailia. Your original post mentions "amplifiers" v.s. "antennas", nothing about pre-amps. Pre-amps are a different story, and they have their own set of problems to deal with. I'm using a combination pre-amp/down converter (UEK300 from SSB Electronics) on a 2.4 GHz satellite down-link myself. Some operators even question the use of preamps on HF due to all of the static present most of the time. On V/UHF you don't get much static noise in particular on 2m and up. On 6m there is enough noise that I wonder if using a pre-amp is even worth it on that band at times. Even after all is said and done the best improvement in S/N ratio is to increase the antenna gain even when using a pre-amp.

If you want to experiment a bit try changing the numbers in the spreadsheet found at the below link. The spreadsheet calculates the link budgets for a AO-40 satellite ground station. The spreadsheet is for MS Excel 97 or later. You will find that the antenna gain has the most effect on the final S/N ratio. The same sort of calculations can be done for other types of communication links as well, so what you observe when playing with this worksheet, trades offs between pre-amp gain and antenna gain, still applies.

or a Member of Civil Air Patrol on 143Mhz.

I will point out to you that there more CAP frequencies than the VHF one you mentioned. That agency operates on a variety of USAF HF frequencies as well. The equipment now must meet strict NTIA standards. Most Amateur gear won't meet the VHF standards, but Yaesu, Kenwood, and Icom do have HF rigs that are approved for use on the USAF frequencies with proper High Stability Options. One is the excellent IC706 series. Incidentally, a couple of those HF frequencies are in that non-existent "freeband" so that we end up hearing, and reporting all those echos, and squeaks, beeps, and extraneous noises to AF Freequency Management.

IRLP? Heck, I don't know all the nomeclature. If you mean linked repeaters, yep. The megapelex repeater system links 10 meters, 6 meters, 2 meters, 220 MHz, and 440 MHz. It works. BTW, I can and have used the Oswego repeater - way over 100 miles from here on a handheld. Heck, I checked and I can hit more repeaters than I have channels on my handheld (although I am not worried - I can skip the linked repeaters on 440 - if I can hit repeaters over 100 miles away on the handheld, I do not really need to worry about all the links).

Um, Maybe not. As business and others vacate 450 in favor of 800+ trunking it is possible to do just that. 151-152 used to be the old mobile phone freqs. taxis, and some others. Now you have MURS on 151. Eliminating 11 meters
as a CB band would have benefits, to be sure, and I am certain, many other countries would be most happy to see American CB put somewhere else. It IS possible, there's just no know when or if.

I have said before, and think about it OG, why would I pay $39.00 a month for Pacbell, I guess $30.00 to 40.00 a month for webtv and what ever the cost of the other three ISP's, man you must be a real live genuine dummy to think that I would pay those amounts just to make you look silly.

what I really liked was where you are trying to point out that my ip and the

Hello & Good Evening Stu,
Well I just got back from 3 days at Lake Tahoe and I see my little old friend has been busy before he left or did he? Well to get back to your statement, Yes he's right on this one, I did make a comment to him, only after he left a smart ass comment concerning someone else.
I won't ask you to go through archives to look this Old chap up, I will ask you to look at what he has posted as beer bottle. That in itself should be enough to show you what kind of a trouble maker he is. I have been surprised on how much information he has given you, if you look almost 98% of his post are either derogatory or accusing in nature.
I will try not to harass him as much in the future, so I will try to heed your advice.

Hello & Good Evening Stu,
OK I'll give you an answer.
I would use some large stainless steel hose clamps, you can get some 8 to 9" at some good hardware stores. Next mount the antenna on a 10' mast, making sure that you run a ground wire along with testing your swr before installing. Then you want to shimmy up the tree, find the top of the tree and throw down a rope. Have someone attach the rope at the tip, make sure they duct tape the rope to the antenna.Then hoist the it up,when there also make sure you have some rubber or S.S. flashing to wrap around the tree where the clamps are going. Attach the mast securely around the tree using the clamps, once that's done, make sure if you can to route the coax and ground cable down between the branches.
All said and done, put in your ground rod in a proper place attach cable, then coax to radio, happy cb'ing.

You know some people can't afford an all band radio, it's a little easier to start out at $200.00 than it is $500.00 to $700.00.

I think someone overheard a conversation a while back and they were discussing the freak band. Somehow it got twisted around into free band. But then they are using free-quencies.

as a logical exercise, "aaron", define "normal"... not "normal within a context"... define "normal" without using the word "normal" or any of its derivatives...

Oh, and don't pull out Websters or Oxford... I'm interested in YOUR definition of "normal"

361. Texas Star 350 HDV for sale

Texas Star High Drive Variable 350 watt mobile Bi-linear amplifier.
This unit is a one owner, perfectly working amplifier. It has been well looked after, never abused (as in high SWR, overheating, crossed wires etc), and had very little actual use on it. This is the High Drive Variable model, it can take up to 21 watts input and is fully adjustable on the output.
Output ratings are on SSB, 12 watts input up to 300 watts output (pep),and 21 watts input, up to 350 watts output (pep). On AM, 4 watts input up to 190 watts output (rms) and 10 watts input up to 275 watts output (rms).Remember, this unit has variable output so you can adjust it to as much output as you need at the time. You can start as low as 25 watts or so, and crank it up from there, depending on what you need at the time.The receive amp is rated at 10db gain, and can be turned on or off. These figures are per documentation from Texas Star.
The unit has the rocker switch on the back to control the relays for either SSB, or AM use. These is a much better and more reliable way to go than the "automatic" cheaper units on the market. Also on the unit is a RF relative output meter, that lights up during transmissions.
Cosmetically, the unit is in nice condition. No scratches or dents in it. The plastic meter cover is broken on the lower corner (meter works fine). I've drilled two holes in the top cover for mounting reasons. All in all, the unit looks fine.
I've added a switch operated, computer cooling fan to the side of the unit. This has really helped the amp run cool, as we all know what heat is capable of doing to the transistors.
The unit has been reliable for me, never any problems. The audio is perfectly "clean" coming out of it, and adds plenty of "punch" to your audio. I have used it exclusively on SSB mode, and this is a lot easier(runs cooler) on these units than AM. The unit works every bit as well as the day that I bought it. It comes with the original documentation sheet that Texas Star provided.
This unit is one of the better built units that was on the market a few years back, and they are getting much harder to obtain these days.
I can email you pics if needed. My location is BC, Canada, and I'll ship it anywhere. Price is $200.00 US (firm), and buyer pays shipping costs.
Get ahold of me at jagulator@hotmailsucks.com (remove the "sucks" from address) if interested.

The post below was copied from rec.radio.swap where a lot of hams and commercial radio people buy and sell radio gear. I realize that this is not our Sparky, but I thought the thread that followed this post was really quite indicative of what normal people thought about the cb cops.

Normal people don't make up excuses for illegal behavior.

This is not an illegal radio and I am a ham, I got the radio so I could listen to cw on 28.0675 (W1AW) while studying for my 12wpm test. I got it cheap and figured I could use it in the car later. The only reason I posted it here is because there are a lot of CBers out there using this radio. But form all the messages I have received maybe I should just stay off this newsgroup. Artificial Aaron, (not to be confused with Artificial Rhonda) sobbed: As I said in a previous post, the fact that illegals get "mad" is no reason for anyone to keep quiet.

"And as I said in a previous post, only you get mad. Stop projecting your shortcomings off on others."

If you notice, there's actually an increase in malicious misinformation being posted in the NG by illegals.

"Actually, those who you falsely and intentionally mislabel as "illegal", provide and contribute much more insight and information to the group than you ever have or ever will, an amount you are obviously green with envy over. This would help explain your rabid position of "attack" in all your posts."

For example, the thread where Jay claims that 15 million CBers use amps and it must be legal.
"For example, you attempting to discredit what another says, simply because you are too ignorant, lazy, or both to do the legwork yourself on a statement you may take issue wih. Instead of taking issue with the subject, you take issue with the poster, rendering all you say useless and worthless. This popular view of you is spreading like wildfire. Good job."

Another thread has a fellow from the UK boasting about amps being legal.

"Another lie, as usual. He said he was not breaking FCC rules. You asked how so, was given the proof you seeked (he was overseas, check his ISP) then claimed something else. Tsk, tsk. Next thing we know you will be seeking validation again. You seem to do this on a frequent basis when your self-esteem is rock bottom and you are doubting and uncertain of yourself."

And Twistedhed is doing his usual illegal CB cheerleading. Until stuff like this goes away there'll be no truce.

"(Chuckle)! A threat under the guise of a request for validation. This is top stuff entertainment. Those threats flow from you quite freely anymore. Another perfect example of you attempting to control the speech content of this group and failing. I want you to be perfectly clear and concise on your position here. You are saying that when I stop doing what you perceive as "cheerleading", you will go away, or call a truce? You poor, poor, soul.
Truce to what? Is this another one of your "perceived" wars you waged? You way overestimate yourself. Not a soul cares whether you live, die, post, or don't post, let alone what you have to say about anything.

We toy with you for entertainment, and you only exist when we allow you to. You seem to understand this more and more lately, hence the low self-esteem on your behalf. Anyways, why do you give me such power and control to wield over you, AA? I mean, in the past you have continually denied it, but, well..finally admitting to the group what I have claimed since February....why, I may even use your line about me having control over your perceived "truce' as my tag sig, for all to enjoy repeatedly, and to serve as a reminder of the great influence I wield over you. You really should worship God, not I, AA.
Did you hear my big azzed radio this weekend, AA? I'll bet ya' did!"

legalize skipshooting on the legal 40 seems unwarranted, in and of spectrally destructive practices such as bootlegging and high power.

Aaron, am I understanding you correct, is this what you are trying to say?
The US CB dx law does not need to be changed because nobody cares if that law is broken.
You can break this law at will, because nobody will object, and you will not get punished.

That's the best example of "twisted" thinking I've heard in a long

Aaron, that was not my point at all. There are many battles in life. Some are worth fighting and some are not. Is this the hill your willing to die on?
If so, this is not normal behavior. You are in a minority if you think it is. Just read the replies that "Gilligan" received from legal operators.
You're not getting much support in your own ranks.
To them this is a non-issue and they don't care.
They would rather spend their "valuable" free time in pursuit of their own interests, not caring if Jay has an amplifier, or Train smokes cigars or if I am politically correct. It's against the law to drive 50 mph in a 40 mph zone. Do you police these people too? Why not? They are breaking the law. Do you sit outside of bars and write down license numbers of drunks driving home? Why not? These violations can and do cause death and serious injuries everyday.
Yet you and the other 3 AKC bunch think that illegal cb activity is the most egregious crime of the 21st century. I don't believe that this is normal and I do not believe that I am in the minority.

BTW, don't think that I am rude if I don't respond to future post's or replies. You are in my block senders file and the only reason I saw your reply is because I saw Sideband's reply to you.
Have a good life.

It is not my fault that you may be "dexterously challenged". I just happened to learn the typing skill quickly. I got a "B" in the class, it

Both of these orgs are active on "freeband", which does little for their

My observation is that 'freebanders', having acquired the taste for HF

- merely wish to legitimize their theft - rather than advance to the amateur radio hobby.

"Sort of like you attempting to justify your many, many, false allegations you have made against many here concerning illegal doings and amplifier useage based solely on their beliefs and incorrect inferences you continue to form."

Again, I realize that the RM petition did not specifically address the 'freeband', however I feel that because the use of 'extra channels' by the average cber

"There is one of those ignorant and incorrect perceptions you continue to form. You threw that out as if it were a fact that the "average" cber not only has access to the extras, but uses them."

  extra channels.has become so epidemic, any discussion of CB 'dx' includes the freeband as its unspoken subject.

"The only things unspoken here are your alter ego names, and that is due to your shame."

Ah, got me. Yep, the internet. One of the two repeaters at Kodak park is going that-a-way. That would be the WA2EGL repeater at 444.750. It is to be linked into the internet, but I'm not sure when. I do appreciate the URL as I had wanted to get back to that site and check out what is already linked.

in all seriousness jim the dx these last three days have been incredible on 11 meters. i was hearing nothing but europe and africa in the mornings and afternoons and the pacific region at night. i worked most all of the western eu countries as well as about 5 out of africa and all of south america which is in there all day and about 5 different dxcc's in the pacific including australia, new zealand, cook islands and indonesia and all of this with a barefoot rig and a antron99 12 feet off the ground. the band has been wide open. its looking like winter time dx in september :-)

Hello Jerry,

I have listened to the rain report as well as checked out the enforcement logs for a very long time now. The enforcement actions listed there are not "proof" of what Yrac claimed in his first message. There may be no difference between operating an unlicensed station in the 10 meter band or 27.555, but looking at the logs I do not see any emphasis on freebanders (27.415 - 27.995)

No doubt about it, Tim. It would not surprise me if the MUF made it over 50 MHz on some paths judging by 10 and 12 meters.

This particular one may be the result of the flare but I will let you in on an old ham trick. The sun also rotates on its axis returning to the same position vs Earth every 25 1/2 days or so. It is a pretty good bet that you will see an opening about the 26th or so.

Logbooks are not just for clerical chores.

Phil, as of right now, no. The Enforcement Bureau was re-activated as a result of a lot of pressure applied to Congress and the FCC via the Amateur Community. It has now managed to have people in the field as well as Riley in the head shed.

So the initial push was the ham bands, first clearing out a few shitheads (some of whom percolated to Rec. Radio. Amateur.Misc). Then has come the defense of the 28 MHz barrier, beginning with the trucking companies and cabbies. Given that voice is not legal in the 28-28.3 range, they are sitting ducks for two guys in an FCC vehicle coming home from another assignment on I-95 which I suspect is what happened to the North Carolina dump truck operator. But the next five years is not going to look like the last five, that much is for damn sure.

My guess is that freebanding will be tolerated thru the end of Cycle 23 while some other issues are dealt with. When this cycle dies in a year or two, it would be a good time to give up childish toys.

Don't you remember when you finally became a sophmore in high school and you realized _you_ were no longer the lowest form of life around campus? Remember that attitude? How many of your sophmore friends, that said they'd never do so, acted just like the sophmores acted towards you when you were freshmen? It's no different here. These little fellas think they have a mandate to clean-up the air waves. It's funny to see when they're respected betters (higher class hams) let them know exactly how valuable they _really_ are. It'd also be funny to see the look on Frank's face when he read the responses. Heh-heh. Talk about being brought down a rung or two. lol. Classic.

This, of course, is if there's enough money in the budget to effectively operate the FCC in a year or two. I'd like to see Riley and Colin's boy justify to Congress why they need a couple more million to chase free-banders, when Congress is, at the same time, trying their best not to use anymore of the Social Security Surplus than they already have thus pissing off the grey-haired set (who actually vote!!).. Or, how about explaining to military personell and their families that they'll have to live at the poverty line a few more years 'cause these dastardly freebanders have to come first! Heh, think Shrub will want to share any of his precious Defense Budget funds with the FCC? Shift some money from Shrub's and Cheney's NRG Commission? I-don't-think-so. Oh to be a fly on the wall during _that_ discussion. :-)

So it seems that it is only wishful speculation that the FCC will crack down on freebanders in the future (provided they have to resources and desire to do so) and there is no evidence for it now. So much for "proof"...

I am not advocating freebanding, but I do not see the FCC targeting people who operate between 27.415 and 27.995.

Aaron,
40 watts is 10db over the 4 watts. I guess most freebanders think that if they are within 10db they are legal.

If this was such a non-issue, you guys wouldn't be expending all this energy in a desperate attempt to convince me to stop posting my opinions.

Here are some posts from rec.radio.swap. I don't understand what you mean about AKC's getting "no support".

-Aaron-

You conveniently omit the fact that freebanders routinely interfere with legal communications on 25 and 26 MHz. Case in point, the 26 MHz Marine band which IS used on a regular basis, whether you think so or not. I have been interfered with and have heard bootlegger interference while I was in contact with KEJ Hawaii on 26 MHz, and more than once.

It's always the same old story, freebanders have no idea who is using any given frequency outside the legal 40. You don't hear anyone so you assume nobody uses it anymore. So much for your knowledge of technical issues, huh?

Get a license and quit whining!

Jon
KF7YN

Personally, I'd rather they didn't get a license. Much of their fun comes from rulebreaking. We have enough of that already.

Bill, W7TI

Tell it to the FCC! If you say it loud and often enough, they might legalize you and in that instant all you bootleggers would disappear from the planet.

I have been a LICENSED ham for 53 years, un-licensed stations have always been called "bootleggers", not "freebanders".."radio bootleggers" are in the same catagory as , making home brew whisky,counterfit money etc.all this "hogwash" about how smart you are does not impress most law abiding citizens. if you are so smart, why not take the test and go LEGAL? you can have more bands than you can work. W4PQW

Won't happen. Half the enjoyment for these guys is operating illegally.

The criminal mind at work.

On the contrary. He probably did not realize the problems that putting ham gear in the hands of CBers creates. Now he does.

Many of you point the finger at HAMS for selling contraband to CBers.
But if we try and 'educate' hams to stop this behavior, you guys freak

Bottom line: you want illegal gear.

From time to time, people say that the FCC doesn't care about CB, and that they won't "do" anything about amplifiers, export radios, modded rigs, and other infractions. Those who encroach on others' by operating outside their allocated 40 channels and run awesome amounts of power are usually the most vocal in their affirmation that they can't/won't be bothered. It is for that reason I post the following. It is to inform, not to flame or aggravate the readers of this forum. After all, an informed reader is most able to make his own decisions about his actions. If you knew, for example, that there was a dangerous snake lurking in your shed, wouldn't you approach that shed with more caution? I would! That's the only reason for posting this. Just as RH stated, it's going to get harder to operate illegally as time goes by. This is one of those cases that DID hit the courts.

NOTICE OF APPARENT LIABILITY FOR FORFEITURE

Released: July 13, 2001
By the Enforcement Bureau, Dallas Office:

I. INTRODUCTION

1. In this Notice of Apparent Liability for Forfeiture, we find that Klaus D. Kramer, violated Section 301 of the Communications Act of 1934 ("Act"), as amended,[1] by operating a radio station on Citizens Band frequencies without Commission authorization. We conclude that Klaus D. Kramer is apparently liable for a forfeiture in the amount of nine thousand five hundred dollars ($9,500).

II. BACKGROUND

2. On January 20, 2001, the FCC's Enforcement Bureau's Communications and Crisis Management Center received a telephone call complaining about a Citizens Band operator in the Oklahoma City area operating with excessive power and using the pseudonym "Bamm Bamm".

3. On February 21, 2001, two Commission agents in the Oklahoma City, Oklahoma area observed transmissions on Citizens Band channel 19 (27.185 MHz) with the operator using the pseudonym "Bamm Bamm". Using an FCC radio direction-finding vehicle, the agents determined that the transmissions emanated from the residence of Klaus D. Kramer in Grady County, Oklahoma. An abrupt increase in signal strength was noted corresponding to the operator transmitting a statement that he was turning his "power back on."

4. On February 23, 2001, two FCC agents in the Oklahoma City, Oklahoma area observed a series of transmissions on Citizens Band channel 19 (27.185 MHz) each with a male voice and repeating a message. A series of other transmissions were observed on the same channel (CB channel 19) each with a female voice repeating a different message. Using an FCC radio direction-finding vehicle, an FCC agent determined that one of the transmissions emanated from 1211 N. Shartel Avenue, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. FCC agents using radio direction-finding vehicles determined that the other transmissions emanated from Mike's Cycle Shop, a business owned by Klaus D. Kramer and located at 2212 SW 29th Street, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. The Commission agents conducted an inspection at 2212 SW 29th Street, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma and determined that Klaus Kramer was using an uncertified Citizens Band transmitter installed inside the casing of an Industrial/Business UHF two-way transceiver. The output of the CB transmitter was connected to a model "Dixie Lander 3" external radio frequency power amplifier. This system was automatically activated upon reception of a tone coded signal on 469.575 MHz, an Industrial/Business Pool frequency authorized for other purposes to Klaus D. Kramer d.b.a. Mikes Cycle Shop under license WPHP749.

5. Immediately following the inspection at 2212 SW 29th Street, the agents conducted an inspection at 1211 N. Shartel Avenue and determined that Klaus D. Kramer was using a modified Realistic Navaho CB transmitter that was connected to a "DX-400" external radio frequency power amplifier. Installed internally to the CB transmitter was an integrated circuit chip with the male voice message digitally recorded and a UHF receiver that automatically activated the CB transmitter upon reception of a tone coded signal on 469.575 MHz, an Industrial/Business Pool frequency authorized for other purposes to Klaus D. Kramer d.b.a. Mikes Cycle Shop under WPHP749. The agents verbally warned Klaus D. Kramer that use of an external radio frequency power amplifier and/or a modified CB transmitter voided his authority to operate a CB station, that such operation violated Section 301 of the Act, and advised him of the penalties for unlicensed operation. Klaus D. Kramer admitted to making the transmissions on February 21, 2001 utilizing an "Afterburner" model external radio frequency power amplifier. Furthermore, Klaus D. Kramer admitted to making by remote control the transmissions on February 23, 2001 using external radio frequency power amplifiers connected to the non-certified transmitters which he admitted modifying. Klaus D. Kramer, as owner of the equipment, voluntarily relinquished the equipment to the FCC agents.

6. In March 1998 and October 1999, agents of the Commission's Dallas Office determined that Klaus D. Kramer had committed similar violations.

III. DISCUSSION

7. Section 301 of the Act sets forth generally that no person shall use or operate any apparatus for the transmission of energy of communications or signals by radio within the United States except under and in accordance with the Act and with a license[2]. Pursuant to Section 307(e) of the Act, Section 95.404 authorizes operation of a Citizens Band (CB) station without individual licenses in accordance with the rules in Part 95, Subpart D of the Commission's Rules. However, Section 95.409(b) of the Commission's Rules voids individual authority to operate a CB station under Section 95.404 if the operator utilizes a certificated CB transmitter with internal modifications. Moreover, Section 95.411 of the Commission's Rules voids individual authority to operate a CB station if the operator utilizes an external radio frequency power amplifier.

8. Based on the evidence before us, we find that on February 21 and 23, 2001, Klaus D. Kramer repeatedly[3] and willfully[4] violated Section 301 of the Act by operating radio transmitters without Commission authorization.

9. Pursuant to The Commission's Forfeiture Policy Statement and Amendment of Section 1.80 of the Rules to Incorporate the Forfeiture Guidelines, 12 FCC Rcd 17087 (1997), recon. denied, 15 FCC Rcd 303 (1999) ("Forfeiture Policy Statement"), the base forfeiture amount is $10,000 for unlicensed operation. In assessing the monetary forfeiture amount, we must also take into account the statutory factors set forth in Section 503(b)(2)(D) of the Act, which include the nature, circumstances, extent, and gravity of the violation(s), and with respect to the violator, the degree of culpability, any history of prior offenses, ability to pay, and other such matters as justice may require.[5] Klaus D. Kramer's violation was willful and repeated. However, a reduction in this forfeiture amount by $500 is warranted based on Klaus D. Kramer's voluntary relinquishment of the offending non-certified transmitting equipment. Applying the Forfeiture Policy Statement and statutory factors to the instant case, a $9,500 forfeiture is warranted.

IV. ORDERING CLAUSES

10. Accordingly, IT IS ORDERED THAT, pursuant to Section 503(b) of the Act,[6] and Sections 0.111, 0.311 and 1.80 of the Commission's Rules,[7] Klaus D. Kramer, is hereby NOTIFIED of his APPARENT LIABILITY FOR A FORFEITURE in the amount of nine thousand five hundred dollars ($9,500) for violating Section 301 of the Act[8].

11. IT IS FURTHER ORDERED THAT, pursuant to Section 1.80 of the Commission's Rules,[9] within thirty days of the release date of this NOTICE OF APPARENT LIABILITY, Klaus D. Kramer, SHALL PAY the full amount of the proposed forfeiture or SHALL FILE a written statement seeking reduction or cancellation of the proposed forfeiture.

12. Payment of the forfeiture may be made by mailing a check or similar instrument, payable to the order of the Federal Communications Commission, to the Forfeiture Collection Section, Finance Branch, Federal Communications Commission, P.O. Box 73482, Chicago, IL 60673-7482. The payment should note the NAL/Acct. No. referenced in the letterhead above.

13. The response, if any, must be mailed to Federal Communications Commission, Office of the Secretary, Federal Communications Commission, 445 12th Street, SW, Washington, DC 20554, Attn: Enforcement Bureau -- Technical and Public Safety Division, and MUST INCLUDE THE NAL/Acct. No. reference in the letterhead above.

14. The Commission will not consider reducing or canceling a forfeiture in response to a claim of inability to pay unless the petitioner submits: (1) federal tax returns for the most recent three-year period; (2) financial statements prepared according to generally accepted accounting practices ("GAAP"); or (3) some other reliable and objective documentation that accurately reflects the petitioner's current financial status. Any claim of inability to pay must specifically identify the basis for the claim by reference to the financial documentation submitted.

15. Requests for payment of the full amount of this Notice of Apparent Liability under an installment plan should be sent to: Chief, Revenue and Receivables Operations Group, 445 12th Street, SW, Washington, DC 20554.[10]

16. IT IS FURTHER ORDERED THAT a copy of this NOTICE OF APPARENT LIABILITY shall be sent by Certified Mail Return Receipt Requested to Klaus D. Kramer at 2212 SW 29th Street, Oklahoma City, OK 73119-2118.

Good post, Jerry. Complacency can cost $9,500.00. Thanks for the heads-up.

As asinine a post as I have had the pleasure to read yet on this NG.
Thank you.

It is truly a pleasure to read someone trying vainly to justify being illegal by attempting to blame it on others.

You have previously admitted your criminality, and the lying post about N8 shows YOUR credibility. Har Har Har.

You seem to be saying that if the public is not aware of a problem there is not one. Typical statement of one who is afraid the public IS going to become aware.

You and anyone else who uses 11 meters to DX are not impaired in any way if you would get your amateur license. The stated aim here seems to be to allow DX, Keydowns, etc to exist. It is all just a sham to attempt to make yourselves UN-CRIMINALS. Won't happen. You can vote all you want but the issue won't ever be on a ballot. Maybe y'all should start writing your Congressman.

I can see it now:

Dear Congressman So n So,

I am a federal criminal who is writing to ask that you support a bill changing my status to UN-CRIMINALITY. We criminals think that laws against what we do are wrong and we want you to amend laws against us before we get caught. We won't vote for you if you don't.

Sincerely,

THIS LETTER WOULD BE GOOD FOR COKE DEALERS, TOO!!!

PS: Where's your proof that N8 threatened anyone in this NG?

Any idea why when I drive over an over pass or any bridge for that matter, why it seems as though I've turned my squelch down?? In other words, silence when I'm riding on regular road surface, as soon as I get on a bridge or overpass, I get static through the radio. I have 108" ss whip attached to the truck body. It has been tested for SWR and it is in spec. I have an el cheapo Radio Shack cb that actually plugs into the cigarette lighter for power. Do I need to ground the radio somehow?
Thanks.

It is the difference in height over the ground that improves your reception. I have been known to pull over on the bridge by my place and shoot some DX. Other places that work good are hills and parking garages. Nothing like a tall parking garage to blanket a city!

    Just read the replies that "Gilligan" received from legal operators.   You're not getting much support in your own ranks.   To them this is a non-issue and they don't care.

If this was such a non-issue, you guys wouldn't be expending all this energy in a desperate attempt to convince me to stop posting my opinions.

"No one wants to stop your postings, AA, which is why we allow you to exist by responding to you. We have pointed out many, many times we do not wish for you to stop posting your opinions. Again, you way overestimate your position in the group, in life, in everything. You are your own worst enemy. You have all these false misperceptions that ought to be dealt with and no matter how many times you are told, still feel someone is "out to get you". You are trifling and no one would bother.
Trust me on this. We only toy with you in here because we can. Why, you are so detached, you actually believe, along with the other two, that y'all are doing the governments secret espionage against dastardly dangerous radio felons. How can we pass that up?"

Here are some posts from rec.radio.swap. I don't understand what you mean about AKC's getting "no support".

"Sure you do AA. The posts you cite below were ALL in response to forges, also perpetuated by you, hence the "sudden and new" (yawn) posters that allegedly had something to say, (the nonhammies) but exist nowhere except in your mind. Now that the same hammies you were attempting to rally to come to your aid saw your/Frank's trolling and forging, you just won more fans, the very ones below you quote as being "in the bag." I told you before, only your arrogance precedes your ignorance. As always, you are your own worst enemy. Don't believe me?
Email them and ask them what they think now of you after they "perused" your posts." Just can't help yourself, can you? LMAO!"

-Aaron-

You conveniently omit the fact that freebanders routinely interfere with legal communications on 25 and 26 MHz. Case in point, the 26 MHz Marine band which IS used on a regular basis, whether you think so or not. I have been interfered with and have heard bootlegger interference while I was in contact with KEJ Hawaii on 26 MHz, and more than once.
It's always the same old story, freebanders have no idea who is using any given frequency outside the legal 40. You don't hear anyone so you assume nobody uses it anymore. So much for your knowledge of technical issues, huh?

Get a license and quit whining!
Jon
KF7YN

Personally, I'd rather they didn't get a license. Much of their fun comes from rulebreaking. We have enough of that already.
Bill, W7TI

Tell it to the FCC! If you say it loud and often enough, they might legalize you and in that instant all you bootleggers would disappear from the planet.

I have been a LICENSED ham for 53 years, un-licensed stations have always been called "bootleggers", not "freebanders".."radio bootleggers" are in the same catagory as , making home brew whisky,counterfit money etc.all this "hogwash" about how smart you are does not impress most law abiding citizens. if you are
can work. W4PQW

Won't happen. Half the enjoyment for these guys is operating illegally. The criminal mind at work.
Bill, W7TI

"These are all the hams that you trolled for and received a response from, through your typical forges. Appears you are attempting to start the same trouble with hammies as you do here. Now that they are aware of how you operate and who is involved, bet they don't make the same mistake twice."

When I took my technician exam, there was a 9 year old girl taking HER technician exam (and she passed!!). I inquired a little and found that her father had his license (I think General, but don't quote me) AND her mother was taking her Technician exam at the same time. My six year old daughter has shown an interest in "the radio", I plan on giving her as much exposure as possible to get her interested. We [the parents] are the ones who have to make things interesting for our children. You cannot compare Amateur Radio with Nintendo, Nintenco, INC has a whole department of market researchers whose entire job is to design products that kids will bug their parents to buy! Amateur Radio is a hobby, it is something we like to do (we don't do it for the money).

I will assume you are talking about a reinforced concrete overpass rather than a steel girder truss bridge.

1. You have a really good groundplane under you: all that rebar in the overpass.

2. Not much is around you to play shield.

3. You have gained some altitude.

4. If it is over a river you can get the morning fog effect. Over the Wisconsin at Wausau I could get every station in Wisconsin Public Radio on the bridge. Not as pronounced at 11 meters as opposed to 3 meters (the FM Band) but real.

Doesn't seem to me that anything particularly unusual is happening.

Just how wishful is open to debate but you have pretty well defined the issue: What sort of resources should be devoted to clearing out freqs originally designated for CB and for the most part already cleared out? With the possible exception of some activity prior to the 2003 treaty meeting, what really is the damage? Busting people just to be busting people is right up there with speed traps that have no connection to traffic safety.

The area below 26.96 may well be a different animal entirely.

Were that the issue, I might agree but the problem at FCC has been diversion of effort by Congress which has subsided a bit. They currently have the manpower to make quite a dent if they aren't off on some cellphone issue.

Given that Tauzin, Dingle et al have finally gotten the word on CB outlawry such effort might actually score a few points. But the emphasis will be more on hi-power Channel Bastards than someone on SSB above 415.

First you said it was "legal" in your country. When I asked you what country that was, you did not respond. Now you are saying it's not being used on CB. If the amp is not being used on CB, what band is it being used on, and why is a for sale ad for a piece of gear that is illegal to use on CB being posted in a CB newsgroup?

Hello,
EXCUSE ME!, but what does your response have to do with this gentleman asking for a manual? He wasn't trying to sell it, mod it, pump it up, so you are proved an ass and your response is below, you really are a dolt.

What is it you are asking?..Are you saying it is impossible to make modifications to a radio and increase the power output and modulation beyond that which it had from the factory?

Try -0700. Aint clock fiddling fun? Personally I would prefer daylite

Just so you guys know, this unit is illegal to operate on 11 meters.
Part 95 of the FCC rules clearly state this.

I found this old Washington 40 channel AM/SSB at a flea market. It appears to be an early version of what later became the Uniden model.. yep, it's still essentially a Uniden, but the synthesizer IC is the only place it's labeled Uniden.
The back panel plate is marked President Electronics, Inc. Japan.
It's not stamped with a date, like many of the late 70's (and newer) chassis plates are, but I read a date code of 1976 on IC 2.

The first 2 days it seemed to be in good working condition, then the channel display started going dim/dark.
I was hoping someone could suggest a source for a service manual for this older chassis. Apparently this model/unit is still in production, and I'd like to find service literature that is specific to this unit's age/version or production run.

I've contacted Uniden before about old President equipment, and they'll barely admit any association with these old units. For the units that they could identify, all they were able to supply were a few pages of bad looking photocopied material.

This unit appears to be mostly original (no obvious signs of replacement parts or chopped/lifted traces), but there are 2 switches mounted in the back panel that are wired into the channel selector/synthesizer area where the flex circuit is soldered to the main board. One switch is SPDT, the other is SPST-on/off.
If anyone recognizes this particular modification, I'd appreciate knowing what it is, so I can remove it.

Thanks in advance for any suggestions.

To circumvent warnings.. I know the regulations concerning the transmitter circuits, and I'm an experienced troubleshooting/repair tech.
If anyone has a service manual for this unit, I've got a some older manuals to trade.. or let me know what your manual is worth.

Thanks
WB

Would anyone know how to determine the age of an older D 104? Most of the paper label inside the bottom plate is gone.. only a small piece with a few terminal symbols still remains.

The stand base is painted metallic silver/grey, similar to a hammertone finish. The model label on top is a sticker, not a riveted tag. The screen and the rest of it is chromed (except the column screws and bar mount spring). It has the locking slider ring. The cable is rubber covered (or not vinyl).
A sticker on the mic element has the number 651 stamped on it.

There are 2 small tapped holes about 1 3/4" apart at the front edge of the base.. this looks like a tag mounting area, but the threads still have paint on them, as if nothing was ever attached there.

Thanks in advance for any suggestions.

I do a lot of SWLing above 24 Mhz. I find that in my local area and when the 10 11 meter band is open there is little activity between 24.415 and 27.995 in the US. Almost a quiet as 10 meters which seems like a terrible waste of almost 2 Mhz. Heck, even 2 meters has very little activity around here (Dayton, OH) in the last few years. I can scan the repeaters on 2 meters all day without hearing a peep (other than the repeater ID). There is much more activity of stations outside the US borders between 415 to 995. I doubt an FCC enforcement action against freebanders would be worth the effort and would be a terrible waste of money (which has never stopped the Government before I guess).

Maybe if some of the HAMs that hang around here bitching about illegal CBers would turn off their computers and do some operating on 10 meters there would be some kind of justification for the defense of the 28 Mhz barrier. Or justification for such a big waste of spectrum from 28Mhz on up...

Hi Jay!

All of the self proclaimed radio cops are hypocrites as I proved on alt.radio.family almost a year ago. They don't believe or practice half of what they say or advocate. Some just want to stir up trouble because they are bored and need attention. Others have the need to feel important in their meaningless, pitiful lives so they become radio-cop-zealots-on-a-mission. Still others have such low self-esteem that they need to feel morally superior by showing "illegals" the error of their ways.

Take care,

I don't think the formula has changed, lately.

Make trouble, and you get attention.

How do you become a target?
Splatter into the ham bands. Operate in the ham bands without a license.
Bleed into a neighbor's telephone or audio equipment.

For Phil C:
I went back and read this thread from the beginning. What I see is speculation, based upon formula above, and related trends. You often demand "proof" before you accept something. But "projection of trends" and "predictions" are a valid decision-making processes. If this were not so, Hurricane Preparation would be stalled where it was during the 1900 storm in Galveston.

Hi guys, a while back there was a Thread about C.W.McCall's "convoy"

he also did a song called "Roses for Momma"

there was a also a song, done by some country artist... and I can't remember the artist, Nor the name of this tune...

the Lyric that is the catch phrase in the tune is "getie up go"

The song is basically about a young child who wanted to buy his mother a birthday gift or roses or something and he was handicapped.
he gets on the CB Radio and asks the truckers for help...I beleive his handle was "getie up go"

What song am I thinking of???

Also, it was a country song...

Well, Jeff,

First of all, the facts of the offense don't support your premise. The fact that he was a ham has nothing to do with the case because he was not engaging in a "ham" activity. His difficulties arose from a complaint about operations of a Citizens Band station. When the agents first began to monitor his activities, it is highly unlikely they knew whether he was a ham or not. They were responding to and DFing an offending signal. The fact that he held a license most likely came to light during the inspection and subsequent identification of the operator. It could just as easily been someone without a license. CB radio is available to all citizens. We all can use it, ham or not. There are a set of rules that govern each service. When I operate in the Amateur Service, I am subject to the rules of the service. Likewise, when I operate a CB station, I am subject to the rules of that service..with one caveat: if I break the rules of the CB Service, then I jeopardize those licenses I may hold in other services.
Mr. Kramer chose to violate the rules of the CB Service. He got caught and now must pay the piper.

The point I was trying to make, Jeff, was not to just hassle people, but to illustrate what I have said before. It is slowly becoming more dangerous to operate outside the regulations. The wheels of government, once stilled, are slow to creak to a start again, but they are beginning to turn. Mr. Hollingsworth has freely admitted that FCC was AWOL for over 10 years. It is his job to "oil" those wheels. He vowed to do it, I HEARD him say so in person, and it IS happening. During their absence, things got out of hand both ham and CB. Mr. H. began with the Amateur Service, cleaning out the dregs by issuing warnings, suspensions and fines....or outright revocation. When he first started speaking on Rain Report, it was a weekly thing. Gradually it slowed down until it became bi-weekly. Obviously, the upswing in non-ham related enforcement is directly proportional to the downturn in Amateur issues.

If we cloud the issue by thinking that they are only after hams because they hold a license, it is a narrow view--one that could lead to trouble. You see,
CBers hold a license, too! It is just not on paper. The rules, if you bother to

457. Re: No Flames, Just the Facts

Well, Jeff,

First of all, the facts of the offense don't support your premise. The fact that he was a ham has nothing to do with the case because he was not engaging in a "ham" activity. His difficulties arose from a complaint about operations of a Citizens Band station. When the agents first began to monitor his activities, it is highly unlikely they knew whether he was a ham or not. They were responding to and DFing an offending signal. The fact that he held a license most likely came to light during the inspection and subsequent identification of the operator. It could just as easily been someone without a license. CB radio is available to all citizens. We all can use it, ham or not. There are a set of rules that govern each service. When I operate in the Amateur Service, I am subject to the rules of the service. Likewise, when I operate a CB station, I am subject to the rules of that service..with one caveat: if I break the rules of the CB Service, then I jeopardize those licenses I may hold in other services.
Mr. Kramer chose to violate the rules of the CB Service. He got caught and now must pay the piper.

The point I was trying to make, Jeff, was not to just hassle people, but to illustrate what I have said before. It is slowly becoming more dangerous to operate outside the regulations. The wheels of government, once stilled, are slow to creak to a start again, but they are beginning to turn. Mr. Hollingsworth has freely admitted that FCC was AWOL for over 10 years. It is his job to "oil" those wheels. He vowed to do it, I HEARD him say so in person, and it IS happening. During their absence, things got out of hand both ham and CB. Mr. H. began with the Amateur Service, cleaning out the dregs by issuing warnings, suspensions and fines....or outright revocation. When he first started speaking on Rain Report, it was a weekly thing. Gradually it slowed down until it became bi-weekly. Obviously, the upswing in non-ham related enforcement is directly proportional to the downturn in Amateur issues.

If we cloud the issue by thinking that they are only after hams because they hold a license, it is a narrow view--one that could lead to trouble. You see,
CBers hold a license, too! It is just not on paper. The rules, if you bother to look, clearly state that by operating a CB station you agree to abide by the rules of the service. Violating any one of said rules voids your authority to operate the station. So, if they happen to focus on YOU, or ME because someone complained about our operations, like I said, it suddenly becomes VERY personal. ....the "snake" in the shed analogy. I just know that when I key up MY CB, it's going to be with 4 watts within the 40 channels.

Hi guys, a while back there was a Thread about C.W.McCall's "convoy"
he also did a song called "Roses for Momma"
there was a also a song, done by some country artist... and I can't remember the artist, Nor the name of this tune...
the Lyric that is the catch phrase in the tune is "getie up go"
The song is basically about a young child who wanted to buy his mother a birthday gift or roses or something and he was handicapped. he gets on the CB Radio and asks the truckers for help...I beleive his handle was "getie up go"
What song am I thinking of???
Also, it was a country song...
-Chuck

"I vaguely remember that, didn't all the truckers take him for a ride or something? The kid was supposedly dying or something. Can't think of the name of the tune."

I don't think the formula has changed, lately.
Make trouble, and you get attention.
How do you become a target?
Splatter into the ham bands. Operate in the ham bands without a license.
Bleed into a neighbor's telephone or audio equipment.

"And there is the nutshell. No more, no less. Do none of the above and enjoy."

That was Red Sovine, "Gittie Up Go". The name was the name of his truck, and when he ran into this kid with a brand new Kenworth with that sign on the back, he showed him the sign on his own truck, and he knew he'd found his son.

Jerry:

You must admit that "Bamm Bamm" was also drawing alot of attention to himself.. I mean, really, when you broadcast "I got my nightgown on, I got my pretty red panties on, and I'm a-ready to go ta bed!" repeatedly, over and over, ad nauseum, so that the entire country can hear it, for months and months at a time, someone's going to complain, and someone's going to get caught for it.

The FCC worked, in this case, and someone who was in violation of the rules of ANY of the Radio services regulated by the FCC was caught. I, for one, being a driver, and having had to listen to that damned recording for miles and miles, plugging my ears, and repeatedly causing potentially dangerous situations on the road, am glad he was caught.

"Bamm Bamm"'s behavior is indicative of piss poor judgment in the use of technology, and the fact that he was a HAM as well has absolutely nothing to do with the fact that he broke the rules on CB.

Twist:

No, that was "Little Teddy Bear".. a different tune by the same artist, Red Sovine.

Say you really really like strawberries....

I mean REALLY like strawberries...

Then you find out about Chocolate, and you love that too...

Would you totally forget about your beloved Strawberries?

Or would you do like I, and lots of other HAMs, have done and dip your strawberries in chocolate?

You are higher so are picking up more, of corse it will do that. Take your base station if you have one and raise the antenna bo 40 feet or so, leave the squelch where it was before and I bet the same thing will happen, especially if you have a sensitive receiver.

So you are saying you run a radio with a dirty signal. I am sure it has been Modified which is ILLEGAL.. Run a barefoot radio thru the beam.. and don't be a jackass The facts is cb amps are illegal, they are harmonic spewing pigs, while an antenna is not.

Yep, there are two ways... but both have conditions.

1. A box is made to switch isolate the receiving radio to a load or short for protection while the other transmitter is running. This type of switching is done with a relay or pin diodes.

2. If the radios are operating far enough away from each other, high Q filtering can be done to notch, bandpass or suck out the other radios frequency. Most often done with hi-Q cavities and resonant circuits.

Both work if done with a practical expectation and proper ckt design.

You must admit that "Bamm Bamm" was also drawing alot of attention to himself.. I mean, really, when you broadcast "I got my nightgown on, I got my pretty red panties on, and I'm a-ready to go ta bed!" repeatedly, over and over, ad nauseum, so that the entire country can hear it, for months and months at a time, someone's going to complain, and someone's going to get caught for it.
The FCC worked, in this case, and someone who was in violation of the rules of ANY of the Radio services regulated by the FCC was caught. I, for one, being a driver, and having had to listen to that damned recording for miles and miles, plugging my ears, and repeatedly causing potentially dangerous situations on the road, am glad he was caught.
"Bamm Bamm"'s behavior is indicative of piss poor judgment in the use of technology, and the fact that he was a HAM as well has absolutely nothing to do with the fact that he broke the rules on CB.

Operating in the Ham bands without a license is stupid.. eventually you will

This is true whether its CB or Ham. With the poor quality and shielding of electronic equipment these days even a clean station will sometimes cause problems with the neighbor...

True about hurricane prediction but cracking down on freebanders is an entirely different matter. Using your logic I must conclude that the freebanders are safe since I do not see any trend to go after the freebanders in the FCC enforcement actions.

Shadow is it true you and Toll are separated? I thought these CB marriages stayed together.

"Ya' know, for all the BS you ply here and continued claims that you are somehow above Sparky and Dogie's ways, you sure show a familiar concern for people's private lives that have nothing to do with radio. Harry, whoever posted that forgery of Frank must not have taken into

It's a scam to skirt the law. They sell them as "non-working replica amplifiers" for "educational" purposes only. In reality they just require a jumper to make operational, but it gets them around the law. At least for now...

I'm sure Riley will give him a "replica" subpoena, and the court will give him a "replica" conviction, and the prison system will give him a "replica" incarceration...

It doesn't take an F. Lee Bailey to prove act and intent on this one, which are the key points of jurus prudence which constitute a crime... At the very least, you can be sure that Riley knows of this guy and will be watching closely - since the guy was stupid enough to post his information here for all to see - and forward to the FCC...

(The fact that the guy tells how to mod the units for transmit right on the same page where he offers them for sale is pretty clear proof of intent- a real bright guy...)

Heck, all Riley has to do is have one of his agents pose as a "10-4 good buddy" type and make a purchase of one of these units, and this "dealer" has "cooked his own goose". I wonder who the last guy that bought one of his "replicas" really was...? :>)

I'd like to see the FCC establish a "bounty hunter" type of system were trained civilians with arrest power could go after these guys.

The CB mess would get cleaned up in a hurry.

All of this Uncle Sam's thumb nonsense. Twenty five years as a ham, and the FCC has never even questioned anything I did. The only time I have heard from them, is when they want my opinion.

The fact is: If you're out of band, then you're jamming somebody else's frequency with no regard for the consequences of your actions and should be put off the air.
Plain and simple.

Yeah, and all those illegal "immigrants" trashing our country is ok too? So we should choose the laws we want to obey? What other laws do you not choose to follow? Society has rules, and they need to be obeyed.
Even radio laws. Even the ones you don't agree with.
Believe me, there are a lot of laws I don't agree with, however I don't make a deliberate effort to violate them.

So, you are saying that a ham ticket "replaces" CB, or somehow prohibits hams from using CB? I don't understand that. I see my posts kind of like me standing beside the road KNOWING the bridge is out ahead and not raising a red flag. Would you want someone to watch you speed past and allow your car to plunge into the river?

I use CB quite a bit. Now I mostly listen while I am in my car because the truckers are VERY on top of road conditions and wrecks. I don't have to say anything to know what's going on. IF you know the bridge is out, you would stop. That's the only reason I post this stuff. You see, there's nothing personal about it--not like the "anti-keyclowns" who try to put down and insult people, or engage in arguments. It's just truthful information as I get it, and it is posted to inform, not inflame.

It can fall under the same statues that r/c radios fall under. Have you ever heard of them ? It can be used by any ham who wants to use one as long as he has a license, this was clearly stated in his ad. So I will ask you Phil how is it illegal? Cite me a reference to back up your claim if it is illegal.

jose the 2 antenna "bounce back" is nothing more than a version of the 2 element beam, the bottom elements being your vehicles ground plane. do you think they have written somewhere these antennas are for "keydowns", antenna theory has been around for a long time. Also phasing of antennas have been around for years and years many broadcast stations used phased systems it all comes down to the length of coax used for the pattern you want the rest is up to you to experiment and do tests. You want the info handed to you jose, go out and "learn" on your own so you understand why things happen take notes of what you are doing and keep your measurements written down so you can compare them at a later date. What ever you do use the same test setup so your results are being compared appleds for apples. Get a field strength meter, a notebook, a tape measure, and a open area to do your antenna test. make sure you use the same wattage for each test. A barefoot radio should work best.

My one base will do this right out of the box and it is legal for CB, although it is a tad bit old. Browning Golden Eagle Mark IV, seperate transmitter, reciever. and for those that say VFO is illegal it had a VFO, and it is type accepted for CB.

Hey 5... I know it. But you don't need much out of a radio. As long as there is audio coming from it, and with a stock mic at that, I'm satisfied.
If you want watts, put a modulator in-line and call it good. A mutual friend of mine got it to do 8 watts RMS from a Grant and it rocks. Hell, you hear him everyday from Honolulu. That's AUDIO, guy! Take care...

I thought it was a 18 foot 3/4 wave antenna? That's why its coiled near the base. Maybe ConcreteMAN can shed some light on this.

I'm trying out a 27 foot Gamma Matched set-up with the help from "Jay" and another guy from Chicago. I will be doing antenna testing Friday night and I'll post the results after I get back from my Paintball trip down South on Sunday.

Take care all...

Sure. I have hooked up two radios to a DPDT relay mounted in a burnt out TVI Filter box. Already had two SO-239's so I had to drill and mount another. Works great and is still in use today. The relay came out of an old Palomar Model 150 Bi-linear amplifier. Now I have 6 radios hooked up to my antenna switch box to bounce back and forth from the beams. Take care...

Skipp, could you do this for him and if so at what cost?
Not feasible for the average Cber.

Skipp, At 27 mhz how big would the cavities be ? Would this be feasible for the average or even above average Cber? And at what cost? Basically what he is looking for is a setup for a repeater system, he wants to listen on one freq and transmit on another at the same time from the same antenna. A duplexer /cavity filter would be needed

If he really is the guy that did the nightgown bit, we used to here him out here in Southern Calif., everyday. He's been OTK for several months. He used to come in just above the noise level. I thought he was funny. I suppose those a lot closer to him didn't share my feeling. :-) If he was running a 'bot and causing all that trouble, then he got what he deserves. No doubt about it. Those that want to play, gotta pay, when the time comes.

Are you stupid? Do you think that his little disclaimer about what he "used" to do in his CB days makes selling to those that will use that device to disrupt communications OK? Based on his past performance within this group, and elsewhere, I think any intelligent person could, and would, surmise that this device is nothing more than a "jammer". Do you think otherwise?
Why? What makes you think, based on his items description, that that's _not_ exactly what people will use it for?

Simple. ANYTHING is legal to own. You can buy Hi-Power Ham stuff and it's legal. Hell no Ham will ask to see a liscense b4 he sells you an ICOM or whatever. Since CB'ers are the future it makes since to sell stuff here since to use it legally most cb'ers will get a liscense. The REAL Hams(not the losers that bitch here) will advise you to buy a Ham radio and just listen but just don't keyup till you have a liscense. The FCC does monitor the Hams bands ALLOT since hams tend to lack the restraint shown by most freebanders and need supervision.

The quarter is the inevitable 108 inches, I will let you double it for half.
The trick is the coupling line in between to make it colinear. BTW, 5/8 over a quarter are common on VHF. Hustler built and probably still builds a very good one. There is also a Ringo that is half over half that uses a hairpin delay coupling; swear by it or swear at it.

That's right. In related news, I am avoiding any thought of hurricane preparation for this fall's season, since no Hurricanes have hit within 500 miles of me previously this year. (Plywood savings: $75. Batteries: $6).

I have turned off my security system (saving $25/month for monitoring) since the system has never caught anyone but me. :)

And I quit taking a daily aspirin, since I've never had a heart attack. (Annual savings: $4.75)

At this rate, by the time Dayton rolls around next year, I'll be able to replace my aging dual-bander.

I think that went without saying, Chuck.

Not too many trucker songs in the opera! (grin)

Glad somebody was able to give you the answer. I also had it confused with the Teddy Bear song!

Web Doc you cannot transmit and receive at the same time into 1 antenna, all the Browning has is a separate transmitter and separate rx. I don't think the vfo was on tx side ..

I would like to use a handheld CB on my motorcycle. I am looking for guidance regarding the best handheld.

Is there only one manufacturer? Does Midland make Cobra? Does Cobra make Midland? Does Cherokee make both??

Jeff, Listen to you are you saying the average person will buy this 15 mw jammer... hahaha Isn't this like the guys selling the Mod's Cd and amp kits, for educational purposes only ? Where is illegal usage implied. You don't need to buy this from him and you know it go to radio shack and buy a r/c car crystal it to any freq you want. What's the big deal are you afraid people will use this 15 mw jammer for something illegal? Don't you guys always say yeah you can own anything you want as long as you don't use it, or I will take responsibility for my own action ..hahaha.

You and me both, man.. I loved those tunes.. Still do. and I'm not afraid to admit that "Little Teddy Bear" still brings a tear to my eye... Too bad real life isn't that way anymore, eh?

John:

I'd like an .mp3 of that, if you have the time.. I'm sure I wouldn't mind a binary in this group for that one reason... if noone else objects, that is. If you don't have it in .mp3 or don't have a way to turn it into an .mp3, just drag the .cda from the CD, or record it to a .wav, and I'm sure someone will be able to .mp3 it.

What can I say? I'm a Red Sovine fan... I just can't find any of his stuff on CD.. my LPs are worn out beyond hope... and it's harder and harder to find needles for the turntable nowadays...

Even if LP's did sound better than CD's.

Yes, I have heard of R/C radios - have YOU heard of Part 15, Old Man???

R/C radios fall under Part 15 and are subject to certification.

>It can be used by any ham who wants to use one as long as > he has a license, this was clearly stated in his ad.

The description of the device on Ebay also states that the device can operate on the CB frequencies, therefore it is subject to Part 15 or Part 95. The device is also marketed to the public so it is subject to certification under Part 15 or Part 95:

95.603 (c) Each CB transmitter (a transmitter that operates or is intended to operate at a station authorized in the CB) must be certificated. No CB transmitter certificated pursuant to an application filed prior to September 10, 1976, shall be manufactured or marketed.

15.201 (b) Except as otherwise exempted in paragraph (c) of this section and in Sec. 15.23 of this part, all intentional radiators operating under the provisions of this part shall be certificated by the Commission pursuant to the procedures in subpart J of part 2 of this chapter prior to marketing.

The device on Ebay has not been certified. Don't believe me - email the seller and ask him.

>So I will ask you
> Phil
> > how is it illegal?

Check out Part 15, Subparts C and D of the FCC rules at http://www.access.gpo.gov/nara/cfr/waisidx_00/47cfr15_00.html

I could post the full text here but it would take up a lot of bandwidth.

Also take a look at http://www.arrl.org/tis/info/part15.html

To summarize: if you market a device that is considered to be an intentional radiator (§ 15.3 (o) Intentional radiator. A device that intentionally generates and emits radio frequency energy by radiation or induction. This term generally means "radio transmitter.") the device is subject to certification requirements of Part 15. The device on Ebay is clearly marketed to the public.

In addition, the device on Ebay clearly is intended to cause interference to other radio services. This is covered in Part 15 also specifically 15.5 (b) and (c):

Subpart A--General

Sec. 15.5 General conditions of operation.

(a) Persons operating intentional or unintentional radiators shall not be deemed to have any vested or recognizable right to continued use of any given frequency by virtue of prior registration or certification of equipment, or, for power line carrier systems, on the basis of prior notification of use pursuant to Sec. 90.63(g) of this chapter.
(b) Operation of an intentional, unintentional, or incidental radiator is subject to the conditions that no harmful interference is caused and that interference must be accepted that may be caused by the operation of an authorized radio station, by another intentional or unintentional radiator, by industrial, scientific and medical (ISM) equipment, or by an incidental radiator.
(c) The operator of a radio frequency device shall be required to cease operating the device upon notification by a Commission representative that the device is causing harmful interference. Operation shall not resume until the condition causing the harmful interference has been corrected.
(d) Intentional radiators that produce Class B emissions (damped wave) are prohibited.

To make sure you understand what is meant by harmful interference:

• 15.3 (m) Harmful interference. Any emission, radiation or induction that endangers the functioning of a radio navigation service or of other safety services or seriously degrades, obstructs or repeatedly interrupts a radiocommunications service operating in accordance with this Chapter.

>>Cite me a reference to back up your claim if it is > > illegal.

I will make it as simple as I can for you:

The device is capable of operation in the CB band which brings it under Part 15 or Part 95. The device is marketed to the public. Devices marketed to the public must be certified according to Part 15 or Part 95. This device is not certified = illegal

Do you not see this?

It would certainly be a improvement to what your doing now. Might even get ya laid, and put a happy smile on your face, and then you would only care about the important things, like gettin low on beer or VO Whiskey.

Whooooo again .... Double standard!

I am sure some where squirmed away in the FCC rules there's a clause or attorney talk for not purposely jamming thee neighbor. I don't have the time to look it up, I have to things to do and people to see. Talk about the she type of people, in short shorts and tank tops... Whooo hoooo! I am out here. Now there is a man who has it together.

On the rare and selected occasions when I had the coins, the VO was replaced with Crown Royal. Used to get it at a local saloon run by a Canadian whose only claim to fame was scoring the winning goal in the longest NHL game ever played (the 1940 Stanley Cup that went to seven overtimes). One nite a local yoyo ordered Crown Royal and Coke; he threw him into the street.

When you get to your fifties, if it don't get you paid, laid, or fed it is really difficult to maintain that sense of righteous indignation.

Hi Jeff,

You seem all caught up worrying about "legalities" lately. :)

Wow, QRM, you are good at creating straw men! Ever consider a career in politics? You'd be right at home.

Come back here in a year or two and tell us about all the enforcement actions that have taken place against freebanders. I'd bet you your $385.75 ($75 + $6 + $25 * 12 + $4.75) that the situation won't be any different than it is now - the FCC isn't interested in freebanders. There aren't that many freebanders out there in the US left - Do you not see this?

But go on hoping, QRM, if that will make you feel better.

Just in case you guys did not know that linears are illegal on CB....

RULE 10 - Power Output
{A} Your CB station transmitter power output must not exceed the following values under any conditions:
AM [Amplitude Modulation] - 4 watts carrier power [CP]
SSB [Single Side-Band] - 12 watts peak envelope power [PEP]
{B} If you need more information about the power rule, see Part 95/
Subpart E.
{C} Use of a transmitter which has carrier [CP] or peak envelope power [PEP]in excess of that authorized voids your authority to operate the station.
RULE 11 - Linear Amplifiers
{A} You may not attach the following items (power amplifiers) to your type-accepted CB transmitter in any way:
[1] External radio frequency [RF] power amplifiers, also called linear amplifiers, or linears;
or
[2] Any other devices which, when used with a radio transmitter as a signal source, are capable of amplifying the signal.
{B} There are no exceptions to this rule and use of a power amplifier voids your authority to operate the station.
{C} The FCC will presume you have used a linear or other external [RF]
power amplifier if-
[1] It is in your possession or on your premises; and [2] There is OTHER EVIDENCE that you have operated your CB station with more power than allowed by CB Rule 10.
{D} Paragraph C above in this section does not apply if you hold a license in another radio service (HAM, etc.) which allows you to operate an external RF power amplifier.

I don't see what my having a ticket yet or not has to do with the fact that illegal CB amps and freebanders are taking quite a bashing in

If you think that's quite a bashing, well, you just go right on thinking so.
What do I care? Go...please... If the Hams and others that frequent that group want you to hang around there and tell them things any fool should already know, more power to you. You'll have the thing you've been striving for. An audience that cares. Most here simply don't care, period.

No worries at all, my brother. Simply pointing out that Mr. N8wwm is playing both sides of the fence. Spouting his hatred for illegal amplifiers and "Free Banders" on one hand, then, selling illegal transmitters designed to obstruct legal communications on the other. If you can't see the hypocracy in that, well, then I really don't know what to say to you.

The guy did not want to transmit and receive AT THE SAME TIME, he wanted to be able to use a radio to receive with while the other was not transmitting. It is very easy to do it requires a relay and a keying circuit that grounds the receiving radios feedline while the other is transmitting, I do not suggest it because of the overload on the receiving radio but it can be done and has been done. It is vice versa for the other radio to transmit it just requires some playing to disable the keying circuit in the transmitting radio, vice versa for the other radio as well.

Read the rules, just like the Anti's say that using an amp is not legal, they never say that it is Illegal to own one. And furthermore, it is only legal for a ham to build and sell one wideband amp a year. So if every ham op built and sold one how many amps would be on the market, and just about no thought about quality in filtering. really love it when the ham next door keys up and wipes out the tv, through all my attempts at shielding.

Hi Aaron.

If the CBer is unlicenced, they are already breaking the law. So why should they worry about one more law?

Reading through the posts on this ng, it would seem that Amp use in the US is not only more common, but higher power amps are in use. In the UK, Zetagi B300s are fairly common, and 25 to 100 Watt amps are cheap, and so about the most common used.

The biggest amp I have come across being used for UK CB is 1KW, and this was an extreme case.
On the issue of inteference, this person was in a very small property, with neighbours jut feet away to the left, right, and behind. To the front, about 200 ft away, was a Police station!! This police station was also a main police communications station for the area.
The CBer checked around, and was only intefering with ONE neighbour - on their TV. When the system was tuned correctly (impedances), this was cured totally. NO filters were needed!!!

So what did he use all this power for? When DXing, he would switch the amp on to call for a DX or to make a first reply to a DX call. This ensured that HE would be the one heard over all the others calling. After making the contact, he would switch it off, or reduce the power to the minimum. Yes this was rather rude (like queue jumping), but by leaving the amp off at other times he reduced the chance of falling out with local CBers due to "bleedover", and gave others a chance to get in.

There are a few who use amps constantly, sometimes just to talk local.
Some CBers use power mics, and splatter 2 channels each way. The worst offenders for splatter are often women (voice charactaristics), and FM creates more side frequencies, and wider sidebands than AM.
All new CBs are now Xtal filtered to conform with the "adjacent channel" spec, and so overdeviation will often distort on these CBs.

Regards,

Mr. Brainbuster

Maybe the manufacturers use two extra dB refs...

dBdl - Gain compared to a dummy load dBbs - I think we all know what the bs is referenced to!!

Short answer, a very good Canadian made by Seagram.

The most common progression made by imbibers is from sweet to dry. The rookie starts with bourbon and sweet, rum and coke, or godhelpusall some fruity or creamy mess. At some point he tires of this and progresses thru CC (Canadian Club) and Seven (Up) and finally ditches the sweet soda and takes up drinking his booze with water or over ice or simply neat. He then discovers VO which can be taken in a civilized manner but tends to get lost in mixers. At some point he progresses to scots whisky which is a different story entirely or to mortunis which to me have all the taste sensation of napalm and gin makes me sneeze; I recommend vodka and Schweppes bitter lemon as a summer quaff for those who can't stand gin or tonic. The Irish do a good job as well.

Canadian whiskeys are at least half rye-based and have some government aging standards so even the worst of them are not the paint-removers common in the US although at one time CC was perhaps the most bootlegged brand in the US. Canada has the advantage of never suffering thru Probibition so their standards never fell to the level of some brands that were big in the WW2 era.

We have always suspected Jay of having more class and taste than he lets on. His choice of nectars is one more sign.

It is said that to a carpenter with only a hammer all problems look like nails. Aaron is simply obsessed with 'cleaning up' CB and will turn anything and everyone into soldiers in his private war. The Tidy Bowl Brigade have been laughed off the amateur groups and generally exist here as irritants.

Having enough irritants in my life, I found the kill file and a beta-test program called, for the moment, Bozo*Flush, to be invaluable.

Who makes the boards now?

There are many of the Uniden board Cobras in this country. They are one of the main choices for the UK "freebanders". They are still well liked, and fetch a fairly good price for their age. Unfortunately many have been butchered by "rig doctors" who cannot even solder without burning the tracks.

Most of the more recent SSB CBs coming into the UK are now Lincolns, Rangers, G. Plutos, etc.

If I were a bootlegger we'd have something in common. Too bad we don't.

Sorry to disappoint you bloodhounds, but the two marine radios are gone, the Icom M710 SSB sold to a cruiser, the Uniden MC120 went into my Uncle (Fernald's) boston whaler. The Cobra 19DX is in a box in the cellar. I still have the Bearcat scanner along with the AR-3000AB; receives everything from 160 meters to SWBC, ham, cb, AND VHF marine frequencies.

CB in the US does not require formal licensing anymore. Your use of the equipment assumes your acceptance of FCC regs.

<story about "considerate" UK Cber using ILLEGAL 1KW amp "only for a few seconds" SNIPPED>

Thanks for the story buster, I'm not buying it.

It's just one more lame excuse given to justify your illegal CB crap and make you feel better about yourself when you break the law.

Radio laws and regulations don't suit you? Change them instead of making excuses for not obeying them.

Don't like criticism in a public forum? Stop defending criminal behavior and people won't have any reason to get on your case.

I don't know about best, but I have a Cobra 45WXST that I use on my motorcycle. It works pretty good. I have no complaints.

Make sure you coordinate your headset and antenna setup with your choice of radio. Not all are compatible connector wise.

That's not completely true. Antennas have been found to be the source of harmonic generation too. What happens is one or more of the electrical connections gets corroded. The now corroded "part" of the connection then tends to act like a diode. The halfwave rectified RF is rich in harmonic content, and will radiate from the antenna. You can be running everything legal and still be zapping the neighbor's TV. That's why Hams, and serious CB operators in the know, keep a close eye on their antenna connections, making sure they stay clean and corrosion free.

QRM,

By what process of convoluted logic do you conclude that freebanders are the next target of FCC enforcement from the current enforcement actions? Creating straw men by talking about Hurricanes is non sequitur. You know that there is a chance of a hurricane affecting your area each year by looking at the history of hurricanes. Show me any history in the FCC enforcement actions that points to the FCC targeting freebanders. The only logical conclusion is that if you are a Ham radio operator who operates illegally on the Ham bands or if you are an unlicensed operator that operates illegally on the Ham bands, you have something to worry about. The radio-cop's Christ Savior Riley's mission is to clean up the Ham bands from pressure by the Ham radio community. The frequency range between 27.415 and 27.995 is not a Ham band. There is very little activity in the US between 24.415 and 27.995 - not enough to justify committing the FCC's resources to targeting freebanders. CB radio operators who interfere with the neighbor's electronic equipment or who splatter into the 10 meter band are a different story. There is a certain probability that if you are causing interference that you will get a letter from the FCC. Of what little activity there is between 27.415 and 27.995, most are sideband operators whose stations seem to be very clean, unlike the AM operators on the legal 40 channels. IMO, the freebanders that are running clean stations between 27.415 and 27.995 have very little to worry about from the FCC.

Mmmm, let me guess... You radio cops know that the FCC is going to come after freebanders because you called Miss Cleo the Psychic for a free reading and she told you so...

Well, it sounds silly, but it'd at least help to keep your radio equipment from going "zot"...

Or you could do like the kitchen witches do and plant a bunch of Valerian Root around the base of your tower... If it doesn't keep lightning away, it would at least help you out when you're having a bout of insomnia...

I appreciate you posting that post below where do I accuse you of being Jason in that post? You admit you posted under the name Frenchy, a few minutes later a post shows up from web tv, what conclusion would you draw since you have admitted to being Frenchy, that must mean you posted the other messages Right? Where do I accuse Twisty of being Frenchy? Post the outright accusation, not what you think I mean.

I was a bit strong. No, not intended as AKC (nor the American Kennel Club either!). There have been some problems on HF with unlicensed operators (I'm talking about bands longer in wavelength than 12 meters - plus, of course, 10 meters). However, there is a lot of truth about the FCC monitoring the ham bands a whole lot more than in the past. To be honest, I owned a transmitter about a month before I got my ticket - but did not transmit (hey, that was a novice license back when novices HAD to be crystal controlled!). A lot of equipment back then consisted of a seperate transmitter and receiver - rather than the common (nowadays) transceiver. My apologies to you and Kenneth.

Thats why I always run my coax through PVC with sealed ends, and I use a sealer on my connections that is conductive.

Why OG didn't they teach you back in the late 50' early Sixties to read &

I thought schooling back then was supposed to be so good.

"Think I found him ...."

Please, you rambled on for dozens of posts that you were claiming I was him. Boy I sure hope that they come up with something fast for Alzheimer's, you need it.

You admit you posted under the name

"I could care less if twisty or any other web-tver is posting from the frenchy account"

Basic accusation from you, and there's the proof you asked for.

You are as much a liar as you claim I am, so in short you are one hell of an old grumpy hypocritical man.

Oh by the way, I sent e-mail to Oldman@aol.com explaining to him you were using his screen nic.

He wasn't too happy, but I sent along enough references for him to use.......... "If" he so desires.

You can try looking at Larsen antennas. They have a line of low band(27 to 30 MHz) NMO mount antennas. See the link below, and select "mobile" at the top of the page.

Whichever one matches your vehicle's paint job. They're both base-loaded "signal stealers." That's to say, the difference in performance is negligible. Hope thar helps.

P.S. I realize that it's probably too big for what you want, but a nine ft. whip presents an audibly noticeable difference when swapped for a base-loaded mobile. (Pick your brand.) Good luck.

Hey, I just point these things out.
So now you are introducing yourself as Jim. Ok, Jim. Many are quite aware who is who despite the drag queen personas by Dogie and playing dressup by the other 2, but tell me, why concern yourself with a private message board? Why does it bother you what an individual does with their own cb board? Why does it upset you that cb is free for the masses and so is the skip? CONSPIRACY, n. [L. See Conspire.]

1. A combination of men for an evil purpose; an agreement between two or more persons, to commit some crime in concert; particularly, a combination to commit treason, or excite sedition or insurrection against the government of a state; a plot; as a conspiracy against the life of a king; a conspiracy against the government.

I don't care what he does with the messages, I was letting James know what had happened. He can delete whatever he choses off his CB Message board

If it is done between the legal channels and it is done barefoot I don't have a problem with it. It is a natural phenomenum I see nothing wrong with that but you know It is not done barefoot, how do i know Werent you just talking about the tidy bowl and we all know That is the Competition channel only the strong survive, how can you talk barefoot there?

Yes I do... thanks. And I'm happy to share the information, how about that..?

:> : wanted to talk on one channel, while monitoring a common channel.

:> Yep, there are two ways... but both have conditions.

Actually, there are two major approaches to take, depends on your actual operational requirements.

: Skipp, could you do this for him and if so at what cost?

Yes, I could do it for him, but I would encourage him to build it for himself as my labor is rather expensive. If he built it himself, he'd learn quite a bit more than just paying someone to do it. Then finding anyone who would be able to do it right is one matter, doing it for a practical one off price is a whole different story.

Depending on the users needs, the parts could be salvaged from a junk box or bought new. For a home brew box, probably less than $50 ... buy all the stuff new, probably less than $150

: Not feasible for the average Cber.

Why not..? All the information should be available in an ARRL Handbook if you can sit down and put the required circuits on one paper. A pin diode TR switch circuit can be down loaded off my http://sonic.ucdavis.edu server amateur radio page. Common TR circuits can be lifted from a lot of radio circuits.

I made a similar box long before I got a ham ticket, you can too...

: Skipp, At 27 mhz how big would the cavities be ?

Depends on the power levels and frequency seperation... and the requirements - ie circuit operation desired by the person using the circuit. You can expect most circuit requirements can be met if your goals are realistic (not Tandy... arr arr).

The size of the cavities that one might use for a circuit can be a trade off. Less Q required means one can use folded resonant cavities which are not too large. You need to stop thinking full size repeater duplexer cavities... Yes, low band resonant cavities can get quite large, buy you don't have to use monster parts. Resonant circuits can be made from lumped value parts.

: Would this be feasible for the average or even above average Cber?

Sure, any one using their brain could make one by just doing the home work first. An evening or two in a Handbook and some questions to various people on the news groups, you'd have a working circuit and less TV time under your belt.

: And at what cost?

Depends on where you live and how good a scrounger you are. I could probably do it from salvaged parts and be required to buy less than $20 in parts I may not have in my parts bins. New parts total would be less than $150 to $200 if you have no "junk bin."

: Basically what he is looking for is a setup for a repeater system, he : wants to listen on one freq and transmit on another at the same time
: from the same antenna. A duplexer /cavity filter would be needed

His requirements don't automaticly assume a repeater circuit. And you can not assume he will operate seperate frequencies. One needs more information to describe the actual device the operator might need.

Everyone jumps on the repeater duplexer band wagon, then locks their heads down so they can't envision anything else that would do a similar job. There are many ways to make that circuit up, unlock your head and look around. Ask questions and we will answer them as time allows.

If he's just running seperate radios on two different frequencies, same antenna... that doesn't mean repeater operation. One can use a duplexer type circuit, but I think you'll find a standard Band Pass Band Reject layout wont play, the frequencies are too close to each other.

There are circuits that will play, just different from what you might think. More supplied operational specifics, we can get closer to a circuit that will do what he wants, if his goals are real. More information is required...

I like the K-40 better. it seems well built and I've measure it's angle of radiation as slightly lower than the Wilson unit. For average talking I want a lower angle of radiation as I don't often hear airplanes with cb radios on the air.

There really wasn't much difference, but the K-40 worked better for me when directly compared to the Wilson. A 22 mile distant test station reported less than an S-Unit differnce on his calibrated meter. Still, that could be almost 3dB for me and that's enough to favor the K-40.

PS> In case you don't know:

RULE 9 - Equipment
{A} You must use an FCC type accepted CB transmitter at your CB station. You can identify an FCC type accepted transmitter by the 'type acceptance'label placed on it by the manufacturer. You may examine a list of type-accepted equipment at any FCC Field Office or at FCC Headquarters. Use of a transmitter which is not FCC type-accepted voids your authority to operate the station.
{B} You must not make, or have made, any internal modifications to a type-accepted CB transmitter. (*read Rule 25) Any internal modification to a type-accepted CB transmitter cancels the type-acceptance, and use of such a transmitter voids your authority to operate the station.
RULE 10 - Power Output
{A} Your CB station transmitter power output must not exceed the following values under any conditions:
AM [Amplitude Modulation] - 4 watts carrier power [CP]
SSB [Single Side-Band] - 12 watts peak envelope power [PEP]
{B} If you need more information about the power rule, see Part 95/
Subpart E.
{C} Use of a transmitter which has carrier [CP] or peak envelope power [PEP]in excess of that authorized voids your authority to operate the station.
RULE 11 - Linear Amplifiers
{A} You may not attach the following items (power amplifiers) to your type-accepted CB transmitter in any way:
[1] External radio frequency [RF] power amplifiers, also called linear amplifiers, or linears;
or
[2] Any other devices which, when used with a radio transmitter as a signal source, are capable of amplifying the signal.

{B} There are no exceptions to this rule and use of a power amplifier voids your authority to operate the station.
{C} The FCC will presume you have used a linear or other external [RF] power amplifier if-
[1] It is in your possession or on your premises; and
[2] There is OTHER EVIDENCE that you have operated your CB station with more power than allowed by CB Rule 10.
{D} Paragraph C above in this section does not apply if you hold a license in another radio service (HAM, etc.) which allows you to operate an external RF power amplifier.

Whew! You come on strong, Phil C!

Just to clear the record, I am in law enforcement at the Federal level. Our organization is charged with enforcing the DO NOT REMOVE THIS TAG law on mattress products and pillows. As I am sure you are aware, this is a very serious problem--right below freebanding on the scale of offenses of interest to your Government.

Mattress and pillow compliance is extremely difficult to enforce, since the tag is obscured by sheets and pillow cases. Often, we are alerted by a guest who detected that his/her host has removed the tags. Occasionally, we get children to turn in a parent.

We operate with a low profile. No R.A.I.N. reports, here! As you can appreciate, snooping around somebody's mattress is a very personal issue.

Now, back to CB. If you come to the attention of the FCC, they will build a case without your being aware of it until it is too late. If you're causing a problem, and and at the same time you are found operating on a non-CB frequency, that fact becomes part of the evidence which is collected.

I wish I could make it more complicated so you'd be impressed with my psychic powers. But that's all there is to it.

Meanwhile, here's some advice from my area of expertise: If the tag falls off your mattress (or is torn off accidentially), SAVE THE TAG. Our lab crew can match and analyze the disconnect line and probably can clear your good name.

Oh My, Dave,

You have beat this horse to death. It's time to give the poor creature a decent burial, for "dost thou not realize that by now he stinketh?"

The issue of restrictions upon some of our behaviors, particularly radio, is NOT to suppress the citizenry, but to give the most number of people the most access to the radio spectrum while minimizing interference, setting guidelines for what service uses what segment of said spectrum, and making "fences" so Miss Daisy's cow doesn't wander into your yard and trample your garden. That's what happens if the radio spectrum was not administered, or regulated by someone--somebody's radio "garden" gets trampled, and anarchy results.

You are either trolling, or you are seriously lacking in understanding of the technical limitations, the need for regulation, and the characteristics of RF propagation that makes international guidelines for the use of radio necessary.
I suspect that it is a little of both, and, in reality, the trolling is a causitive effect of your lack of understanding of RF issues.

First of all, the USA does not own the airwaves. The issues of their use are intertwined with even more serious matters of international relations. IOW, we have to get along with our neighbors, which is the entire world community. The results of our need for international harmony are treaties. These treaties have been crafted, rewritten, and refined over the last 80 years or so, and we as a Nation have agreed with our neighbors to regulate our uses of the ether to conform to those treaties. The Communications Act, and the subsequent creation and re-designing of FCC, was much influenced by said agreements. This is really the bottom line--the reason we have rules and regulations, administered by a Federal agency, that guide our use of radio.

Your posts give away the "real" agenda of many CB operators, especially those who operate in defiance of FCC regulations. That agenda is, if the truth is known, the abolishment of any and all regulations that "restrict" the operations of those who feel that the parameters granted to the CB service should be extended to no regulation at all. It is also a narrow view, that, when extensively examined, would actually hamper, not only the other users of radio, but the same CBers who would want to be able to operate anyway, anyhow, anywhere they want. Back to the cow thing: What if the government said Miss Daisy can have a cow, but she can't put up a fence, or otherwise restrain the animal? You can have a garden, but you cannot restrain the cow from trampling your vegetables, or sampling your corn stalks? It is rather simplistic, but that is what would happen if an entire population, at least those most interested in radio, were allowed to just grab a radio, crank up 10,000 watts, and block out the local airport tower. Let's face it, the majority of CBers are just average folks who have no real knowledge of how their operations could harm someone else if such were the conditions of radio useage. NO, they aren't stupid, they're just not trained. Same way with a Doctor who knows nothing about repairing cars.

What we have now, and are fortunate to have, works quite well. Each service with a need has its own "garden" within which to do its thing--without worrying about the neighbor's cow (radio) trampling (QRMing) his garden (his radio 'space').

You are also forgetting, with all that "communist" crap, that we have more freedom than most any country in the world. We should be grateful that we even HAVE a Citizens Band. That bad old FCC had to do a lot of convincing to the world community back in the 50s that a CB service on 27 mhz was OK since the treaties stipulated, and still do, that operations below 30 MHZ must be accompanied with proficiency in Morse Code. Again, there's where your 4 watt limit came from. There's where your 150 mile limit (155.5 now) came from. It is why it was to be a LOCAL use media. The fact that 27 MHZ can be a long haul band is actually immaterial. I hear people cursing on CB, and nothing says I have to answer them. Likewise, for good reasons, the law against "working" DX were enacted, and just because one hears it doesn't mean he has to answer it. Not doing so comes under the purvey of a R-E-S-P-O-N-S-I-B-L-E operator.

Finally, explain to me this: Why, under your premise of "communism", would allowing unregulated use of CB be "freedom"? IMHO, if such conditions of unbridled anarchy were to be, then YOUR freedom becomes some else's slavery.

Nonsense. I am simply expanding the discussion to its logical end. Personally, I am not as concerned with CB DXing on the legal 40 as I am with the thievery of frequencies beyond the legal 40 by people who have no right to them. Given that, if your purpose in asking my opinion about CB DXing is not to advance a questionable line of thought ("if lesser crimes are not complained about then ALL crimes cannot be complained about"), then what is it? My assumption (which will likely turn out to be correct) is that you are just another in a long line of scofflaws that attempt to convince me that no one cares about FCC rules being broken.

I have helped several people who have gotten into the hobby set their radios and antennas up. I have always stressed the importance of protecting from the elements. All too often the coax sets exposed to the elements, the vinyl gets brittle from the UV and cracks causing problems, especally if they have their towr seperated from the housse and the coax hanging in the wind. I always suggest the extra expense of burying the coax in the ground running it through the PVC they use to bury power/phone/cable lines in, and also to run the coax up the tower in PVC as well with an elbow at the top to keep moisture out, and to seal the end with the expanding foam in a can. This helps protect your coax from the elements, and prevents some joker from pinning your coax. If they are using an aluminum antenna such as the Maco ect. I also stress they not use galvanized screws in assembly, I have seen too many good setups get rotted away from the galvanic action.

1) Never transmit will more than 16 2sc2879's Buy a tube amp..it's cheaper
a) But if (5) 250 ac's are in your budget you really can have fun at McDonald's.

2) If it's possible for your mobile antenna to come in contact with a low tree branch. Never transmit with more then 1 KW...

3) Never transmit with your 3cx15000 while your behind Aaron Goobers car...you'll burn his hand. (Hey he will really be pissed when he can't masturbate) Also with all his free time, we'll see more stupid messages.
a) But if you do...make sure you have a HT with the local repeater programmed. I bet after a months that goober will find a new hobby

Note: ALWAYS Unscrew HT's Antenna while maul dropping

4) 100 watt slugs are not only for hams!!!! They work great for reflex...Only sell that slug AFTER you accidentally put it in forward.

Base Rules....

NONE...

Hints..

Never broadcast over 3kw for 30-60 minutes at a clip in the summer....

I know this is off topic but I can never get anyone to respond to me in the amateur groups because they are too busy having a pissing contest.

I recieved some email asking me and my emergency communications team members (REACT) to send letters of support to the FCC regarding the ARRL's proposal for 60 meter band allocations in Amateur service. Does anyone have any idea where I can find out the details on this proposal? I looked on the ARRL website but I see nothing on this.

"First off, it's a welcome breath of fresh air to see someone so passionate about something they believe and still maintain dignity, integrity, and respect for themself and others. Some points I would like your input on, you will find below."

From: joxendi@bellsouth.net (Jerry Oxendine)
Oh My, Dave,
You have beat this horse to death. It's time to give the poor creature a decent burial, for "dost thou not realize that by now he stinketh?"
The issue of restrictions upon some of our behaviors, particularly radio, is NOT to suppress the citizenry, but to give the most number of people the most access to the radio spectrum while minimizing interference, setting guidelines for what service uses what segment of said spectrum, and making "fences" so Miss Daisy's cow doesn't wander into your yard and trample your garden. That's what happens if the radio spectrum was not administered, or regulated by someone--somebody's radio "garden" gets trampled, and anarchy results.

"In principle, I can mostly agree. I believe the rules in place err on the side of caution, while at the same time are oudated. I have experienced the "anarchy" you have witnessed also, but I must postulate it is the minority who take this approach, (the amount of licensed amateurs willing to lend a hand vs. the few nocode "antiboys" among us here, is a prime numerical analogy) even though at times, due to the power levels used, it can certainly appear to be the case. I ask of you to consider for a moment, the number of cbers NOT heard, for each problematic incident you happen to encounter."

You are either trolling, or you are seriously lacking in understanding of the technical limitations, the need for regulation, and the characteristics of RF propagation that makes international guidelines for the use of radio necessary.
I suspect that it is a little of both, and, in reality, the trolling is a causitive effect of your lack of understanding of RF issues.
First of all, the USA does not own the airwaves. The issues of their use are intertwined with even more serious matters of international relations. IOW, we have to get along with our neighbors, which is the entire world community. The results of our need for international harmony are treaties. These treaties have been crafted, rewritten, and refined over the last 80 years or so, and we as a Nation have agreed with our neighbors to regulate our uses of the ether to conform to those treaties. The Communications Act, and the subsequent creation and re-designing of FCC, was much influenced by said agreements. This is really the bottom line--the reason we have rules and regulations, administered

by a Federal agency, that guide our use of radio.

"I don't tend to agree with that in it's entirety. I believe domestic money plays a much larger part than any concern over international harmony."

Your posts give away the "real" agenda of many CB operators, especially those who operate in defiance of FCC regulations. That agenda is, if the truth is known, the abolishment of any and all regulations that "restrict" the operations of those who feel that the parameters granted to the CB service should be extended to no regulation at all. It is also a narrow view, that, when extensively examined, would actually hamper, not only the other users of radio,
but the same CBers who would want to be able to operate anyway, anyhow, anywhere they want.

"I don't believe most cbers have an underlying secret agenda toward ANYTHING. For the most part, I feel cbers and hammies alike are an apathetic crowd when compared to any other collective organization of fans/hobbiests. Sure, winds of change may occur, but the cry has been wolf so long, no one pays it any mind."

Back to the cow thing: What if the government said Miss Daisy can have a cow, but she can't put up a fence, or otherwise restrain the animal? You can have a garden, but you cannot restrain the cow from tramp- ling your vegetables, or sampling your corn stalks? It is rather simplistic, but that is what would happen if an entire population, at least those most interested in radio, were allowed to just grab a radio, crank up 10,000 watts, and block
out the local airport tower.

"This is one of those stalemates where the line is drawn and no amount of educating or fair dialogue is going to change each other's views.
The emergency/airline scenario has been rehashed so many times it has lost it's effectiveness and shock value. Sure, it COULD happen, but what are the actual chances? You can reply with, "But even one time is too much.,"..when in reality, the odds are much greater of you dying by auto accident or stray bullet from a hoe down. So do we outlaw cars and guns for those reasons alone? Should there be laws against that? The fact that something "may" happen, when it fact it hasn't (sure, you may get a hammer or anti or 2 to argue with me and say an incident took place. Show me the money. Any identifiable media clip will do.) is no reason to make a law against it. Follow that train of thought and the laws that should be passed concerning "ifs" and "maybes" are infinite and boundless."

Let's face it, the majority of CBers are just average folks who have no real knowledge of how their operations could harm someone else if such were the conditions of radio useage. NO, they aren't stupid, they're just not trained.

"Nope. Some ARE stupid. And some are trained, much to the chagrin of certain hammies, even to the point where some of us know that no amount of bitching about laws is going to make our identical radio setup that you may have in your home bleed anymore on 11 meters than yours will on 10 with the same power."

Same way with a Doctor who knows nothing about repairing cars. What we have now, and are fortunate to have, works quite well. Each service with a need has its own "garden" within which to do its thing--without worrying about the neighbor's cow (radio) trampling (QRMing) his garden (his radio 'space').
You are also forgetting, with all that "communist" crap, that we have more free-dom than most any country in the world. We should be grateful that we even HAVE a Citizens Band. That bad old FCC had to do a lot of convincing to the world community back in the 50s that a CB service on 27 mhz was OK since the treaties stipulated, and still do, that operations below 30 MHZ must be accompanied with proficiency in Morse Code.

"The same generalizations can be made for nocodes then, no? I mean, all these new nocode techs don't give a damn about radio knowledge, they are just waiting for the code to be dropped altogether so they can go wherever they want with minimal effort. They want the same parameters that the "higher" hammies have but don't want to work for it or educate themselves to attain it. This attitude is detrimental to the hobby and is a hindrance to those working to better it. These are probably the same ones that come down to the cb channels and raise hell and start BS. Of course I don't believe that, Jerry, (except for the part of negativity reflecting poorly on both services) but the illustration shows the pendulum can swing both ways."

Again, there's where your 4 watt limit came from.

"I can appreciate that. Don't agree with it, but I can empathize with your position."

There's where your 150 mile limit (155.5 now) came from. It is why it was to be a LOCAL use media.

"Which was one of their first bad choices."

The fact that 27 MHZ can be a long haul band is actually immaterial.

"Oh no it isn't. You of all people should know the band that was chosen was POORLY selected with no real thought put into selection, location, or capabilities. It was a money issue then and it's a money issue now."

I hear people cursing on CB,

and nothing says I have to answer them. Likewise, for good reasons, the law against "working" DX were enacted, and just because one hears it doesn't mean he has to answer it. Not doing so comes under the purvey of a R-E-S- P-O-N-S-I-B-L-E operator.

"What can anyone say about you, Jerry? You apparently practice what you preach and who can take issue with that?"

Finally, explain to me this: Why, under your premise of "communism", would allowing unregulated use of CB be "freedom"? IMHO, if such conditions of unbridled anarchy were to be, then YOUR freedom becomes some else's slavery.

"As always, your position remains steadfast and you make it known in your own imitable way without being insulting. Take it away, Jerry."

like I said I can never get a response in the amateur groups, too many people arguing over crap, kinda like 3rd graders in schoolyard.
fortunately they are not representative of 98% of the amateurs on the radio. It never ceases to amaze me the trouble people can get themselves into on the internet, whether it is usenet, irc, whatever. Day after day I see fools on the Undernet IRC network help channels who come in fighting over who "owns" what channel, and of course I get tired of them flooding the channel, and the network, so I globaly ban them from the entire ntwork. To quote Mel Brooks "It's good to be king".

I can't let ICECOLD and Scott(Unit 69) do all the work at lightening the atmosphere.

(sad thing is, this sounds like some of the idiots I have seen hunting around here)

Hunting Buddies
A couple of Alabama hunters were out in the woods when one of them fell to the ground.

He didn't seem to be breathing; his eyes were rolled back in his head.

His friend took out his cell phone and called 911. He gasped to the operator, "My friend is dead! What can I do?"

The operator, in a calm soothing voice said, "Just take it easy. I can help.

First, we need to make sure he's really dead."

There was silence, then a shot was heard.

The guy's voice came back on the line.
He said, "OK, now what?"

The Pentagon recently found it had too many generals and offered an early retirement bonus. They promised any general who retired straight away his full annual benefits plus $10,000 for every inch measured in a straight line between any two points on the general's body, with the general getting to select any pair of points he wished.

The first man, an Air Force general, accepted. He asked the pension man to measure from the top of his head to the tip of his toes. Six feet. He walked out with a check of $720,000.
The second man, an Army general, asked them to measure from the tip of his outstretched hands to his toes. Eight feet. He walked out with a check for $960,000.

When the third general, a grizzled old Marine, was asked where to measure, he told the pension man: "From the tip of my penis to the bottom of my testicles." The pension man suggested that perhaps the Marine General might like to reconsider, pointing out the nice checks the previous two generals had received. The Marine insisted and the pension expert said that would be fine but that he'd better get the medical officer to do the measuring. The medical officer attended and asked the general to drop 'em. He did.

The medical officer placed the tape on the tip of the general's penis and began to work back. "My God!" he said. "Where are your testicles?" The general replied, "In Vietnam."

Jay,

I think I told you about my friend that has a D201, hand wired, has whorled maple for the sides, clean and like new inside and out. It probably has less than 10 hours on it total! He would sell it, but the price is steep. Yes, it is worth it, tho. It would be a beautiful collector's item in the shack--even if you never turned it on. This radio would be a shame to hack or mod. It shines like it just came out of the box.

You are the first one I have ever read that actually understands the directivity and characteristics of dual antennas--especially where it concerns smaller vehicles! LOL! Have you ever seen dual antennas on the mirrors of an S10?
THAT is funny. There is NO way for antennas 5-6 feet apart to be "co-phased"!

NOT SO unless they are on a tractor trailer rig. Where you get the forward lobe on 18 wheelers is due to the trailer. Yes, it does work on a big rig.

Um, not quite. Mr H started out with the Amateur Service. During the last 3 years, he has presented forums at various gatherings and locations, including hamfests outlining his intentions. He even spoke about FCC being "AWOL" for the last 10 years which made things worse, both in CB and Amateur. The next phase was to defend the 10 meter line--which is beginning now. When the truckers "get the message" that they are not welcome on 28.085, etc. then you will begin to hear about more enforcement against other forms of illegal activity. That is the way it was explained to me.

I am not going to get into condemnation of "freebanders", but there really is no such thing as a "freeband". These frequencies ARE assigned to various entities, either as voice, digital, or backup frequencies. That is the thing about this: These stations don't necessarily transmit for long times. It may be a burst of data, or a short voice transmission or exchange. Oh, yes, they are there, but how could an illegal station even hear them when their style of DXing consists of LONG, LOUD, and Proud, all knobs at flank speed? Believe what you like, but what I hear is a whole lot different.

Before the Federal Communications Commission

Washington, D.C. 20554

In the Matter of)
Klaus D. Kramer, KA5NUP [G]) File No. EB-01-DL-0345
Oklahoma City, OK) NAL/Acct.No. 200132500001

Released: July 13, 2001
By the Enforcement Bureau, Dallas Office:

I. INTRODUCTION

1. In this Notice of Apparent Liability for Forfeiture, we find that Klaus D. Kramer, violated Section 301 of the Communications Act of 1934 ("Act"), as amended,[1] by operating a radio station on Citizens Band frequencies without Commission authorization. We conclude that Klaus D. Kramer is apparently liable for a forfeiture in the amount of nine thousand five hundred dollars ($9,500).

II. BACKGROUND
2. On January 20, 2001, the FCC's Enforcement Bureau's Communications and Crisis Management Center received a telephone call complaining about a Citizens Band operator in the Oklahoma City area operating with excessive power and using the pseudonym "Bamm Bamm".

3. On February 21, 2001, two Commission agents in the Oklahoma City, Oklahoma area observed transmissions on Citizens Band channel 19 (27.185 MHz) with the operator using the pseudonym "Bamm Bamm". Using an FCC radio direction-finding vehicle, the agents determined that the transmissions emanated from the residence of Klaus D. Kramer in Grady County, Oklahoma. An abrupt increase in signal strength was noted corresponding to the operator transmitting a statement that he was turning his "power back on."

4. On February 23, 2001, two FCC agents in the Oklahoma City, Oklahoma area observed a series of transmissions on Citizens Band channel 19 (27.185 MHz) each with a male voice and repeating a message. A series of other transmissions were observed on the same channel (CB channel 19) each with a female voice repeating a different message. Using an FCC radio direction-finding vehicle, an FCC agent determined that one of the transmissions emanated from 1211 N. Shartel Avenue, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. FCC agents using radio direction-finding vehicles determined that the other transmissions emanated from Mike's Cycle Shop, a business owned by Klaus D. Kramer and located at 2212 SW 29th Street, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. The Commission agents conducted an inspection at 2212 SW 29th Street, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma and determined that Klaus Kramer was using an uncertified Citizens Band transmitter installed inside the casing of an Industrial/Business UHF two-way transceiver. The output of the CB transmitter was connected to a model "Dixie Lander 3" external radio frequency power amplifier. This system was automatically activated upon reception of a tone coded signal on 469.575 MHz, an Industrial/Business Pool frequency authorized for other purposes to Klaus D. Kramer d.b.a. Mikes Cycle Shop under license WPHP749.

5. Immediately following the inspection at 2212 SW 29th Street, the agents conducted an inspection at 1211 N. Shartel Avenue and determined that Klaus D. Kramer was using a modified Realistic Navaho CB transmitter that was connected to a "DX-400" external radio frequency power amplifier. Installed internally to the CB transmitter was an integrated circuit chip with the male voice message digitally recorded and a UHF receiver that automatically activated the CB transmitter upon reception of a tone coded signal on 469.575 MHz, an Industrial/Business Pool frequency authorized for other purposes to Klaus D. Kramer d.b.a. Mikes Cycle Shop under WPHP749. The agents verbally warned Klaus D. Kramer that use of an external radio frequency power amplifier and/or a modified CB transmitter voided his authority to operate a CB station, that such operation violated Section 301 of the Act, and advised him of the penalties for unlicensed operation. Klaus D. Kramer admitted to making the transmissions on February 21, 2001 utilizing an "Afterburner" model external radio frequency power amplifier. Furthermore, Klaus D. Kramer admitted to making by remote control the transmissions on February 23, 2001 using external radio frequency power amplifiers connected to the non-certified transmitters which he admitted modifying. Klaus D. Kramer, as owner of the equipment, voluntarily relinquished the equipment to the FCC agents.

6. In March 1998 and October 1999, agents of the Commission's Dallas Office determined that Klaus D. Kramer had committed similar violations.

III. DISCUSSION

7. Section 301 of the Act sets forth generally that no person shall use or operate any apparatus for the transmission of energy of communications or signals by radio within the United States except under and in accordance with the Act and with a license[2]. Pursuant to Section 307(e) of the Act, Section 95.404 authorizes operation of a Citizens Band (CB) station without individual licenses in accordance with the rules in Part 95, Subpart D of the Commission's Rules. However, Section 95.409(b) of the Commission's Rules voids individual authority to operate a CB station under Section 95.404 if the operator utilizes a certificated CB transmitter with internal modifications. Moreover, Section 95.411 of the Commission's Rules voids individual authority to operate a CB station if the operator utilizes an external radio frequency power amplifier.

8. Based on the evidence before us, we find that on February 21 and 23, 2001, Klaus D. Kramer repeatedly[3] and willfully[4] violated Section 301 of the Act by operating radio transmitters without Commission authorization.

9. Pursuant to The Commission's Forfeiture Policy Statement and Amendment of Section 1.80 of the Rules to Incorporate the Forfeiture Guidelines, 12 FCC Rcd 17087 (1997), recon. denied, 15 FCC Rcd 303 (1999) ("Forfeiture Policy Statement"), the base forfeiture amount is $10,000 for unlicensed operation. In assessing the monetary forfeiture amount, we must also take into account the statutory factors set forth in Section 503(b)(2)(D) of the Act, which include the nature, circumstances, extent, and gravity of the violation(s), and with respect to the violator, the degree of culpability, any history of prior offenses, ability to pay, and other such matters as justice may require.[5] Klaus D. Kramer's violation was willful and repeated. However, a reduction in this forfeiture amount by $500 is warranted based on Klaus D. Kramer's voluntary relinquishment of the offending non-certified transmitting equipment. Applying the Forfeiture Policy Statement and statutory factors to the instant case, a $9,500 forfeiture is warranted.

ARRL Petitions for New 60-Meter Amateur Band
NEWINGTON, CT, Jul 26, 2001--A petition filed this week by the ARRL could result in a new high-frequency band for US amateurs. The ARRL has asked the FCC to allocate 5.250 to 5.400 MHz to the Amateur Service on a domestic (US-only), secondary basis.

The League told the FCC that the new band would aid emergency communication activities by filling a "propagation gap" between 80 and 40 meters. "There are times on certain paths when a frequency in the 80-meter band is too low, and a frequency in the 40-meter band is too high for reliable ionospheric propagation," the ARRL said in its petition. "This is especially a problem on paths between the United States and the Caribbean, and the propagation 'gap' between the 80- and 40-meter bands occasionally disrupts emergency communications during hurricanes and severe weather disasters."

The ARRL Board of Directors gave its blessing to the proposal at its July 20-21 meeting in Rocky Hill, Connecticut. It was filed with the FCC on July 24, but it has not yet been put on public notice. Even if the petition finds favor with the FCC, it's likely to be several years before the new band actually becomes available.

As proposed by the ARRL, amateurs General class and higher would be permitted to operate phone, data, image and RTTY on the new band running maximum authorized power. No mode-specific subbands were proposed.

The ARRL said a new 150-kHz allocation at 5 MHz also could relieve substantial overcrowding that periodically occurs on 80 and 40. If the new band is approved, hams would have to avoid interfering with--and accept interference from--current occupants of the spectrum, as they already do on 30 meters. The band 5.250 to 5.450 MHz now is allocated to Fixed and Mobile services on a co-primary basis in all three ITU regions.

The ARRL's petition cites the success of the League's WA2XSY experimental operation in the 60-meter band, carried out since 1999. "Results show that amateur stations can co-exist with incumbent services, and that the propagation paths between the United States and Caribbean countries, where much hurricane disaster relief communications are conducted, are well-served by operation at 5 MHz," it states. The WA2XSY operation also confirmed a difference in communication reliability among 80, 60 and 40 meters "with the 5.2 MHz band frequently the most reliable" the ARRL said.

The ARRL said it determined from a search of frequency files that the band 5.250 to 5.400 MHz has the fewest assignments in the US and that the total number of assignments in the band from 5.1 to 5.45 MHz had significantly dropped over the past few years. The 150-kHz bandwidth is necessary, the ARRL said, to allow amateurs flexibility to determine an operating frequency over "a sufficiently wide range as to avoid interference to fixed and mobile services."

"An amateur allocation in this band would improve the Amateur Service's already exemplary record of providing emergency communications during natural disasters when even modern communications systems typically fail," the ARRL concluded. "HF Amateur stations are a necessary backbone in international disaster relief involving, for example, Caribbean countries, and the proposed allocation would provide seamless propagation path coverage between the United States and Caribbean nations, and the United States' own possessions and commonwealths there."

An amateur allocation in the vicinity of 5 MHz has long been an objective of the International Amateur Radio Union. The IARU's Administrative Council has approved a long-term goal of "a narrow allocation, even on a shared basis in the vicinity of 5 MHz."

The subject of an international 5 MHz Amateur Radio allocation is not on the agenda for World Radiocommunication Conference 2003, nor has it been proposed for subsequent WRCs. Proposals are pending in Europe for a band around 5 MHz, however, and the band 5.245 to 5.445 MHz is being studied as a possible candidate for the Amateur Service in the United Kingdom. Efforts are under way to get authorization for an experimental operation there.

A copy of the ARRL petition is available on the ARRL Web site:

Twist, I'd like to point out (I've said this before) that the technology back in the 50s was a LOT different from the technology today. Ever see one of those real old radios with a number of shortwave bands where 'police' was labeled around 2 or 3 MHz? Receivers were not particularly sensitive up on VHF/UHF and equipment there would have been EXPENSIVE. 27 MHz was the industrial (read 'junk') band (and amateur band). It was placed there likely to minimize propagation as much as possible while still being affordable. Back to the police - an antenna used in a mobil installation at 2 MHz or so is going to be REAL inefficient. Today, of course, the majority of police are up on UHF - with a range far exceeding what those old 2 MHz or so radios could ever hope to do, not to mention a lot more bandwidth to play with. (I would be curious to know what kind of range the police could get out of those things). While your point over the aircraft might be true (although aircraft communications have been interefered with at times - once by an plastic sealing machine from the place I work at), I suspect you might see what Jerry is talking about the day you are watching an important baseball or football game and suddenly the picture starts tearing and the audio gets scrambled. The picture is more complicated than amateur and citizens' band radio. Your talking public safety (fire, ambulance, police), commercial radio (FM and AM), television (yes, even satellite), cell phones, trunking radio, business radio, marine radio, distress signaling (yep, 500 KHz CW is gone - best hope no one jams the satellites - AND THAT HAS HAPPEND, although it wasn't CB radio), FRS, wireless local area networks, and more (yes, wireless digital cameras are here now). Heck, they even protect radio telescope sights (yes, some people need to look at extraterrestrial NOISE!). Jerry's point was, IMHO, well made. The radio spectrum has more demands placed on it every day. Big money certainly can sway some local decisions, but international agreements help protect various nations' interests and our FCC subdivides within those agreements to try and satisfy everyone. Not an easy task.

"First off, it's a welcome breath of fresh air to see someone so passionate about something they believe and still maintain dignity, integrity, and respect for themself and others. Some points I would like your input on, you will find below."

From: joxendi@bellsouth.net (Jerry Oxendine)
Oh My, Dave,
You have beat this horse to death. It's time to give the poor creature a decent

burial, for "dost thou not realize that by now he stinketh?"
The issue of restrictions upon some of our behaviors, particularly radio, is NOT to suppress the citizenry, but to give the most number of people the most access to the radio spectrum while minimizing interference, setting guidelines for what service uses what segment of said spectrum, and making "fences" so Miss Daisy's cow doesn't wander into your yard and trample your garden. That's what happens if the radio spectrum was not administered, or regulated by someone--somebody's radio "garden" gets trampled, and anarchy results.

"In principle, I can mostly agree. I believe the rules in place err on the side of caution, while at the same time are oudated. I have experienced the "anarchy" you have witnessed also, but I must postulate it is the minority who take this approach, (the amount of licensed amateurs willing to lend a hand vs. the few nocode "antiboys" among us here, is a prime numerical analogy) even though at times, due to the power levels used, it can certainly appear to be the case. I ask of you to consider for a moment, the number of cbers NOT heard, for each problematic incident you happen to encounter."

You are either trolling, or you are seriously lacking in understanding of the technical limitations, the need for regulation, and the characteristics of RF propagation that makes international guidelines for the use of radio necessary.
I suspect that it is a little of both, and, in reality, the trolling is a causitive effect of your lack of understanding of RF issues.
First of all, the USA does not own the airwaves. The issues of their use are intertwined with even more serious matters of international relations. IOW, we have to get along with our neighbors, which is the entire world community. The results of our need for international harmony are treaties. These treaties have been crafted, rewritten, and refined over the last 80 years or so, and we as a Nation have agreed with our neighbors to regulate our uses of the ether to conform to those treaties. The Communications Act, and the subsequent creation and re-designing of FCC, was much influenced by said agreements. This is really the bottom line--the reason we have rules and regulations, administered by a Federal agency, that guide our use of radio.

"I don't tend to agree with that in it's entirety. I believe domestic money plays a much larger part than any concern over international harmony."

Your posts give away the "real" agenda of many CB operators, especially those who operate in defiance of FCC regulations. That agenda is, if the truth is known, the abolishment of any and all regulations that "restrict" the operations of those who feel that the parameters granted to the CB service should be extended to no regulation at all. It is also a narrow view, that, when extensively examined, would actually hamper, not only the other users of radio, but the same CBers who would want to be able to operate anyway, anyhow, anywhere they want.

"I don't believe most cbers have an underlying secret agenda toward ANYTHING. For the most part, I feel cbers and hammies alike are an apathetic crowd when compared to any other collective organization of fans/hobbiests. Sure, winds of change may occur, but the cry has been wolf so long, no one pays it any mind."

Back to the cow thing: What if the government said Miss Daisy can have a cow, but she can't put up a fence, or otherwise restrain the animal? You can have a garden, but you cannot restrain the cow from tramp- ling your vegetables, or sampling your corn stalks? It is rather simplistic, but that is what would happen if an entire population, at least those most interested in radio, were allowed to just grab a radio, crank up 10,000 watts, and block out the local airport tower.

"This is one of those stalemates where the line is drawn and no amount of educating or fair dialogue is going to change each other's views. The emergency/airline scenario has been rehashed so many times it has lost it's effectiveness and shock value. Sure, it COULD happen, but what are the actual chances? You can reply with, "But even one time is too much.,"..when in reality, the odds are much greater of you dying by auto accident or stray bullet from a hoe down. So do we outlaw cars and guns for those reasons alone? Should there be laws against that? The fact that something "may" happen, when it fact it hasn't (sure, you may get a hammer or anti or 2 to argue with me and say an incident took place. Show me the money. Any identifiable media clip will do.) is no reason to make a law against it. Follow that train of thought and the laws that should be passed concerning "ifs" and "maybes" are infinite and boundless."

folks who have no real knowledge of how their operations could harm someone else if such were the conditions of radio useage. NO, they aren't stupid, they're just not trained.

"Nope. Some ARE stupid. And some are trained, much to the chagrin of certain hammies, even to the point where some of us know that no amount of bitching about laws is going to make our identical radio setup that you may have in your home bleed anymore on 11 meters than yours will on 10 with the same power."

Same way with a Doctor who knows nothing about repairing cars.
What we have now, and are fortunate to have, works quite well. Each service with a need has its own "garden" within which to do its thing--without worrying about the neighbor's cow (radio) trampling (QRMing) his garden (his radio 'space').
You are also forgetting, with all that "communist" crap, that we have more freedom than most any country in the world. We should be grateful that we even HAVE a Citizens Band. That bad old FCC had to do a lot of convincing to the world community back in the 50s that a CB service on 27 mhz was OK since the treaties stipulated, and still do, that operations below 30 MHZ must be accompanied with proficiency in Morse Code.

"The same generalizations can be made for nocodes then, no? I mean, all these new nocode techs don't give a damn about radio knowledge, they are just waiting for the code to be dropped altogether so they can go wherever they want with minimal effort. They want the same parameters that the "higher" hammies have but don't want to work for it or educate themselves to attain it. This attitude is detrimental to the hobby and is a hindrance to those working to better it. These are probably the same ones that come down to the cb channels and raise hell and start BS. Of course I don't believe that, Jerry, (except for the part of negativity reflecting poorly on both services) but the illustration shows the pendulum can swing both ways."

Again, there's where your 4 watt limit came from.

"I can appreciate that. Don't agree with it, but I can empathize with your position."

There's where your 150 mile limit (155.5 now) came from. It is why it was to be a LOCAL use media.

"Which was one of their first bad choices."

The fact that 27 MHZ can be a long haul band is actually immaterial.

"Oh no it isn't. You of all people should know the band that was chosen was POORLY selected with no real thought put into selection, location, or capabilities. It was a money issue then and it's a money issue now."

I hear people cursing on CB,

and nothing says I have to answer them. Likewise, for good reasons, the law against "working" DX were enacted, and just because one hears it doesn't mean he has to answer it. Not doing so comes under the purvey of a R-E-S- P-O-N-S-I-B-L-E operator.

"What can anyone say about you, Jerry? You apparently practice what you preach and who can take issue with that?"

Finally, explain to me this: Why, under your premise of "communism", would allowing unregulated use of CB be "freedom"? IMHO, if such conditions of unbridled anarchy were to be, then YOUR freedom becomes some else's slavery.

"As always, your position remains steadfast and you make it known in your own imitable way without being insulting. Take it away, Jerry."

So when did that have to do with the price of Tea, or if an antenna will work or not on 11m? Many 10m Ham antennas typically will tune up just fine on 11m, and it says so in the instructions too. For 10m you snip off a section of the whip, and for 11m you just leave it alone.

Did you even bother to go to the site and check it out? Larsen makes a large array of mobile antennas that cover a broad range of frequencies. Now how many manufactures out there make antenna using NMO mounts? That's want he asked about. I haven't seen anybody else post anything for him to look at yet, except me.

Gee. What Party "A" said made sense, and it is consistent with FCC Enforcement Logs. What kind of "facts" were you expecting?

Refreshing not to get the usual Nazi comments. Let's pick on ADD! Since folks with ADD usually have pretty good brains (Einstein, Edison, etc.), perhaps we are fortunate to have some ADD scattered about in the NG!

Meanwhile, let's move on to the mandatory insult phase of the thread:

Twistedhed <twistedhed@webtv.net> wrote in message news:9497-3B981539-26@storefull-127.iap.bryant.webtv.net...
"First off, it's a welcome breath of fresh air to see someone so passionate about something they believe and still maintain dignity, integrity, and respect for themself and others. Some points I would like your input on, you will find below."

From: joxendi@bellsouth.net (Jerry Oxendine)
Oh My, Dave,
You have beat this horse to death. It's time to give the poor creature a decent burial, for "dost thou not realize that by now he stinketh?"
The issue of restrictions upon some of our behaviors, particularly radio, is NOT to suppress the citizenry, but to give the most number of people the most access to the radio spectrum while minimizing interference, setting guidelines for what service uses what segment of said spectrum, and making "fences" so Miss Daisy's cow doesn't wander into your yard and trample your garden. That's what happens if the radio spectrum was not administered, or regulated by someone--somebody's radio "garden" gets trampled, and anarchy results.

"In principle, I can mostly agree. I believe the rules in place err on the side of caution, while at the same time are oudated. I have experienced the "anarchy" you have witnessed also, but I must postulate it is the minority who take this approach, (the amount of licensed amateurs willing to lend a hand vs. the few nocode "antiboys" among us here, is a prime numerical analogy) even though at times, due to the power levels used, it can certainly appear to be the case. I ask of you to consider for a moment, the number of cbers NOT heard, for each problematic incident you happen to encounter."

You are either trolling, or you are seriously lacking in understanding of the technical limitations, the need for regulation, and the characteristics of RF propagation that makes international guidelines for the use of radio necessary.

I suspect that it is a little of both, and, in reality, the trolling is a causitive effect of your lack of understanding of RF issues.
First of all, the USA does not own the airwaves. The issues of their use are intertwined with even more serious matters of international relations. IOW, we have to get along with our neighbors, which is the entire world community. The results of our need for international harmony are treaties. These treaties have been crafted, rewritten, and refined over the last 80 years or so, and we as a Nation have agreed with our neighbors to regulate our uses of the ether to conform to those treaties. The Communications Act, and the subsequent creation and re-designing of FCC, was much influenced by said agreements. This is really the bottom line--the reason we have rules and regulations, administered
by a Federal agency, that guide our use of radio.

"I don't tend to agree with that in it's entirety. I believe domestic money plays a much larger part than any concern over international harmony."

Your posts give away the "real" agenda of many CB operators, especially those who operate in defiance of FCC regulations. That agenda is, if the truth is known, the abolishment of any and all regulations that "restrict" the operations of those who feel that the parameters granted to the CB service should be extended to no regulation at all. It is also a narrow view, that, when extensively examined, would actually hamper, not only the other users of radio, but the same CBers who would want to be able to operate anyway, anyhow, anywhere they want.

"I don't believe most cbers have an underlying secret agenda toward ANYTHING. For the most part, I feel cbers and hammies alike are an apathetic crowd when compared to any other collective organization of fans/hobbiests. Sure, winds of change may occur, but the cry has been wolf so long, no one pays it any mind."

Back to the cow thing: What if the government said Miss Daisy can have a cow, but she can't put up a fence, or otherwise restrain the animal? You can have a garden, but you cannot restrain the cow from tramp- ling your vegetables, or sampling your corn stalks? It is rather simplistic, but that is what would happen if an entire population, at least those most interested in radio, were allowed to just grab a radio, crank up 10,000 watts, and

out the local airport tower.

"This is one of those stalemates where the line is drawn and no amount of educating or fair dialogue is going to change each other's views. The emergency/airline scenario has been rehashed so many times it has lost it's effectiveness and shock value. Sure, it COULD happen, but what are the actual chances? You can reply with, "But even one time is too much.,"..when in reality, the odds are much greater of you dying by auto accident or stray bullet from a hoe down. So do we outlaw cars and guns for those reasons alone? Should there be laws against that? The fact that something "may" happen, when it fact it hasn't (sure, you may get a hammer or anti or 2 to argue with me and say an incident took place. Show me the money. Any identifiable media clip will do.) is no reason to make a law against it. Follow that train of thought and the laws that should be passed concerning "ifs" and "maybes" are infinite and boundless."

folks who have no real knowledge of how their operations could harm someone else if such were the conditions of radio useage. NO, they aren't stupid, they're just not trained.

"Nope. Some ARE stupid. And some are trained, much to the chagrin of certain hammies, even to the point where some of us know that no amount of bitching about laws is going to make our identical radio setup that you may have in your home bleed anymore on 11 meters than yours will on 10 with the same power."

Same way with a Doctor who knows nothing about repairing cars.
What we have now, and are fortunate to have, works quite well. Each service with a need has its own "garden" within which to do its thing--without worrying about the neighbor's cow (radio) trampling (QRMing) his garden (his radio 'space').
You are also forgetting, with all that "communist" crap, that we have more freedom than most any country in the world. We should be grateful that we even HAVE a Citizens Band. That bad old FCC had to do a lot of convincing to the world community back in the 50s that a CB service on 27 mhz was OK since the treaties stipulated, and still do, that operations below 30 MHZ must be accompanied with proficiency in Morse Code.

"The same generalizations can be made for nocodes then, no? I mean, all these new nocode techs don't give a damn about radio knowledge, they are just waiting for the code to be dropped altogether so they can go wherever they want with minimal effort. They want the same parameters that the "higher" hammies have but don't want to work for it or educate themselves to attain it. This attitude is detrimental to the hobby and is a hindrance to those working to better it. These are probably the same ones that come down to the cb channels and raise hell and start BS.

Of course I don't believe that, Jerry, (except for the part of negativity reflecting poorly on both services) but the illustration shows the pendulum can swing both ways."

Again, there's where your 4 watt limit came from.

"I can appreciate that. Don't agree with it, but I can empathize with your position."

There's where your 150 mile limit (155.5 now) came from. It is why it was to be a LOCAL use media.

"Which was one of their first bad choices."

The fact that 27 MHZ can be a long haul band is actually immaterial.

"Oh no it isn't. You of all people should know the band that was chosen was POORLY selected with no real thought put into selection, location, or capabilities. It was a money issue then and it's a money issue now."

I hear people cursing on CB,

and nothing says I have to answer them. Likewise, for good reasons, the law against "working" DX were enacted, and just because one hears it doesn't mean he has to answer it. Not doing so comes under the purvey of a R-E-S- P-O-N-S-I-B-L-E operator.

"What can anyone say about you, Jerry? You apparently practice what you preach and who can take issue with that?"

Finally, explain to me this: Why, under your premise of "communism", would allowing unregulated use of CB be "freedom"? IMHO, if such conditions of unbridled anarchy were to be, then YOUR freedom becomes some else's slavery.

"As always, your position remains steadfast and you make it known in your own imitable way without being insulting. Take it away, Jerry."

Jerry are you saying coax length doesn't effect the phasing of phased array antenna system?

Hi Jerry,
Yup, I can't remember the page, but some chap a few years back had a very good page, showing the actual pattern of a co-phase setup &
a single antenna.
Now a co-phase on a nice big 1 ton, dually, crewcab truck might be semi functional.

Hi De Ho whoever you are,
Hey what is the fine for trying to sell the amp?
I know they can fine you for the use and suspected use, but what would the fine be for the sale of said amp, please post the full section, not some cut and pasted version , please.
and is there a fine for "giving" one away?

Leland Harry's reply was a dandy... There aren't many "good" cb antennas that use the nmo type mount, the mount cannot really hold an antenna that big 10/11 without a chance of breaking something on the mount, or bending the hell out of your roof when you hit a tree or bridge etc.. They are great mounts for smaller antennas.

So when did that have to do with the price of Tea, or if an antenna will work or not on 11m? Many 10m Ham antennas typically will tune up just fine on 11m, and it says so in the instructions too. For 10m you snip off a section of the whip, and for 11m you just leave it alone.

Did you even bother to go to the site and check it out? Larsen makes a large array of mobile antennas that cover a broad range of frequencies. Now how many manufactures out there make antenna using NMO mounts? That's want he asked about. I haven't seen anybody else post anything for him to look at yet, except me.

That's true if you have little to no base loading coil. In the case of the low band Larsen 27MHz antenna it is only a 49 inch tall whip plus a few more inches for the base loading coil. I have a dual band (2m 5/8 wave and 6m 1/4 wave) antenna on the roof of my van I use it only on 6m, and it is a mag-mount NMO style mount too. In over a year of whacking tree limbs I have yet to have it come off the roof. This antenna is about the same size as the 27MHz Larsen. So if my MFJ NMO mag-mount antenna will stay put, then so will the Larsen 27 MHz antenna.

I appears that Mopar didn't check out the link I supplied. And of course if he did operate HF he would have known about this antenna supplier to begin with, and posted the link. Instead he just took a cheap shot because he had nothing to offer in the way of help.

FCC INVESTIGATION LEADS TO ARREST
OF UNLICENSED AMATEUR RADIO OPERATOR
The Federal Communications Commission today announced that an investigation by its Enforcement Bureau led to the July 20, 2000, arrest of Mr. William Flippo, Jupiter, Florida, for operating an unlicensed radio station on amateur radio frequencies and for intentionally causing interference to licensed amateur radio stations.
The Enforcement Bureau, responding to numerous complaints, had previously warned Mr. Flippo to stop his illegal activities and had issued him a $20,000 forfeiture. Despite the Enforcement Bureau's administrative response, Mr. Flippo did not stop his illegal activity.
The United States Attorney's Office for the Southern District of Florida charged Mr. Flippo with four counts of unlicensed radio operation (47 U.S.C. § 301) and four counts of interfering with licensed radio stations (47 U.S.C. § 333), which he allegedly committed between June 8, 1999, and April 11, 2000. The United States Marshals Service arrested Mr. Flippo at his Jupiter, Florida home, from which it also seized his radio transmitting equipment.
If convicted, Mr. Flippo could face up to one year in prison and a fine of up to $10,000 for each violation.
Commenting on behalf of the Enforcement Bureau, Jane E. Mago, Deputy Chief, commended the members of the amateur radio community, who provided information leading to Mr. Flippo's arrest, and thanked the United States Attorney's Office for the Southern District of Florida and the United States Marshals Service for their efforts in prosecuting the case.

FCC INVESTIGATION LEADS TO FINE
FOR LICENSED AMATEUR RADIO OPERATOR
I. INTRODUCTION

1. In this Memorandum Opinion and Order (``Order´´), we deny Leonard Martin´s petition for reconsideration and affirm the Forfeiture Order1 issued against Leonard D. Martin in the amount of four thousand dollars ($4,000) for willfully and repeatedly violating Sections 301 and 303(n) of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended (``the Act´´). 2 The noted violations involve Mr. Martin´s operation of a two-way radio station without Commission authorization and his refusal to allow inspections of his radio installation.
2. On March 3, 2000, the Houston Resident Agent Office (``Houston Office´´) issued a Notice of Apparent Liability for Forfeiture (``NAL´´) in the amount of seventeen thousand dollars ($17,000) to Mr. Martin for the referenced violations.3 Mr. Martin filed a response to the NAL. On July 12, 2000, the Enforcement Bureau (``Bureau´´) released a Forfeiture Order reducing the proposed forfeiture to $4,000.
II. BACKGROUND

3. Mr. Martin is the former licensee of amateur station KC5WHN. By letter of November 3, 1998, the Commission notified Mr. Martin of complaints concerning a station identifying as KC5WHN. The complaints asserted that the station identifying as KC5WHN was operating on frequencies which were not authorized for that station. In his telephone response to that letter, Mr. Martin denied the alleged unauthorized operation.
4. On February 27, 1999, an agent from the Houston Office (``the agent´´), using a mobile automatic direction finding (``MADF´´) vehicle, observed voice radio transmissions on frequencies 27.535 and 27.545 MHz. Frequency 27.535 MHz is allocated exclusively to Industrial radio stations. Frequency 27.545 MHz is allocated exclusively to United States Government radio stations. The transmissions were unidentified, but the operator responded to the name ``Leonard.´´ Using the MADF vehicle, the agent determined that the source of the transmissions was an antenna mounted on the residence at 4415 Spellman, Houston, Texas, which was then the address of record for Mr. Martin´s amateur service station. There was no record of a Commission authorization permitting Mr. Martin to operate on 27.535 MHz or 27.545 MHz.
5. On March 15, 1999, the agent, using an MADF vehicle, observed voice radio transmissions on 27.370 MHz, a frequency allocated as a ``guard´´ frequency between authorized channels in the Citizens Band Radio Service. The operator identified himself as ``Leonard.´´ Using the MADF vehicle, the agent determined that the source of the transmissions was a vertical antenna mounted on the residence at 4415 Spellman, Houston, Texas. Immediately after his monitoring observations, the agent knocked on the door of the residence. Mr. Martin answered the door and refused the agent´s request to inspect the radio station located in the residence. The agent informed Mr. Martin that his previously observed operation on 27.535 and 27.545 MHz was unlicensed and in violation of Section 301 of the Act because Mr. Martin held no Commission authorization to operate on those frequencies. The agent also informed Mr. Martin that his refusal to allow an inspection constituted violation of Section 303(n) of the Act.
6. On April 2, 1999, the Houston Office issued Mr. Martin an Official

Notice of Violation (``NOV´´) for violations of Sections 301 and 303(n) of the Act. In Mr. Martin´s April 7, 1999, response to the NOV, he stated: ``I now fully understand that operation on the frequencies outlined is a violation ... that the FCC has the authority to inspect all radio installations... [and] ... I promise no further action by the Commission will be necessary to insure my complete compliance with the FCC Rules....´´

7. On July 22, 1999, Mr. Martin submitted his amateur service license for KC5WHN to the Commission for cancellation. By letter of July 23, 1999, the Commission acknowledged receipt of the license, and confirmed that it was cancelled effective July 23, 1999. The letter also warned Mr. Martin that any unlicensed radio operation would constitute violation of Section 301 of the Act.

8. On October 19, 1999, the agent investigated an interference complaint against Mr. Martin. The agent, using an MADF vehicle, observed voice radio transmissions on frequency 27.535 MHz, and determined that the source of those transmissions was a vertical antenna mounted on Mr. Martin's residence, at 4415 Spellman, Houston, Texas. This frequency is allocated exclusively to licensed Industrial radio stations. There was no record of a Commission authorization permitting Mr. Martin to operate on 27.535 MHz.

9. On October 26, 1999, the agent, using an MADF vehicle, observed voice radio transmissions on 27.455 MHz, a frequency allocated exclusively to Industrial radio stations. Using the MADF vehicle, the agent determined that the source of those transmissions was a vertical antenna mounted on Mr. Martin's residence, at 4415 Spellman, Houston, Texas. There was no record of a Commission authorization permitting Mr. Martin to operate on 27.455 MHz. Immediately after the monitoring, the agent knocked on the door of the residence and requested permission to inspect the station located there. Mr. Martin, who answered the door, refused to allow an inspection.

10. On March 3, 2000, the Houston Office issued a NAL in the amount of $17,000 to Mr. Martin for violations of Sections 301 and 303(n) of the Act. In his response to the NAL, Mr. Martin requested cancellation of the proposed forfeiture but did not deny violating Sections 301 and 303(n).

11. In its Forfeiture Order, released July 12, 2000, the Bureau concluded that Mr. Martin willfully and repeatedly violated Section 301 of the Act by operating radio transmitting apparatus without authorization on February 27, October 19, and October 26, 1999; and that he willfully and repeatedly violated Section 303(n) of the Act by refusing to make his radio installation available for inspection on March 15 and October 26, 1999. The Forfeiture Order assessed a monetary forfeiture of $4,000 for those violations. The sole basis for reducing the $17,000 forfeiture amount proposed by the NAL to $4,000 was Mr. Martin's inability to pay more than $4,000.

12. In his petition for reconsideration of the Forfeiture Order, Mr. Martin still does not deny operating radio transmitting apparatus without authorization or refusing to make his radio installation available for inspection. However, he propounds the following arguments for reduction or rescission of the forfeiture:

(a) The Commission ``failed to comply with its own procedures.´´ Specifically, Mr. Martin asserts that, when an FCC agent requested permission to inspect his radio installation, the agent ``did not provide [Mr. Martin] proper notice to inspect [Mr. Martin´s] communications devices or of any pending investigation, or allow [Mr. Martin] an opportunity to have an attorney present´´ and did not allow sufficient time for Mr. Martin ``to exercise [his] rights as a U.S. Citizen to review any FCC rule or federal law that would permit unwarranted entry into [his] residence by the FCC.´´
(b) The Forfeiture Order ``is based upon unsubstantiated allegations with insufficient evidentiary support.´´ In particular, Mr. Martin contends that another station near his residence ``could have been´´ the source of the transmissions observed by the FCC agent and that there is insufficient proof that Mr. Martin was the operator the station observed by the FCC agent.
(c) The forfeiture amount is ``grossly disproportionate to the alleged violations.´´ Specifically, Mr. Martin asserts that the forfeiture amount of $4,000 is unreasonable ``given the nature and extent of the alleged violations.´´ Mr. Martin also contends that the Bureau did not consider all the required mitigating factors. According to Mr. Martin, these include: the number of occurrences; the corrective measures Mr. Martin agreed to take; Mr. Martin´s ability to pay; and ``the fact that no licensed radio station complained of interference nor was there any proof of actual harm caused by any radio transmission from [Mr. Martin´s] residence.´´
(d) The Commission, by imposing a forfeiture against Mr. Martin, has exceeded its authority to regulate interstate communications under the Commerce Clause of the Constitution. Mr. Martin argues that, although Section radio communications within one state as well as between states, the statute must be interpreted and applied in a manner consistent with constitutional limitations. In particular Mr. Martin claims that, because there has been no showing that his transmissions were capable of causing harmful interference to interstate communications, he cannot be prohibited from making those transmissions without a license.
(e) The prohibition of transmissions by Mr. Martin on frequencies for which he is not authorized and the imposition of a monetary forfeiture against Mr. Martin for making such transmissions violate the First Amendment to the United States Constitution.
(f) The imposition of a forfeiture against Mr. Martin without an opportunity for a hearing or ``to remedy [Mr. Martin´s] alleged violation Section 301 of the Communications Act´´ violates the Due Process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution.
(g) The Commission is violating the Due Process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution by ``selectively´´ initiating a forfeiture proceeding against Mr. Martin and ``not targeting thousands of other stations´´ which operate without authorization.
III. DISCUSSION

13. We reject the arguments made in Mr. Martin's petition for reconsideration:
(a) The agent who requested permission to inspect Mr. Martin's radio installation on March 15 and October 26, 1999, followed proper procedures. On both occasions the agent informed Mr. Martin that Section 303(n) of the Act authorizes the Commission to inspect radio installations and that the agent had traced transmissions on frequencies for which Mr. Martin was not authorized to Mr. Martin's residence. Immediate, on-the-spot inspections are necessary in such circumstances because ``Any delay . . . can result in changed conditions of the transmitting equipment or its operation, adversely affecting the efficiency of inspections." Ralph Yago, 35 FCC 113, 125 (Rev.Bd. 1963). Further, nothing in the Communications Act requires the Commission to allow a subject of an inspection to have opportunity to have an attorney present during a civil investigation proceeding.
(b) The Bureau's conclusion that Mr. Martin operated radio transmitting apparatus without authorization on February 27, October 19, and October 26, 1999, is supported by substantial evidence. On each occasion, the agent determined electronically that transmissions on a frequency or frequencies for which Mr. Martin was not authorized emanated from an antenna installed at Mr. Martin's residence. The only person observed at Mr. Martin's residence on any of these occasions was Mr. Martin. Mr. Martin has had ample opportunity to provide information, if it exists, which shows that another person operated the station located at his residence; but he has not done so. During the transmissions observed on February 27, 1999, the operator of the station located at Mr. Martin's residence responded to the name ``Leonard.´´
(c) As the NAL explicitly states, the forfeiture amount in this case was assessed in accordance with Section 503(b) of the Act,4 Section 1.80 of the Rules,5 and The Commission's Forfeiture Policy Statement and Amendment of Section 1.80 of the Rules to Incorporate the Forfeiture Guidelines, 12 FCC Rcd 17087 (1997), recon. denied, 15 FCC Rcd 303 (1999) (``Policy Statement´´). Section 503(b) of the Act requires that, in examining Mr. Martin´s response, the Commission take into account the nature, circumstances, extent and gravity of the violation and, with respect to the violator, the degree of culpability, any history of prior offenses, ability to pay, and other such matters as justice may require.6 In the Forfeiture Order, we considered all factors applicable to this matter and reduced the monetary forfeiture from $17,000 to $4,000 on the basis of Mr. Martin´s inability to pay a larger amount. Mr. Martin has not furnished any information which justifies a further reduction.
(d) Mr. Martin's Commerce Clause argument is dependent on the incorrect assumption that transmissions emanating from his residence on 27.445, 27.535 and 27.545 MHz are not capable of interfering with interstate communications. In fact, transmissions on those frequencies are capable of long range (interstate) propagation through the natural phenomenon known as sky (``skip´´) wave. Furthermore, the view that the Commission cannot constitutionally regulate communications unless they are capable of interfering with interstate communications is erroneous. See National Broadcasting Co. v. United States, 319 U.S. 190, 209-217

(1943); FCC v. League of Women Voters of California, 468 U.S. 364, 377 (1984); and Stephen Paul Dunifer, 11 FCC Rcd 718, 727 (1995).
(e) The prohibition against unlicensed operation does not abridge Mr. Martin's First Amendment rights. The United States Supreme Court has held repeatedly that there is no constitutional right to use radio facilities without a license. See Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC, 395 U.S. 367, 388 (1969); and National Broadcasting Co. v. United States, 319 U.S. 190, 227 (1943).
(f) . The Commission did not abridge Mr. Martin's right to procedural Due Process by failing to provide opportunities for an evidentiary hearing and for correction of the violations prior to the imposition of the forfeiture. Sections 503 and 504 of the Communications Act7 provide safeguards which satisfy Due Process requirements.8 See Stephen Paul Dunifer, 11 FCC Rcd 718, 729 (1995). Further, nothing in the Communications Act requires the Commission to provide an unlicensed operator the opportunity for an evidentiary hearing or an opportunity to correct a violation prior to imposition of a forfeiture.
(g) The Commission did not abridge Mr. Martin's right to procedural Due Process by proceeding against him ``selectively.´´ The case against Mr. Martin arose from the routine investigation of a complaint. As the Commission stated in KMAP, Inc., 46 FCC 2d 978 (1974): ``While our limited resources may result in some violators going unpunished, that does not mean that we cannot impose sanctions against those violators we do find.´´9
14. We have examined Mr. Martin's petition for reconsideration pursuant to the statutory factors set forth above, and in conjunction with the Policy Statement as well. As a result of our reconsideration, we conclude that Mr. Martin has failed to provide a sufficient justification for rescission or further reduction of the forfeiture.
IV. ORDERING CLAUSES

15. ACCORDINGLY, IT IS ORDERED that, pursuant to Section 1.106 of the Rules, Mr. Martin's petition for reconsideration IS DENIED and the Forfeiture Order, 15 FCC Rcd 12699 (Enf. Bur. 2000), released on July 12, 2000, IS AFFIRMED.
16. Payment of the forfeiture of $4,000 shall be made in the manner provided for in Section 1.80 of the Rules within 30 days of the release of this Order. If the forfeiture is not paid within the period specified, the case may be referred to the Department of Justice for collection pursuant to Section 504(a) of the Act.10 Payment may be made by mailing a check or similar instrument, payable to the order of the ``Federal Communications Commission,´´ to the Federal Communications Commission, P.O. Box 73482, Chicago, Illinois 60673-7482. The payment should note ``NAL/Acct. No. X3254-003'´ referenced above. Requests for full payment under an installment plan should be sent to: Chief, Credit and Debt Management Center, 445 12th Street, S.W., Washington, D.C. 20554.11
17. IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that a copy of this Order shall be sent by Certified Mail -- Return Receipt Requested, to Mr. Leonard D. Martin at 4415 Spellman, Houston, Texas 77035.

Amateur radio operator Robert L. Meyers N5WLY loses license and pays ($1000) fine
ORDER

Adopted: October 5, 2000 Released: October 10, 2000
By the Chief, Enforcement Bureau:
1. In this Order, we adopt a Consent Decree terminating a forfeiture proceeding against Robert L. Meyers (``Meyers´´) concerning operation of an Amateur Radio transmitter in violation of Section 333 of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended (the ``Act´´), and Sections 97.101(d) and 97.119(a) of the Commission´s Rules (the ``Rules´´).1 Meyers agrees to submit his Amateur Radio license for cancellation and not re-apply for an Amateur license for a period of 5 years. Meyers further agrees to make a voluntary contribution to the U.S. Treasury of $1,000.

2. The Enforcement Bureau assessed an $8,000 forfeiture against Meyers for violation of Section 333 of the Act and Sections 97.101(d) and 97.119(a) of the Rules.2
3. The Enforcement Bureau staff and Meyers have negotiated the terms of a Consent Decree that would terminate this proceeding. A copy of the Consent Decree is attached hereto and incorporated by reference.
4. We have reviewed the terms of the Consent Decree and evaluated the facts before us. We believe that the public interest would be served by approving the Consent Decree and terminating this proceeding.
5. Accordingly, IT IS ORDERED, pursuant to Sections 4(i) and 4(j) of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, 47 U.S.C §§ 154(i) and 154(j), and the authority delegated in Sections 0.111 and 0.311 of the Commission's Rules, 47 C.F.R. §§ 0.111 and 0.311, that the attached Consent Decree is hereby ADOPTED.
6. IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the voluntary contribution referenced in the Consent Decree shall be paid by a check or money order drawn to the order of the ``Federal Communications Commission.´´ Reference should be made on the check or money order to ``NAL Acct. No. X3254- 001.´´ The remittance should be sent to: Forfeiture Collection Section, Finance Branch, Federal Communications Commission, P.O. Box 73482, Chicago, Illinois 60673-7482.
7. IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the above captioned forfeiture proceeding IS TERMINATED.

Notice of Apparent Liability in the amount of ($8000)
issued against amateur radio operator Paul E. Holcombe K4TOF
FORFEITURE ORDER

Adopted: May 2, 2000 Released: May 3, 2000
By the Chief, Enforcement Bureau:
I. INTRODUCTION

1. In this Forfeiture Order (``Order´´), we issue a monetary forfeiture in the amount of eight thousand dollars ($8,000) against Paul E. Holcombe, licensee of amateur radio station K4TOF, Houston, Texas, for willful violation of Section 333 Communications Act of 1934, as amended (``the Act´´),1 and Sections 97.101(d) and 97.119 of the Commission´s Rules.2 The noted violations involve the operation of an amateur radio station so as to willfully or maliciously cause interference to radio communications and the transmission of unidentified amateur radio communications.
2. On January 13, 2000, the Commission's Resident Agent Office in Houston, Texas, issued a Notice of Apparent thousand dollars ($8,000) to Mr. Holcombe.3 Mr. Holcombe filed a response on February 4, 2000.
II. BACKGROUND

3. Between 1993 and 1999, the Commission's Houston Resident Agent Office received numerous complaints alleging intentional interference to users on the Memorial Emergency Repeater Association's 145.470/144.870 MHz amateur radio repeater in Houston (``MERA repeater´´). The interference was allegedly caused by stations transmitting unidentified tones, inflammatory or derogatory remarks, and unmodulated signals, none of which were identified with an FCC-assigned call sign.
4. On May 25, 1999, an FCC agent from the Houston Office, using a mobile automatic direction finding (``MADF´´) vehicle to monitor the MERA repeater, observed a radio signal consisting of unidentified tones and remarks being transmitted on the input frequency of the MERA repeater. The agent simultaneously monitored the output frequency of the MERA repeater and observed that this signal would transmit immediately after other stations began transmitting, resulting in interference to communications already in progress on the MERA repeater. At about 8:08 p.m., using the MADF equipment and direction-finding techniques, the agent determined that the source of the unidentified interfering transmissions was a silver Toyota bearing Texas license plate DVZ74F. This vehicle was registered to Paul E. Holcombe, licensee of amateur radio station K4TOF. Immediately thereafter, the Commission agent conducted an interview with Mr. Holcombe and inspected the vehicle. Inside the vehicle, the agent found an amateur radio transceiver which was tuned to the MERA repeater frequency pair and was capable of transmitting on the MERA repeater frequency pair. Although Mr. Holcombe admitted that he owned the vehicle and the amateur radio transceiver and that he was the licensee of amateur radio station K4TOF, he denied intentionally making any radio transmissions that day.
5. On June 2, 1999, the Houston Office issued to Mr. Holcombe an Official Notice of Violation (``NOV´´) for willful and malicious interference to radio communications in violation of Section 333 of the Act and Section 97.101(c)4 of the Rules and for transmitting unidentified amateur radio communications in violation of Section 97.119 of the Rules. In his June 4, 1999, response to the NOV, Mr. Holcombe stated that his amateur radio station may have been inadvertently activated on May 25, 1999, but he denied any intent to interfere with other stations. Mr. Holcombe also stated that he suffered from a nerve disorder in his hands which makes it difficult for him to manipulate the controls of the amateur radio transceiver in his vehicle.
6. On January 13, 2000, the Houston Office issued the subject NAL, citing Mr. Holcombe for willful violations of Section 333 of the Act and Sections 97.101(d) and 97.119 of the Rules. In his February 4, 2000, response to the NAL, Mr. Holcombe denies that the violations occurred. Mr. Holcombe asserts that there was a passenger in his car on May 25, 1999, Dennis Rogers, who is willing to testify that the alleged violations did not occur. Mr. Holcombe states that Mr. Rogers told the FCC agent at the time that the alleged violations did not take place, but the agent discounted his statement. In addition, Mr. Holcombe asserts that the NAL unfairly holds him responsible for violations dating back to 1993. Mr. Holcombe maintains that he is being charged for any and all violations occurring during the period from 1993 to 1999 as a ``convenient target.´´ Finally, Mr. Holcombe argues that he has been denied a fair hearing of the facts and the right to due process.

III. DISCUSSION

7. As the NAL explicitly states, the forfeiture amount in this case was assessed in accordance with Section 503 of the Act,5 Section 1.80 of the Rules, 6 and The Commission's Forfeiture Policy Statement and Amendment of Section 1.80 of the Rules to Incorporate the Forfeiture Guidelines, 12 FCC Rcd 17087 (1997), recon. denied, 15 FCC Rcd 303 (1999) (``Policy Statement´´). In examining Mr. Holcombe´s response, Section 503(b) of the Act requires that the Commission take into account the nature, circumstances, extent and gravity of the violation and, with respect to the violator, the degree of culpability, any history of prior offenses, ability to pay, and other such matters as justice may require. 7
8. Section 333 of the Act and Section 97.101(d) of the Rules both prohibit willful or malicious interference to radio communications. Section 97.119 of the Rules prohibits the transmission of unidentified amateur radio communications. While Mr. Holcombe generally denies that any violations of these provisions occurred, his denial is contradicted by the observations of the FCC agent. On May 25, 1999, using MADF equipment, the investigating FCC agent observed a radio signal consisting of unidentified tones and remarks which would transmit on the MERA repeater input frequency immediately after another station began transmitting, resulting in harmful interference to communications already in progress on the MERA repeater. The agent positively identified the source of the interfering transmissions to be Mr. Holcombe's vehicle. On inspection of Mr. Holcombe's vehicle, the agent found an amateur radio transceiver which was capable of transmitting on the MERA repeater frequency pair and was in fact tuned to the MERA repeater frequency pair. We conclude that this evidence is sufficient to establish that Mr. Holcombe willfully and maliciously interfered with radio communications in willful violation of Section 333 of the Act and Section 97.101(d) of the Rules. As stated in the NAL, the interference was both willful and malicious because Mr. Holcombe timed his transmissions to commence just after other stations had begun transmitting. Mr. Holcombe also willfully violated Section 97.119 of the Rules because he failed to transmit the required FCC identification during the transmissions.
9. While Mr. Holcombe asserts that there was a passenger in his car on May 25, 1999, Dennis Rogers, who is willing to testify that the alleged violations did not occur, Mr. Holcombe failed to provide a sworn statement or statement under penalty of perjury from Mr. Rogers. Even so, the credibility of such a statement would be questionable in the face of the substantial evidence that the violations occurred. Furthermore, while Mr. Holcombe claims that Mr. Rogers told the FCC agent at the time that the alleged violations did not take place, the agent's contemporaneous written notes of his May 25, 1999, interview with Mr. Holcombe and Mr. Rogers do not reflect that Mr. Rogers made any such statement.8 Thus, there is no evidence in the record to support Mr. Holcombe's claim that the violations did not occur.
10. Moreover, contrary to Mr. Holcombe's assertions, he is not being held responsible for violations dating back to 1993. The reference in the NAL to prior interference complaints was background information intended to show the basis for the investigation that led to issuance of the NAL. The NAL only cited Mr. Holcombe for the violations personally observed and documented by the FCC agent.

11. Finally, we reject Mr. Holcombe's argument that he has been denied a fair hearing of the facts and the right to due process. Mr. Holcombe is not entitled to a hearing as a matter of right because Section 503(b)(3)(A) of the Act, 47 U.S.C. § 503(b)(3)(A), explicitly states that such hearings may be held ``[a]t the discretion of the Commission.´´ (emphasis added). In lieu of holding a hearing, the Commission may proceed as it did in the instant case, using the NAL procedures set forth in Section 503(b)(4) of the Act, 47 U.S.C. § 503(b)(4). See also 47 C.F.R. § 1.80(e). These procedures do not deprive Mr. Holcombe of his right to due process because any forfeiture issued in accordance with these procedures is ultimately subject to a trial de novo in federal district court pursuant to Section 504(a) of the Act, 47 U.S.C. § 504(a), should Mr. Holcombe not pay prior to such time.

12. We have examined Mr. Holcombe's response to the NAL pursuant to the statutory factors above, and in conjunction with the Policy Statement. As a result of our review, we conclude that Mr. Holcombe has failed to justify cancellation or reduction of the proposed forfeiture. Therefore, we affirm the forfeiture of eight thousand dollars ($8,000).

IV. ORDERING CLAUSES

13. Accordingly, IT IS ORDERED THAT, pursuant to Section 503(b) of the Act,9 and Sections 0.111, 0.311 and 1.80(f)(4) of the Commission's Rules,10 Paul E. Holcombe, IS LIABLE FOR A MONETARY FORFEITURE in the amount of eight thousand dollars ($8,000) for willful and malicious interference to radio communications in violation of Section 333 of the Act and Section 97.101(d) of the Rules and for transmitting unidentified amateur radio communications in violation of Section 97.119 of the Rules.

14. Payment of the forfeiture shall be made in the manner provided for in Section 1.80 of the Commission's Rules11 within 30 days of the release of this Order. If the forfeiture is not paid within the period specified, the case may be referred to the Department of Justice for collection pursuant to section 504(a) of the Act.12 Payment may be made by credit card through the Commission's Credit and Debt Management Center at (202) 418-1995 or by mailing a check or similar instrument, payable to the order of the Federal Communications Commission, to the Federal Communications Commission, P.O. Box 73482, Chicago, Illinois 60673-7482. The payment should note the NAL/Acct. No. X3254-002. Requests for full payment under an installment plan should be sent to: Chief, Credit and Debt Management Center, 445 12th Street, S.W., Washington, D.C. 20554.13

15. IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that a copy of this Forfeiture Order shall be sent by Certified Mail Return Receipt Requested to Paul E. Holcombe at 15103 Mira Vista Drive, Houston, Texas 77083-4208.

Forfeiture Order Against "Two Way Shop" in the amount of ($7000)
for Offering Linear Amplifiers for Sale
FORFEITURE ORDER

Adopted: April 6, 2000 Released: April 7, 2000
By the Chief, Enforcement Bureau:
I. INTRODUCTION

1. In this Forfeiture Order (``Order´´), we issue a monetary forfeiture in the amount of seven thousand dollars ($7,000) against the Two Way Shop (``Two Way´´) for willful and repeated violations of Section 302 of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended (``Act´´),1 and Sections 2.803 and 2.815 of the of the Commission´s Rules (``Rules´´).2 These violations involve Two Way´s offer for sale of linear amplifiers capable of operation in the 26.965 to 27.405 MHz frequency band.
2. On July 14, 1999, the Commission's Seattle, Washington, Field Office, issued the referenced Notice of Apparent Liability for Forfeiture (``NAL´´) for a monetary forfeiture in the amount of seven thousand dollars ($7,000) to Two Way for the noted violations.3 Patrick Cleppe, owner and operator of Two Way, filed a response to the NAL on July 26, 1999.
II. BACKGROUND

3. Two Way is a consumer electronics dealer in Kennewick, Washington. On March 19, 1999, an FCC agent from the Commission's Seattle Field Office, who was posing as a member of the general public, visited Two Way's place of business at 220 Columbia Drive E., Kennewick, Washington. During that visit, a salesman who the agent believes is named Gary Greenfield offered to sell an external radio frequency power amplifier -- commonly known as a ``linear amplifier´´ -- to the agent. The linear amplifier offered to the agent was capable of operation in the 26.965 to 27.405 MHz frequency band, which is assigned to citizens band radio (``CB´´) operators. Such a linear amplifier is used to increase the power of CB stations beyond the authorized level. On May 15, 1999, two FCC agents from the Commission´s Seattle Field Office, who were posing as members of the general public, visited Two Way´s place of business. On this occasion, a salesman, who the agents believe to be Mr. Cleppe, showed the agents Galaxy XL350 and Palomar 80 linear amplifiers and told the agents that an additional model (Galaxy XL250) was expected to be in stock later that day. The salesman offered to sell these linear amplifiers, which were capable of operation in the 26.965 to 27.405 MHz frequency band, to the agents. Section 302 of the Act, and Sections 2.803 and 2.815 of the Rules prohibit the sale or offer for sale of linear amplifiers that are capable of operation in the 26.965 to 27.405 MHz frequency band. On July 14, 1999, the District Director, Seattle Field Office, issued an NAL to Two Way in the amount of $7,000 for willful and repeated violations of Section 302 of the Act, which prohibits the sale or offer for sale of transmitting equipment not in compliance with the FCC rules, and Sections 2.803 and 2.815 of the Rules, which prohibit the sale or offer for sale of linear amplifiers that are capable of operation in the 26.965 to 27.405 MHz frequency band.

4. On July 26, 1999, the Commission received the response to the NAL, in which Two Way requests the cancellation of the proposed forfeiture. Two Way asserts: that Gary Greenfield was not an employee of Two Way at any time during March 1999; that Two Way is a proprietorship which has never had any employees; that its business records indicate it never purchased any linear amplifiers; and that Two Way collects sales taxes and charges $38.50 for installation and tuning.5 In addition, Two Way states, if its response does not close this matter, it is making a ``motion for Discovery.´´
III. DISCUSSION

5. As the NAL explicitly states, the forfeiture amount in this case was assessed in accordance with Section 503 of the Act,6 Section 1.80 of the Rules, 7 and The Commission's Forfeiture Policy Statement and Amendment of Section 1.80 of the Rules to Incorporate the Forfeiture Guidelines, 12 FCC Rcd 17087 (1997), recon. denied, FCC 99-407, (Released Dec. 28, 1999) (``Policy Statement´´). In examining Two Way´s response, Section 503(b) of the Act requires that the Commission take into account the nature, circumstances, extent and gravity of the violation and, with respect to the violator, the degree of culpability, any history of prior offenses, ability to pay, and other such matters as justice may require. 8
6. The claims made in Two Way's attack upon the factual basis for the NAL are either immaterial or are directly contradicted by the observations of FCC agents. The agents who went to Two Way's place of business observed linear amplifiers on the premises and received offers to sell linear amplifiers from salespersons believed to be Mr. Greenfield and Mr. Cleppe. This is sufficient to establish the violations alleged in the NAL and contradicts the claim that Two Way did not possess any linear amplifiers. It is not material whether the persons who made the offers to sell were employees of Two Way or proprietors.
7. Discovery is available in Commission adjudication proceedings that have been designated for hearing.9 Since this case has not been designated for hearing, Two Way's discovery motion is inappropriate.
8. We have examined Two Way's response to the NAL pursuant to the statutory factors above, and in conjunction with the Policy Statement as well. As a result of our review, we conclude that Two Way has failed to justify cancellation or reduction of the proposed forfeiture amount. Therefore, we affirm the forfeiture of seven thousand dollars ($7,000).
IV. ORDERING CLAUSES

9. ACCORDINGLY, IT IS ORDERED that, pursuant to Section 503(b) of the Act, and Sections 0.111, 0.311 and 1.80(f)(4) of the Rules,10 the Two Way Shop, IS LIABLE FOR A MONETARY FORFEITURE in the amount of seven thousand ($7,000) for the repeated and willful violation of Section 302 of the Act, which prohibits the sale or offer for sale of transmitting equipment not in compliance with the FCC rules, and Sections 2.803 and 2.815 of the Rules, which prohibit the sale or offer for sale of linear amplifiers that are capable of operation in the 26.965 to 27.405 MHz frequency band.

10. Payment of the forfeiture shall be made in the manner provided for in Section 1.80 of the Rules within thirty (30) days of the release of this Order. If the forfeiture is not paid within the specified period, the case may be referred to the Department of Justice for collection pursuant to Section 504(a) of the Act.11 Payment may be made by credit card through the Commission's Credit and Debt Management Center at (202) 418-1995 or by mailing a check or similar instrument, payable to the order of the ``Federal Communications Commission,´´ to the Federal Communications Commission, P.O. Forfeiture Order Against against "Dr. John G. Pierre" in the amount of ($10,000)
for Operation of a Radio Transmitter Without a License
FORFEITURE ORDER

Adopted: February 16, 2001 Released: February 20, 2001
By the Chief, Enforcement Bureau:
1. In this Forfeiture Order (``Order´´), we issue a monetary forfeiture in the amount of ten thousand dollars ($10,000) against Dr. John G. Pierre (``Dr. Pierre´´) for willful violation of Section 301 of the Communications Act of 1934 (``Act´´)1, as amended. The noted violation involves Dr. Pierre´s operation of a radio transmitter without a license.
2. On November 15, 2000, the District Director of the New York Field Office released a Notice of Apparent Liability for Forfeiture (``NAL´´) in the amount of eleven thousand dollars ($11,000) to Dr. Pierre. Dr. Pierre has not filed a response to the NAL. Based on the information before us, we affirm the assessment of a monetary forfeiture in this matter. However, ten thousand dollars ($10,000) is the base amount for this violation.2 Therefore, we are reducing the forfeiture amount to ten thousand dollars ($10,000) on our own motion.
3. ACCORDINGLY, IT IS ORDERED THAT, pursuant to Section 503(b) of the Act,3 and Sections 0.111, 0.311 and 1.80(f)(4) of the Commission's Rules,4 Dr. John G. Pierre IS LIABLE FOR A MONETARY FORFEITURE in the amount of $10,000 for willful violation of the provisions of Section 301 of the Act.
4. Payment of the forfeiture shall be made in the manner provided for in Section 1.80 of the Commission's Rules5 within 30 days of the release of this Order. If the forfeiture is not paid within the period specified, the case may be referred to the Department of Justice for collection pursuant to Section 504(a) of the Act.6 Payment may be made by mailing a check or similar instrument, payable to the order of the ``Federal Communications Commission,´´ to the Federal Communications Commission, P.O. Box 73482, Chicago, Illinois 60673-7482. The payment should reference NAL/Acct. number 20013238-0001. Requests for full payment under an installment plan should be sent to: Chief, Credit and Debt Management Center, 445 12th Street, S.W., Washington, D.C. 20554.7

Forfeiture Order Against Jerry Smith in the amount of ($13,500) for running a non-type-accepted transmitter
FORFEITURE ORDER

Adopted: April 18, 2001 Released: April 20, 2001
By the Chief, Enforcement Bureau:
1. In this Forfeiture Order (``Order´´), we issue a monetary forfeiture in the amount of thirteen thousand five hundred dollars ($13,500) to Jerry Smith for willful and repeated violations of Sections 95.409(a), 95.410(a) and 95.411(a)(1) of the Commission´s Rules (``Rules´´).1 The noted violations involve Mr. Smith´s operation of a Citizens Band (``CB´´) Radio Station with a non-type-accepted transmitter, with a transmitter output power greater than four watts carrier power in the AM (A3) mode, and with an external RF power amplifier.
2. On January 8, 2001, the Commission's Philadelphia, Pennsylvania Field Office issued a Notice of Apparent Liability for Forfeiture (``NAL´´) in the amount of thirteen thousand five hundred dollars ($13,500) to Mr. Smith for the noted violations.2 Mr. Smith has not filed a response. Based on the information before us, we affirm this forfeiture.
3. Accordingly, IT IS ORDERED that, pursuant to Section 503(b) of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended (``Act´´),3 and Sections 0.111, 0.311 and 1.80(f)(4) of the Rules,4 Jerry Smith IS LIABLE FOR A MONETARY FORFEITURE in the amount of thirteen thousand dollars ($13,500) for operating a CB Radio Station with a non-type-accepted transmitter, with a transmitter output power greater than four watts carrier power in the AM (A3) mode, and with an external RF power amplifier, in willful and repeated violation of Sections 95.409(a), 95.410(a) and 95.411(a)(1) of the Rules.
4. Payment of the forfeiture shall be made in the manner provided for in Section 1.80 of the Rules5 within 30 days of the release of this Order. If the forfeiture is not paid within the period specified, the case may be referred to the Department of Justice for collection pursuant to Section 504(a) of the Act.6 Payment shall be made by mailing a check or similar instrument, payable to the order of the Federal Communications Commission, to the Federal Communications Commission, Forfeiture Collection Section, Finance Branch, P.O. Box 73482, Chicago, Illinois 60673-7482. The payment should note the NAL/Acct. No. referenced above. Requests for full payment under an installment plan should be sent to: Chief, Revenue and Receivables Operations Group, 445 12th Street, S.W., Washington, D.C. 20554.7

5. IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that, a copy of this Order shall be sent by Certified Mail, Return Receipt Requested, to Jerry Smith, 125 Commonwealth Avenue, Claymont, DE 19703.

That's true if you have little to no base loading coil. In the case of the low band Larsen 27MHz antenna it is only a 49 inch tall whip plus a few more inches for the base loading coil. I have a dual band (2m 5/8 wave and 6m 1/4 wave) antenna on the roof of my van I use it only on 6m, and it is a mag-mount NMO style mount too. In over a year of whacking tree limbs I have yet to have it come off the roof. This antenna is about the same size as the 27MHz Larsen. So if my MFJ NMO mag-mount antenna will stay put, then so will the Larsen 27 MHz antenna.

I appears that Mopar didn't check out the link I supplied. And of course if he did operate HF he would have known about this antenna supplier to begin with, and posted the link. Instead he just took a cheap shot because he had nothing to offer in the way of help.

I have seen Larsons on NMO mounts beaten to a pulp by an overhead without causing a sheet metal problem -- didn't do a lot for the overhead either. No one who ever ran mobile has not encountered low-hanging trees, etc which the Larsons handle admirably. The only criticisms I have ever heard of Larson is the prices from those used to truck stop specials and the fun caused from trying to cut some of their rods. Most don't look all that neato/cool but they do work.

Your assessment, cheap shot, is right on the money.

What does having or formally having a ham ticket relate to the post.
Amateurs have their own problems, stating just because someone is or was a amateur and maintains an interest in Citizen Band as being somewhat negative is ludicrous. I would imagine most amateurs today started out as CB'ers and many maintained an interest after they passed their exams. I've held an extra ticket since 1980 my interest in radio beginning in CB back in the early 70's which included the modification of stock radios but not necessarily inclusive of freebanding ... and no I'm not about to post my call since it will be obviously used against me in any future comments I make. CB and Amateur ranks have plenty of fools exemplified by the many posts contained in this forum.

My only gripe with the terminally anonymous is the tendency to use it to make cheap shots and generally behave badly. My choice is to be open about things but others may differ. That is why kill files were invented and I have a good one.

I predate CB as an amateur but there aren't that many of us left; I had to start at age 11 to get it done and still be alive. As a practical matter, someone becoming radio-active is both likely to get his introduction via CB and at some point obtain an amateur license. The two are not mutually exclusive nor is there any particularly good reason for conflict to exist.

Agree with you wholeheartedly about fools.

My radio indoctrination was in the mid 60's from my grandfather as he was a ham operator since the early days of radio. I can still remember the basement of his house filled with equipment and boxes upon boxes of tubes. I'm also aware of his exploits building experimental equipment for the U.S. during WW II. It was he who instilled in my the need to experiment with all facets of radio, and although times and radios have changed, the thirst to experiment is one that is not easily quenched. The ORIGINAL post to this thread was posted to jab at CB'rs who might think about running afoul of the law but my intention in form of a reply is to say this.....Talk about CB people getting busted! Who in this forum really cares to read about STUPID (hey knew it was coming) getting busted for his actions. The first letter he got should have served as notice to him he was being investigate but continued to be and act stupid.

QRM,

Go back and read the whole thread again. Yrac posts a message about impending doom for freebanders. I asked him why we should believe him since there is no evidence for it in FCC enforcement actions. Instead of answering the question he posts a bunch of noise and the subject line to "Re: Phil May Be On The FCC List". I return the favor by making reference to his ADD which he openly posts messages about in alt.support.attn-deficit .

BTW, QRM, ADD is a recent classification and if you are going to make statements like "Since folks with ADD usually have pretty good brains (Einstein, Edison, etc.)" I hope you have some kind of proof that Einstein and Edison in fact did have ADD. Since Einstein and Edison were long dead before psychologists dreamed up the term ADD your statement is not credible.

"Birds of a feather flock together", therefore I am not surprised that you would jump into this thread to defend your radio (and newsgroup) cop buddy Paul...

You, too, can believe what you want but from listening to the frequency range 27.415 to 27.995 I do not hear the same kind of "LONG, LOUD, and Proud, all knobs at flank speed" operators that I hear on the legal 40 channels. Other than a few truck drivers operating AM mode between 415 and 995 most operators use SSB and run much cleaner stations too. What you think you hear may be colored by you opinion of freebanders (and I use the term freebanders to refer to those in the US who operate between 415 and 995).

Even though I have been licensed for 24 years, I rarely operate on the Ham bands anymore. The extent of my operation on CB is to listen to CH 19 on trips. FRS is about the only radio service that I use now. I have always been more of a SWLer.

This has been, pretty much, my experience as well. Sometimes I almost feel like I should apologize for NOT running into "Kilowatt Charlie" and "Potty Mouth" while monitoring the so-called "freeband." It's nice to see the same observation coming from a different source.

Do you see in my circuit how I isolate each radio? It is actually pretty simply. I do not think it needs to be done any other way.

I have to say, both views show common sense approaches to 11-meters, something sorely lacking from some here on the NG. I really did like the "freeband," bit I just don't have the spare 7 to13 G's to donate to Riley's Bagel fund. Even if they reduce it to, say, $3000.00, that still puts most up the proverbial creek. "What me worry?"...yeah, I must be gettin' old.

Let's see OG, you posted some 14+ times under 3-500zee's I respond to one post that didn't include my name, I don't think that was to bad. One response to you directly , under the 3-500zees nic. You see I'm only responding to the screen nic, not you Old Boy.
I harass you? Now that's a laugh, you really should step back and take a look at what you are typing and when.
I post only twice a day, morning for about five to ten minutes, evening for about ten to twenty minutes depending on what I am going to post. So old chap I do have a life, you on the other hand, for the past couple of days have been posting from the morning until the Wee hours of the next morning.
Some 98% of whatever you have posted has absolutely nothing to contribute to the cb, so when I respond to one of your post, hey I'm posting no worse than you.
Oh you have more than one account, you know it and numerous other people know it, hell even if you don't (which I'm sure you do) PROVE IT!!!!
I'll be here, for about fifteen to twenty minutes a day, making a comment direct or indirectly to you, and to any other post I deemed to respond too.
Oh one more thing, Your not the only one that doesn't like me? there's others? Wow!, I didn't think anyone but you disliked me by all "your" response's. But you can see by others posts, there are a lot more public people that dislike you better......

TTFN,

TW,
Ain't it nice to be gentlemen enough to disagree, read each others posts, understand where your "opponent" is coming, and be able to SMILE as you read it.
Best 73,
Jerry

"Of course. Matter of fact, I forwarded what you wrote to a friend who is a part time poster here (was full time at 1 time, and was thinking of getting his license but right when I pointed him in this direction, the "dregs of amateur" arrived here simultaneously and soured his taste) and knows his way around electronics and theory like no one's business. He is a part time DJ at a local country station and does transformer, ballast and line work for Fla. Power Corp. (You should see some of the stuff HE has in his garage) He owns the radio equipment that would impress your average hammie as well as the renegade, power hungry cber. In other words, if he wanted, he could easily be one of the baddest and loudest, but as he says, "What for?" He knows what he has and doesn't have to prove it to anyone. He's a good guy and you 2 seem to have plenty in common...even to the point where he give me hell when I asked him to sit in once on a pirate (real pirate, not cb or hammie freqs) station one evening involving a talk on the monopoly that power companies have held on their customers. He wouldn't even give me a tape, but he did contribute lots of thoughts for the program. Have a good weekend up that way."

Hey, I just point these things out.
So now you are introducing yourself as Jim. Ok, Jim.

Thats what Landshark said my name was so yes I am Jim.

"Well, then it probably is. He has been rather accurate in his posts lately."

CONSPIRACY, n. [L. See Conspire.]
1. A combination of men for an evil purpose; an agreement between two or more persons, to commit some crime in concert; particularly, a combination to commit treason, or excite sedition or insurrection against the government of a state; a plot; as a conspiracy against the life of a king; a conspiracy against the government.

against him

"There. That's the second time you used the "c" word, only this time you yesterday. Dictionary will do wonders for you."

Many are quite aware who is who despite the drag queen personas by Dogie and playing dressup by the other 2, but tell me, why concern yourself with a private message board? Why does it bother you what an individual does with their own cb board?

I don't care what he does with the messages,

If you didn't care, you wouldn't even be there."

I was letting James know what had happened.

"Now, I know James can give an oxes tail over what someone else does.
That concern is exclusive to only 3 of you."

He can delete whatever he choses off his CB Message board

"Yep. Sure can. It shouldn't damage your psyche, though."

Why does it upset you that cb is free for the masses and so is the skip? You never did answer the question posed to you asking what your problem with barefoot DX is."

If it is done between the legal channels and it is done barefoot I don't have a problem with it.

"Well, now. That wasn't so hard, was it?"

It is a natural phenomenum I see nothing wrong with that but you know It is not done barefoot, how do i know

"You don't. I have all the states and most of the damn world on SSB contacts, barefoot. Was working on all the states on AM barefoot, but it hasn't quite happened yet."

Werent you just talking about the tidy bowl and we all know That is the Competition channel only the strong survive, how can you talk barefoot there?

"It is difficult and rare, but I did it the other day from the boat. Twice, actually...and at least one newsgroupie was witness to it. Once to Ohio and once again to South Carolina. But you are mincing and mixing. Of course the bowl is for the mighty. Nothing will change that. There are more important things to worry about...""

twistedhed@webtv.net (Twistedhed) Date: Fri, Sep 7, 2001, 12:13am To: twistedhed@webtv.net Subject: (no subject)

Twist, I'd like to point out (I've said this before) that the technology back in the 50s was a LOT different from the technology today. Ever see one of those real old radios with a number of shortwave bands where 'police' was labeled around 2 or 3 MHz? Receivers were not particularly sensitive up on VHF/UHF and equipment there would have been EXPENSIVE. 27 MHz was the industrial (read 'junk') band (and amateur band). It was placed there likely to minimize propagation as much as possible while still being affordable. Back to the police - an antenna used in a mobil installation at 2 MHz or so is going to be REAL inefficient. Today, of course, the majority of police are up on UHF - with a range far exceeding what those old 2 MHz or so radios could ever hope to do, not to mention a lot more bandwidth to play with. (I would be curious to know what kind of range the police could get out of those things). While your point over the aircraft might be true (although aircraft communications have been interefered with at times - once by an plastic sealing machine from the place I work at), I suspect you might see what Jerry is talking about the day you are watching an important baseball or football game and suddenly the picture starts tearing and the audio gets scrambled.

"Oh I know exactly what he is talking about and I take no issue with his position, it is more the embellishments of the points in question that are always brought up but the reality of the situation dictates something else.. No doubt interference happens to all bands not just aviation, but fortunately the interferences are not of such a nature as to be life threatening, and as you know, not always of of intentional or radio origin. If they were, they would be vigorously persued by authorities with the same penalties as endangering an airliner while in flight. I am no stranger to RFI screwing with something it shouldn't. It just is so overstated as a serious problem. It is not as prevalent as many would like to believe and for that reason, I do not think (IMHO) that is even the true basis for argument against feebanding and power. I base this on the fact that it is only amateurs, and on the rare occasion, a citizen, who bitches about the stuff."

The picture is more complicated than amateur and citizens' band radio. Your talking public safety (fire, ambulance, police), commercial radio (FM and AM), television (yes, even satellite), cell phones, trunking radio, business radio, marine radio, distress signaling (yep, 500 KHz CW is gone - best hope no one jams the satellites - AND THAT HAS HAPPEND, although it wasn't CB radio), FRS, wireless local area networks, and more (yes, wireless digital cameras are here now). Heck, they even protect radio telescope sights (yes, some people need to look at extraterrestrial NOISE!). Jerry's point was, IMHO, well made.

"I agree, his point was well made. If there is a way, as you know, someone will attempt it. It is an evolutionary trait, no matter what it applies to."

The radio spectrum has more demands placed on it every day. Big money certainly can sway some local decisions, but international agreements help protect various nations' interests

"Another word for interests is money. Invested in by Americans, with domestic (American) money. If there wasn't any money to be made (return investments), let's face it, we would have no interest with said nations."

and our FCC subdivides within those agreements to try and satisfy everyone. Not an easy task.
73 from Rochester, NY
Jim

"Interference can be a problem. Most of the time, it can be rectified. When it is intentional, it fits another pattern altogether."

I can agree with this it is not the balls to the wall type you hear below 40, and the operators are usually all working SSB and there is usually no need for the power thing since these DX op's are usually just trying to make a contact instead of "mauling " someone, but it is the same as a person breaking into a home is it ok that he does this as long as he doesn't steal anything? It is still illegal. No one ever mentions below channel 1 on 26.835 it is a favorite for the Guys who can't compete on the superbowl.

Do I need to go back a weeks time or perhaps 2 weeks time, You have followed everypost I make whether they are directed to you or not I quit counting at 57 was getting tired, You know i have all the time in the world to look it up just as you have the time to look up everday how many posts I make and under what name, You are completly enamored with me.

>One response to

Well I am the one making the posts so that means they are directed at me.
No?

> I harass you? Now that's a laugh, you really should > step back and take a look at what you are typing and when.

Yes, you are harrassing me, it is evident in all the threads I post in, As usual Landsharks posts directly follow up my posts, harrassing me displaying every name you think I have used I changed my name in an effort to get rid of you yet you forged my name because you want to harass me. Don't worry I'll be posting the results for you to critic. What should you care when I post? Because you are enamoured with me.

No you don't have a life since the 5, 10 20 minutes you spend is dedicated to me, proving your no-life existance you on the other are either envious of me for being able to post when I want.

> Some 98% of whatever you have posted has

So now you compare yourself to me with the one exception my technical abilities far outweight yours which is evident.

> Oh you have more than one account, you know it

I think the burden of proof is on you. I'll use your lieing logic why would I spend money for more than 1 account to make you look silly. If numerous others know it perhaps they would prove it, don't alk about it Be about it, just like I proved you were posting as Frenchy. I proved it, then you admitted it after undeniable proof.

Knock your too-too off.

Thats the whole point, I am not out here for a popularity contest. You seem like the only one who replys everyone of my posts... Oh wait theres also Twisty and Moped. What a contigent you have there. I just want to know if you will continue to harass me as you stated in a earlier post how you like to harass me?

You, too, can believe what you want but from listening to the frequency range 27.415 to 27.995 I do not hear the same kind of "LONG, LOUD, and Proud, all knobs at flank speed" operators that I hear on the legal 40 channels. Other than a few truck drivers operating AM mode between 415 and 995 most operators use SSB and run much cleaner stations too.
What you think you hear may be colored by you opinion of freebanders (and I use the term freebanders to refer to those in the US who operate between 415 and 995).

This has been, pretty much, my experience as well. Sometimes I almost feel like I should apologize for NOT running into "Kilowatt Charlie" and "Potty Mouth" while monitoring the so-called "freeband." It's nice to see the same observation coming from a different source.
73 de Bert
KC2HMN

"There is less discontent on the bowl and on the freeband than all the other legal cb freqs and many hammie bands as well. I am of the opinion that the few disgruntled hammies present here are more upset with the fact we can play radio and get along better than most of their ilk so they mask it with "but you are illegal",(whether we are or NOT)..followed by the name calling and off subject posts when, in all probability, they don't give a damn whether we are illegal or not. Most here are better than them, they are aware of it, and THAT, is their problem."

I had a great time in Atlanta, The Shooting Stars really put on a good event. I got a chance to meet most of the people I talk to everyday. I saw a lot of way out setups at the competition.

Does anyone know who the winners were?

When visiting Atlanta stop by Ray's on the river. Good food, great view of the Chattahoochie river and a wonderful hostess named Kim. Be sure to ask about "Elvis". You'll be surprised.

P.S. I know I spelled the name of the river wrong.

Twisty, you make accusations without any proof as usual, what lie did he catch me in according to you.
You don't want to mention the actual lie I caught him in that he finally had to admit. But please show me what lie I was caught in? Whats that you can't Oh well thats the usual twisite response make claims and cannot substantiate them. Just because you say it doesn't make it so. You guys are a riot this is better than the CB honestly. twisty why not go to Wash Dc, me and some of the anti are thinking about a road trip to watch the fun ... hehe do you have the brass to show?

Numb nuts, James didnt know that ls454ss70 was the owner of the board and the same guy making the post.
Are you trying to think for other people again? Which 3 is that Landshark, Moped, and Yourself.

Oh yeah and who might that be your next door neighbor? There are guys on there with thousands of watts and the all high and mighty twistie comes busting thru the pileup haha You are a horses ass.

> Once to Ohio and once again to South Carolina. But you are mincing and mixing.

It is so difficult and rare you did it twice in one day God Bless you Who did you talk to in Ohio don't tell me Moparhed with his collins? haha The locals with 4 watts aren't heard on the bowl talking to each other but the almighty twistie barefoot boat got thru a s9 20 over signal all the way to Ohio. Twist you are truly amazing.

If that is the case should he be proud of himself? but how has he kept me occupied i am hear here listening to the Cb, watching Tv, computer is on, radios all a blastin, I kinda feel like old Jay in the Mojave. Aaron has kept you backpedaling, slobbering on the keyboard for 2 years now. Twist any time you would like to lock horns with me on a Electronic Related Roundtable Discussion I am always available in fact you, Moped, and Landshark combined with you couldn't carry a technical conversation if your life depended on it. In fact the conversation might go something like this Twisty: hey Moped how do we wire up this mike were going out on "The Boat" this weekend.

Moped: I don't know Twist but my Collins sure works good on HF. Maybe Ill hear your barefooted Boat Landshark: hey Twisty I can take it to my cross dressing CB friend he can do it he can do anything.

Twisty: Oh will then I can to all 50 states barefoot again, yuk yuk..

Landshark: Twist did you say Bareback or barefoot... ohh I love it when you talk dirty

Moped: Hey I gotta go cut a few lawns I am taking my Collins in the spray truck in case you guys want to reach me...

Twisty: Hey I am jumping on the freeband, its free so i want to get my moneys worth guys come on there no one to stop us Hey no one is in that boat over there lets jump on it hell Its not being used.

Moped: Hell with the freeband twisty, I am going to load up the Collins on 20 meters, I dare Riley to catch me... This sucker puuurrrrsss on 14.313. I am going to use Lelands Call sign today..

Landshark: Ohhh wait for me Twisty I wanna ride in "The Boat" too, that fiberglass boat sure will make a good groundplane Huh Twist.

Twisty: yeah, ok Sharkie your ignorance of the finer points of ground planes is shownin boy you startin to sound like dogie, another besmirching comment like that and you is shark bait.

Twisty: Yeah breaka Channel 6 Breaka Channel 6 this here's the Twisty boat mobile workin this barefoot radio come on all you Supastars .....

(cb radio) crackle crackle :: static... noise.. discernable sound... yeah big brotha you got the maul on him cotton picka... foo teeen ...

Twisty: breaka 6 breaka 6 this here's the Love Boat out of the sand Pile Anyone roger my Doger? Come Onnn!

Landshark: Twisty maybe you have too much coax, you remember that thread about coax length don't you?

Twisty: Pipe down Sharkie, I got one hooked ..

Landshark: On the Fishing Pole? ...

Twisty: No No silly, on the Cb Radio.. He says he is in Jamaica..

Landshark: Hey Twistie...

Twisty: Not Now

Landshark : No No Twisty I think you had better look.

Twisty: Not Now I said.

Landshark: Well its just that those kids on the dock have a walkie talkie...

(Kids On Dock): Hey Mon where you be we be in Jamaica haha Twisty: Well you got the one Love Boat there padner. How is this barefoot radio makin the trip.

And so the tale goes ....

Seriously,I picked up those names while doing research for an article. It will take a while to recover where I found it. However, you have a good point about diagnosing dead persons. Perhaps it's a matter of giving a name to some condition which has been present for years. We've all heard stories about "absent minded professors".

Good paying jobs are hard enough to find here in the US. At the same time we taxpayers are already supporting too many deadbeats. Do we really need more people in here to compete with for jobs and for us to support? America has gotten too lazy and compliant, working in a field is "below" us. Hell send the illegals back to mexico, and kick the lazy asses off welfare and make THEM work in the fields, they would then be doing honest work and doing their fare share for society. I met a team of truckdrivers from mexico, they are driving from detroit to corpus christi 2 times a week they are getting paid 32 cents a mile, they share the money that means they are getting 16c/mile each. This is outrageous, our truck drivers are not making enough money the way it is for all the hassle they have to go through, and now companies are pulling this crap???!!!!

I know I normally do not use this sort of language and I apologize, but this subject really upsets me.

Some form of allowing temporary workers, ones that go North to support a family at home, thru the border on some reasonable basis would in the long run reduce the number of Mexicans in the US. If it becomes a royal pain in the drain to sneak across a border, why go home??

Feel free to correct me if I am wrong.

I was told some time ago that the FCC had reassigned the marine band due to abuse of the frequencies, and that the old radios were pretty much useless because the FCC had set up beacons/RF jammers to shut the old requencies down? Now if that IS true, and I am not saying it is, just repeating what I had been told, the FCC could veru well decide to shut down 11 meters and move CB to the newer freq's, they could also do that with the "freeband".

I found the Hurricane and security alrm saving rather funny. Actually this season (hurricane) has been kinda slow other than Allison, which is fine for me, although I enjoy traveling, and helping others, I'd much rather help someone remodel their house, put up an antenna, or other fun stuff, than to see someone who just lost everything to natures power.

And the security alarm heheh, been there done that. heck last week while finishing up some paperwork at the Red Cross cpahter house, I forgot to lock the front door after my CPR/First Aid class left, a police officer doing his job was walking downtown checking to make sure the doors were all locked, all of a sudden he peeked his head into my office and popped a paperbag behind my head (he was a friend of mine) scared the hell out of me, almost had to change my shorts.

I had a Cobra 45WXST but I somehow fried it. I had to replace it with a Cobra 46 WX because I couldn't find anymore 45WXST's. Yesterday I ordered a Midland 75-822 ($99.00 from Amazon). This is the radio they put on the BMW K1200LT. I will use it along with a Firefly NGP Firestik antenna and push it all through my Autocom Pro M1.

It happens to be the universally accepted axiom for the HF spectrum from 27.4151 thru 27.9999 megahertz. It's exists, therefore it is, and is very real.
You are correct, Jerry, there is no "free" band. Take care and 73.

Anything's possible, Jerry. But on this one...not in out lifetime. IMHO, I think there'll always be an 11 meter "sandbox" for the radio "non-conformists to play in, and the FCC knows this. Now if the commission received "an offer it couldn't refuse," that's be a different thing altogether. But who'd bid on the freeband? Take care and 73.

Its better than Disneyland, I think. I get a kick out of all the great people you met there, and all the bitchen linears, alternators, antennas, and backyard engineering, modified, made to go fast, everything.

I am sure someone will post them.

I may have been there, a few years ago. Don't sweat the spelling, the important thing is the your great posting here that you shared with all us here.

well gary......its not really that far off topic,if you think about it this way.the government doesnt want to legalize a few watts and/or a few extra measly frequencies,but theyll jump at a chance to legalize 10 million mexicans,wreck our economy,over burden the taxpayers/schools/hospitals etc all so they can appear as great forward thinkers and fine humanitarians!!! jesus said it best referring to the "powers of that day" when he said.."they strain at fleas....and swallow camels" think about it. elpasogunslinger

one further thought...if they sneak across the border....where do they get this 3 million figure???also we tried something new here in elpaso in the last few years,instead of letting the illegals cross the border and chase them down in the interior,the local border cheif at the time stationed agents every hundred yards or so...right on the border....highly visible to the other side.things really slowed down after that.the tide of illegals definitly can be stopped....sylvester reyes proved that here.its hard on the agents,but it saves alot of fuel/vehicular costs etc. we have the technology/sensors/ground radar to virtually seal off the border to the south.we just lack the resolve to do so. i recommend you write your senators and voice in the strongest language possible that we are a sovereign country and we expect our leaders to behave as such. just my opinion elpasogunslinger

Hi Dave.

Speaking your mind is not a sin. The sin is in your heart, and your mouth is just the overflow pipe of your mind...

" But I say unto you, that whosoever is angry with his brother without a cause shall be in danger of the judgement "
Matthew 5v22

" But I say unto you, that whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery with her already within his heart."
Matthew 5v28

The reality is that we want the bodies. In this part of the planet (NE and IA), meat packing is still a biggie and conditions are not the greatest.
When the INS took up raiding the packing plants local govt up to and including the Senators protested vehemently and the INS backed off.

The only thing we gain by sending them on a trek thru the desert is that the

In the US, it would appear that possession could be used as proof of having used extra power on the band for which it is designed. Amps that operate in the 11 metre band are illegal.

In the UK, shops can freely sell amps that work in the 10 & 11 metre bands. This is because they could legally be used by Amateurs. The truth is that very few Amateurs would even touch the cheap cp that is sold in CB shops.

But if they banned the sale in CB shops, then CBers would buy amps from Ham shops. If they introduced a law requiring the shop to record licence info, then the sales would be on the "black market".
Illegal equipment has always found its way to the streets - CBs were available over here long before they were legal to use. As there is no tax or duty paid on "black market" goods, the government may not be keen to go down that route.

> And furthermore, it is only legal for a ham to build and sell

The theory is that a Radio Ham would know all about EMC issues.
The fact is that many now using the Ham bands do not know enough to design and build equipment. The proffessional equipment manufacturers will usually know more, have better test equipment, and MUST build the equipment to standards.

Do you think that the Amp rule should be changed? If the manufacturers must stick to spec, then maybe the Hams should only sell their "homebrew" if it meets the same spec, and has been approved. What ensures that their "homebrew" equipment is "clean", and how is the "one amp" rule enforced? If all amateurs can build their own equipment, then who buys a Hams "homebrew" equipment anyway - CBers?

Technology has moved on a great deal since Amateur Radio started, the bands are more crowded, and there is much more receiving equipment about to intefere with. Almost every home has a TV, most have more than one.

Many cases of inteference are caused by front end overload. This is often due to antenna position and tuning, or poor TV design.
The more power you use, the harder it becomes to avoid problems, and the more important it is to ensure the rest of the system is well positioned and tuned.

The dim/intermittent channel display turned out to be oxidation in a push-on connector at a regulator transistor. The transistor doesn't appear to have a location designation.. it's at the rear edge of the board, mounted upside down on a vertical heat sink plate (with another identical type).

Located some manuals for this model version with a D858 PLL and main board number PC-196 at Ken's Electronics in Kalamazoo.

After a close inspection I noticed that a couple of traces had been cut for the modification. The foil to pins 17 and 19 of the PLL had been cut to change the channel selector circuit with the added switches.
If anyone recognizes this modification, I'd appreciate knowing any other details.

Thanks in advance
WB

> (f) The imposition of a forfeiture against Mr. Martin without an > opportunity for a hearing or ``to remedy [Mr. Martinï¿½s] alleged > violation Section 301 of the Communications Actï¿½ï¿½ violates the Due > Process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States > Constitution.

> (g) The Commission is violating the Due Process clause of the Fourteenth > Amendment to the United States Constitution by ``selectivelyï¿½ï¿½ > initiating a forfeiture proceeding against Mr. Martin and ``not > targeting thousands of other stationsï¿½ï¿½ which operate without > authorization.
> III. DISCUSSION
>
> 13. We reject the arguments made in Mr. Martin's petition for > reconsideration:
> (a) The agent who requested permission to inspect Mr. Martin's radio > installation on March 15 and October 26, 1999, followed proper > procedures. On both occasions the agent informed Mr. Martin that Section > 303(n) of the Act authorizes the Commission to inspect radio > installations and that the agent had traced transmissions on frequencies > for which Mr. Martin was not authorized to Mr. Martin's residence.
> Immediate, on-the-spot inspections are necessary in such circumstances > because ``Any delay . . . can result in changed conditions of the > transmitting equipment or its operation, adversely affecting the > efficiency of inspections." Ralph Yago, 35 FCC 113, 125 (Rev.Bd. 1963).
> Further, nothing in the Communications Act requires the Commission to > allow a subject of an inspection to have opportunity to have an attorney > present during a civil investigation proceeding.
> (b) The Bureau's conclusion that Mr. Martin operated radio transmitting > apparatus without authorization on February 27, October 19, and October > 26, 1999, is supported by substantial evidence. On each occasion, the > agent determined electronically that transmissions on a frequency or > frequencies for which Mr. Martin was not authorized emanated from an > antenna installed at Mr. Martin's residence. The only person observed at > Mr. Martin's residence on any of these occasions was Mr. Martin. Mr.
> Martin has had ample opportunity to provide information, if it exists, > which shows that another person operated the station located at his > residence; but he has not done so. During the transmissions observed on > February 27, 1999, the operator of the station located at Mr. Martin's > residence responded to the name ``Leonard.ï¿½ï¿½ > (c) As the NAL explicitly states, the forfeiture amount in this case was > assessed in accordance with Section 503(b) of the Act,4 Section 1.80 of > the Rules,5 and The Commission's Forfeiture Policy Statement and > Amendment of Section 1.80 of the Rules to Incorporate the Forfeiture > Guidelines, 12 FCC Rcd 17087 (1997), recon. denied, 15 FCC Rcd 303 > (1999) (``Policy Statementï¿½ï¿½). Section 503(b) of the Act requires > that, in examining Mr. Martinï¿½s response, the Commission take into > account the nature, circumstances, extent and gravity of the violation > and, with respect to the violator, the degree of culpability, any > history of prior offenses, ability to pay, and other such matters as > justice may require.6 In the Forfeiture Order, we considered all factors > applicable to this matter and reduced the monetary forfeiture from > $17,000 to $4,000 on the basis of Mr. Martinï¿½s inability to pay a > larger amount. Mr. Martin has not furnished any information which > justifies a further reduction.

> (d) Mr. Martin's Commerce Clause argument is dependent on the incorrect > assumption that transmissions emanating from his residence on 27.445, > 27.535 and 27.545 MHz are not capable of interfering with interstate > communications. In fact, transmissions on those frequencies are capable > of long range (interstate) propagation through the natural phenomenon > known as sky (``skipï¿½ï¿½) wave. Furthermore, the view that the > Commission cannot constitutionally regulate communications unless they > are capable of interfering with interstate communications is erroneous.
> See National Broadcasting Co. v. United States, 319 U.S. 190, 209-217
> (1943); FCC v. League of Women Voters of California, 468 U.S. 364, 377
> (1984); and Stephen Paul Dunifer, 11 FCC Rcd 718, 727 (1995).
> (e) The prohibition against unlicensed operation does not abridge Mr.
> Martin's First Amendment rights. The United States Supreme Court has > held repeatedly that there is no constitutional right to use radio > facilities without a license. See Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC, 395 > U.S. 367, 388 (1969); and National Broadcasting Co. v. United States, > 319 U.S. 190, 227 (1943).
> (f) . The Commission did not abridge Mr. Martin's right to procedural > Due Process by failing to provide opportunities for an evidentiary > hearing and for correction of the violations prior to the imposition of > the forfeiture. Sections 503 and 504 of the Communications Act7 provide > safeguards which satisfy Due Process requirements.8 See Stephen Paul > Dunifer, 11 FCC Rcd 718, 729 (1995). Further, nothing in the > Communications Act requires the Commission to provide an unlicensed > operator the opportunity for an evidentiary hearing or an opportunity to > correct a violation prior to imposition of a forfeiture.
> (g) The Commission did not abridge Mr. Martin's right to procedural Due > Process by proceeding against him ``selectively.ï¿½ï¿½ The case against > Mr. Martin arose from the routine investigation of a complaint. As the > Commission stated in KMAP, Inc., 46 FCC 2d 978 (1974): ``While our > limited resources may result in some violators going unpunished, that > does not mean that we cannot impose sanctions against those violators we > do find.ï¿½ï¿½9 > 14. We have examined Mr. Martin's petition for reconsideration pursuant > to the statutory factors set forth above, and in conjunction with the > Policy Statement as well. As a result of our reconsideration, we > conclude that Mr. Martin has failed to provide a sufficient > justification for rescission or further reduction of the forfeiture.
> IV. ORDERING CLAUSES

> ORDER
> Adopted: October 5, 2000 Released: October 10, 2000
> By the Chief, Enforcement Bureau:
> 1. In this Order, we adopt a Consent Decree terminating a forfeiture > proceeding against Robert L. Meyers (``Meyersï¿½ï¿½) concerning > operation of an Amateur Radio transmitter in violation of Section 333 of > the Communications Act of 1934, as amended (the ``Actï¿½ï¿½), and

> Notice of Apparent Liability in the amount of ($8000)
> issued against amateur radio operator Paul E. Holcombe K4TOF
> Adopted: May 2, 2000 Released: May 3, 2000
> By the Chief, Enforcement Bureau:
> I. INTRODUCTION
>
> 1. In this Forfeiture Order (``Orderï¿½ï¿½), we issue a monetary > forfeiture in the amount of eight thousand dollars ($8,000) against Paul > E. Holcombe, licensee of amateur radio station K4TOF, Houston, Texas, > for willful violation of Section 333 Communications Act of 1934, as > amended (``the Actï¿½ï¿½),1 and Sections 97.101(d) and 97.119 of the > Commissionï¿½s Rules.2 The noted violations involve the operation of an > amateur radio station so as to willfully or maliciously cause > interference to radio communications and the transmission of > unidentified amateur radio communications.

> 2. On January 13, 2000, the Commission's Resident Agent Office in > Houston, Texas, issued a Notice of Apparent thousand dollars ($8,000) to > Mr. Holcombe.3 Mr. Holcombe filed a response on February 4, 2000.
> II. BACKGROUND
>
> 3. Between 1993 and 1999, the Commission's Houston Resident Agent Office > received numerous complaints alleging intentional interference to users > on the Memorial Emergency Repeater Association's 145.470/144.870 MHz > amateur radio repeater in Houston (``MERA repeaterï¿½ï¿½). The > interference was allegedly caused by stations transmitting unidentified > tones, inflammatory or derogatory remarks, and unmodulated signals, none > of which were identified with an FCC-assigned call sign.
> 4. On May 25, 1999, an FCC agent from the Houston Office, using a mobile > automatic direction finding (``MADFï¿½ï¿½) vehicle to monitor the MERA > repeater, observed a radio signal consisting of unidentified tones and > remarks being transmitted on the input frequency of the MERA repeater.
> The agent simultaneously monitored the output frequency of the MERA > repeater and observed that this signal would transmit immediately after > other stations began transmitting, resulting in interference to > communications already in progress on the MERA repeater. At about 8:08 > p.m., using the MADF equipment and direction-finding techniques, the > agent determined that the source of the unidentified interfering > transmissions was a silver Toyota bearing Texas license plate DVZ74F.
> This vehicle was registered to Paul E. Holcombe, licensee of amateur > radio station K4TOF. Immediately thereafter, the Commission agent > conducted an interview with Mr. Holcombe and inspected the vehicle.
> Inside the vehicle, the agent found an amateur radio transceiver which > was tuned to the MERA repeater frequency pair and was capable of > transmitting on the MERA repeater frequency pair. Although Mr. Holcombe > admitted that he owned the vehicle and the amateur radio transceiver and > that he was the licensee of amateur radio station K4TOF, he denied > intentionally making any radio transmissions that day.
> 5. On June 2, 1999, the Houston Office issued to Mr. Holcombe an > Official Notice of Violation (``NOVï¿½ï¿½) for willful and malicious > interference to radio communications in violation of Section 333 of the > Act and Section 97.101(c)4 of the Rules and for transmitting > unidentified amateur radio communications in violation of Section 97.119 > of the Rules. In his June 4, 1999, response to the NOV, Mr. Holcombe > stated that his amateur radio station may have been inadvertently > activated on May 25, 1999, but he denied any intent to interfere with > other stations. Mr. Holcombe also stated that he suffered from a nerve > disorder in his hands which makes it difficult for him to manipulate the > controls of the amateur radio transceiver in his vehicle.

> 6. On January 13, 2000, the Houston Office issued the subject NAL, > citing Mr. Holcombe for willful violations of Section 333 of the Act and > Sections 97.101(d) and 97.119 of the Rules. In his February 4, 2000, > response to the NAL, Mr. Holcombe denies that the violations occurred.
> Mr. Holcombe asserts that there was a passenger in his car on May 25, > 1999, Dennis Rogers, who is willing to testify that the alleged > violations did not occur. Mr. Holcombe states that Mr. Rogers told the > FCC agent at the time that the alleged violations did not take place, > but the agent discounted his statement. In addition, Mr. Holcombe > asserts that the NAL unfairly holds him responsible for violations > dating back to 1993. Mr. Holcombe maintains that he is being charged for > any and all violations occurring during the period from 1993 to 1999 as > a ``convenient target.ï¿½ï¿½ Finally, Mr. Holcombe argues that he has > been denied a fair hearing of the facts and the right to due process.
> III. DISCUSSION
>
> 7. As the NAL explicitly states, the forfeiture amount in this case was > assessed in accordance with Section 503 of the Act,5 Section 1.80 of the > Rules, 6 and The Commission's Forfeiture Policy Statement and Amendment > of Section 1.80 of the Rules to Incorporate the Forfeiture Guidelines, > 12 FCC Rcd 17087 (1997), recon. denied, 15 FCC Rcd 303 (1999) (``Policy > Statementï¿½ï¿½). In examining Mr. Holcombeï¿½s response, Section 503(b) > of the Act requires that the Commission take into account the nature, > circumstances, extent and gravity of the violation and, with respect to > the violator, the degree of culpability, any history of prior offenses, > ability to pay, and other such matters as justice may require. 7 > 8. Section 333 of the Act and Section 97.101(d) of the Rules both > prohibit willful or malicious interference to radio communications.
> Section 97.119 of the Rules prohibits the transmission of unidentified > amateur radio communications. While Mr. Holcombe generally denies that > any violations of these provisions occurred, his denial is contradicted > by the observations of the FCC agent. On May 25, 1999, using MADF > equipment, the investigating FCC agent observed a radio signal > consisting of unidentified tones and remarks which would transmit on the > MERA repeater input frequency immediately after another station began > transmitting, resulting in harmful interference to communications > already in progress on the MERA repeater. The agent positively > identified the source of the interfering transmissions to be Mr.
> Holcombe's vehicle. On inspection of Mr. Holcombe's vehicle, the agent > found an amateur radio transceiver which was capable of transmitting on > the MERA repeater frequency pair and was in fact tuned to the MERA > repeater frequency pair. We conclude that this evidence is sufficient to > establish that Mr. Holcombe willfully and maliciously interfered with > radio communications in willful violation of Section 333 of the Act and > Section 97.101(d) of the Rules. As stated in the NAL, the interference > was both willful and malicious because Mr. Holcombe timed his > transmissions to commence just after other stations had begun > transmitting. Mr. Holcombe also willfully violated Section 97.119 of the > Rules because he failed to transmit the required FCC identification > during the transmissions.

> 9. While Mr. Holcombe asserts that there was a passenger in his car on > May 25, 1999, Dennis Rogers, who is willing to testify that the alleged > violations did not occur, Mr. Holcombe failed to provide a sworn > statement or statement under penalty of perjury from Mr. Rogers. Even > so, the credibility of such a statement would be questionable in the > face of the substantial evidence that the violations occurred.
> Furthermore, while Mr. Holcombe claims that Mr. Rogers told the FCC > agent at the time that the alleged violations did not take place, the > agent's contemporaneous written notes of his May 25, 1999, interview > with Mr. Holcombe and Mr. Rogers do not reflect that Mr. Rogers made any > such statement.8 Thus, there is no evidence in the record to support Mr.
> Holcombe's claim that the violations did not occur.
> 10. Moreover, contrary to Mr. Holcombe's assertions, he is not being > held responsible for violations dating back to 1993. The reference in > the NAL to prior interference complaints was background information > intended to show the basis for the investigation that led to issuance of > the NAL. The NAL only cited Mr. Holcombe for the violations personally > observed and documented by the FCC agent.
> 11. Finally, we reject Mr. Holcombe's argument that he has been denied a > fair hearing of the facts and the right to due process. Mr. Holcombe is > not entitled to a hearing as a matter of right because Section > 503(b)(3)(A) of the Act, 47 U.S.C. ï¿½ 503(b)(3)(A), explicitly states > that such hearings may be held ``[a]t the discretion of the > Commission.ï¿½ï¿½ (emphasis added). In lieu of holding a hearing, the > Commission may proceed as it did in the instant case, using the NAL > procedures set forth in Section 503(b)(4) of the Act, 47 U.S.C. ï¿½ > 503(b)(4). See also 47 C.F.R. ï¿½ 1.80(e). These procedures do not > deprive Mr. Holcombe of his right to due process because any forfeiture > issued in accordance with these procedures is ultimately subject to a > trial de novo in federal district court pursuant to Section 504(a) of > the Act, 47 U.S.C. ï¿½ 504(a), should Mr. Holcombe not pay prior to such > time.
> 12. We have examined Mr. Holcombe's response to the NAL pursuant to the > statutory factors above, and in conjunction with the Policy Statement.
> As a result of our review, we conclude that Mr. Holcombe has failed to > justify cancellation or reduction of the proposed forfeiture. Therefore, > we affirm the forfeiture of eight thousand dollars ($8,000).
> IV. ORDERING CLAUSES
>
> 13. Accordingly, IT IS ORDERED THAT, pursuant to Section 503(b) of the

> Forfeiture Order Against "Two Way Shop" in the amount of ($7000)
> for Offering Linear Amplifiers for Sale
> FORFEITURE ORDER
>
> Adopted: April 6, 2000 Released: April 7, 2000
> By the Chief, Enforcement Bureau:
> I. INTRODUCTION
>
> 1. In this Forfeiture Order (``Orderï¿½ï¿½), we issue a monetary > forfeiture in the amount of seven thousand dollars ($7,000) against the > Two Way Shop (``Two Wayï¿½ï¿½) for willful and repeated violations of > Section 302 of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended > (``Actï¿½ï¿½),1 and Sections 2.803 and 2.815 of the of the > Commissionï¿½s Rules (``Rulesï¿½ï¿½).2 These violations involve Two > Wayï¿½s offer for sale of linear amplifiers capable of operation in the > 26.965 to 27.405 MHz frequency band.
> 2. On July 14, 1999, the Commission's Seattle, Washington, Field Office, > issued the referenced Notice of Apparent Liability for Forfeiture > (``NALï¿½ï¿½) for a monetary forfeiture in the amount of seven thousand > dollars ($7,000) to Two Way for the noted violations.3 Patrick Cleppe, > owner and operator of Two Way, filed a response to the NAL on July 26, > 1999.
> II. BACKGROUND
>
> 3. Two Way is a consumer electronics dealer in Kennewick, Washington. On > March 19, 1999, an FCC agent from the Commission's Seattle Field Office, > who was posing as a member of the general public, visited Two Way's > place of business at 220 Columbia Drive E., Kennewick, Washington.
> During that visit, a salesman who the agent believes is named Gary > Greenfield offered to sell an external radio frequency power amplifier > -- commonly known as a ``linear amplifierï¿½ï¿½ -- to the agent. The > linear amplifier offered to the agent was capable of operation in the > 26.965 to 27.405 MHz frequency band, which is assigned to citizens band > radio (``CBï¿½ï¿½) operators. Such a linear amplifier is used to > increase the power of CB stations beyond the authorized level. On May > 15, 1999, two FCC agents from the Commissionï¿½s Seattle Field Office, > who were posing as members of the general public, visited Two Wayï¿½s > place of business. On this occasion, a salesman, who the agents believe > to be Mr. Cleppe, showed the agents Galaxy XL350 and Palomar 80 linear > amplifiers and told the agents that an additional model (Galaxy XL250) > was expected to be in stock later that day. The salesman offered to sell > these linear amplifiers, which were capable of operation in the 26.965 > to 27.405 MHz frequency band, to the agents. Section 302 of the Act, and > Sections 2.803 and 2.815 of the Rules prohibit the sale or offer for > sale of linear amplifiers that are capable of operation in the 26.965 to > 27.405 MHz frequency band. On July 14, 1999, the District Director, > Seattle Field Office, issued an NAL to Two Way in the amount of $7,000 > for willful and repeated violations of Section 302 of the Act, which > prohibits the sale or offer for sale of transmitting equipment not in > compliance with the FCC rules, and Sections 2.803 and 2.815 of the > Rules, which prohibit the sale or offer for sale of linear amplifiers > that are capable of operation in the 26.965 to 27.405 MHz frequency > band.

> 4. On July 26, 1999, the Commission received the response to the NAL, in > which Two Way requests the cancellation of the proposed forfeiture. Two > Way asserts: that Gary Greenfield was not an employee of Two Way at any > time during March 1999; that Two Way is a proprietorship which has never > had any employees; that its business records indicate it never purchased > any linear amplifiers; and that Two Way collects sales taxes and charges > $38.50 for installation and tuning.5 In addition, Two Way states, if its > response does not close this matter, it is making a ``motion for > Discovery.ï¿½ï¿½
> III. DISCUSSION
>
> 5. As the NAL explicitly states, the forfeiture amount in this case was > assessed in accordance with Section 503 of the Act,6 Section 1.80 of the > Rules, 7 and The Commission's Forfeiture Policy Statement and Amendment > of Section 1.80 of the Rules to Incorporate the Forfeiture Guidelines, > 12 FCC Rcd 17087 (1997), recon. denied, FCC 99-407, (Released Dec. 28,

> Section 503(b) of the Act requires that the Commission take into account twistedhed, you and your subspecies live in an intellectual and RF sewer. This is not even to mention that you are federal criminals. No one except your fellow sewer dwellers feels any envy toward your ilk. On the other hand, it IS funny to see the pathetic attempts to justify made up names and criminal activity. You KNOW you are criminals, that is why you have all these made up names, and what you THINK is secrecy, surrounding your criminal activities.

What we observe with you keyclowns is a mass psychosis. Group denial on a huge scale. It is funny. I think "twistedhed" is a very apt characterization for you and your fellow keyclowns.

You are federal criminals. Period.

Gee, I didn't infer that message at all. The message I got, and others who've sent us e-mails in support, is that it's better to use any and all available legal means to effect the removal of an unjust (...or in this case, just plain silly.) rule/law rather than ignoring it and/or continuing to break it. This message is meant for politicians, so they may identify a particular constituency and their issue...VISIBLY!

Coming from a AKCer, with all th associated USENET tactics, this can be construed as a compliment. Glad you liked the bumper sticker, Train. Take care and 73.

Great advice, but most newsreaders can't flush/filter domains. like AOL, they can only filter key words contained within the subject line. That makes it difficult becauce the Bozos (or Bozo) can vary their screen names and subject lines. Thanks for the pointer, though. Take care and 73.

Clipped from rec.radio.cb FAQ's

* Pay attention to the size of your audience - use the "Distribution:" header. If you leave it blank, your message will go to every civilized country in the world and occupy disk space in all news systems in all those places. If that's what you intend, it's fine but be aware that CB is not the same everywhere. Otherwise, use a distribution for your continent or country as appropriate for the subject of the message. For example, "na" (North America) "europe" "us" "uk" "japan" "france" etc. can be used similar to the following example: Distribution: usa or substitute your continent or country. Also, this regional distribution works for each state of the USA - just use the two-letter postal code for your state (i.e. ca, ne, co, pa, etc.) * If you have an item for sale, please limit the distribution area so that, for example, an article about a radio for sale in New Jersey won't get to California or Europe. If you wish, you may cross-post your for-sale article to rec.radio.swap.

Hello Richard: The gentleman requesting Crown Royal and Coke was probably Aaron.

Yes I'll get all wound up during Christmas time and buy a bottle of Crown Royal, (slid on by) I like it on the rocks. The I let the ice melt just a little and enjoy.

There was a guy in Woodlen Hills (San Fernando Valley Ca.) and his handle was "Crown Royal" and he used the Courier Royal, and his QSL Card and him the Courier Royal CB Radio, a bottle of Crown Royal, and some sweet sweet honey with some very tall legs, with the view of the San Fernando Valley out his windows, very classy.

Actually mark, he is correct, in the US for a radio to be operated on CB it has to be type acdepted FOR CB. Not one HAM radio meets this requirement.

Hello Punisha 413 Fl.

Yes I have heard that it is a 1/2 wavelength. I believe the poop on the advertisment also said it was a 1/2 WL.

I am a gonna share here:

The 1/2 WL antenna will have more loss in the impedance matching, as compared to the 5/8 WL antenna. Because the impedance matching device in the 5/8 WL antenna will requier less coils of wire/tubing ect.

Also the 5/8 has a lower angle of radiation.

The 1/2 WL antenna is around 206 to 208 inches long. And the 5/8 WL antenna is 255 to 258 inches long. Not a hole bunch of more antenna length.

The longer 5/8 antenna with the lower loss impedance matching, will put enough increase in field strengh to make it well worth the effort.

SC,
I believe TW is merely trying to promote the good practice of keeping grounds as short and direct as possible. Turns and sharp bends CAN cause ground loops or a mysterious tendency for the antenna not to want to tune. Like the posts we sometimes see where someone is having great trouble getting his SWR down to a reasonable level, or it will tune one end of the band, but not the other. I have run into this with my own customers' antennas. Even an unusually long mounting plate with bends and turns to get from under a car's lower fascia can cause trouble.

Klaus D. Kramer KA5NUP AKA "BAMM BAMM" received a 9,500 fine by FCC for various violations of the 1934 communications act. Kramer the creator of the infamous "i got my nightgown on my pretty red panties on and i am ready to go to bed" foolishness that has plagued 11 meters in recent years was finally shut down. Kramer known as "motorcycle mike" by locals blamed Oklahoma City Amateur Radio Operators for reporting his activities. Detailed information about his set up can be found at the following web link. Please check about half way down the page. http://www.arrl.org/news/enforcement_logs/2001/0825.html

Any radio equipment may be operated on any frequency in an emergency.
Emergencies are defined as situations where damage to property, bodily harm to people, or death could occur. It is legal to use HAM gear on CB down the freeway. It is not legal to use HAM gear on CB to get a smokey

TW,
A few thoughts below.
Twistedhed <twistedhed@webtv.net> wrote in message news:9497-3B981539-26@storefull-127.iap.bryant.webtv.net...
"First off, it's a welcome breath of fresh air to see someone so passionate about something they believe and still maintain dignity, integrity, and respect for themself and others. Some points I would like your input on, you will find below

>>long text snipped<<
"I don't tend to agree with that in it's entirety. I believe domestic money plays a much larger part than any concern over international harmony."

While domestic interests DO wave money at Congress and FCC, their efforts are mostly directed at the areas from 500+ MHZ. Their interests are in cell tech, microwave, and satellite comms. Nonetheless, we as a country have signed treaties that govern, especially, long-haul comms--those that can adversely affect all nations' use of the spectrum. For example, the Amateur community is having to fight tooth and nail to ward off the industry
"sharks"
that seek to take a bit out of our "GHZ" allocations. There is no industry clam-oring to take over 27 MHZ. But, again, comms on that band adversely affect other ITU signatories if used improperly.

give away the "real" agenda of many CB operators, especially those who operate in defiance of FCC regulations. That agenda is, if the truth is known, the abolishment of any and all regulations that "restrict" the operations of those who feel that the parameters granted to the CB service should be extended to no regulation at all. It is also a narrow view, that, when extensively examined, would actually hamper, not only the other users of radio,
but the same CBers who would want to be able to operate anyway, anyhow,
anywhere they want.

"I don't believe most cbers have an underlying secret agenda toward ANYTHING. For the most part, I feel cbers and hammies alike are an apathetic crowd when compared to any other collective organization of fans/hobbiests. Sure, winds of change may occur, but the cry has been wolf so long, no one pays it any mind."

I don't know how else to approach this, and it isn't to make anybody mad. The attitude of what we will call "militant" CBers, for lack of a better term, is best examined thru their actions. What they DO speaks more loudly than any words, spoken or non-spoken. Let's not rehash that pore old dead horse anymore. Suffice it to say that the law says one thing, the "militant CBer" defies it. The law says another thing, the "militantCBer" ignores it. Another law is on the books restricting still another thing, the "militant CBer" thumbs his nose at that as well. You are, indeed, correct, that the regulations err on the side of caution. For example, that is one of the reasons one isn't supposed to operate on the frequencies "between" CB channels; it was to serve as a "guard" channel to minimize interference. Same in the so-called "freeband". Yes, some of them are "empty". These are guard channels as well.

Now, by operating outside the regulations, the "militant" CBer says he will do as he pleases, where he pleases, and how he pleases, and to Hell with the other users of the spectrum. Does this not say loudly that I am more important than anyone else? Does this not say that IF I am not free by law to do this that I will TAKE that spectrum for myself, because I think I should be allowed to do as I please, or turn up an amp to a gadzillion watts and jam every one else, or splatter--in or out of the 40 channels. There are legal and illegal CBers (legal and illegal hams, BTW), and could we not draw from this that there are folks who are willing to abide by the law---and maybe have a little appreciation of WHY those rules exist?

<<snipped>>
to the chagrin of certain hammies, even to the point where some of know that no amount of bitching about laws is going to make our identical radio setup you may have in your home bleed anymore on 11 meters than yours will on 10 with the same power.

That would go back to, for one thing, the power and radio type. The laws were set for 4 watts. This was agreed upon because, at the time of CB's in-ception, much negotiation had to be done to get a CB service approved. When a CBer has a 100 watt radio, then he can, of course, "git out" better. BUT then he can also be heard by Joe CBER out in Omaha who might NOT want to hear him because he is trying to talk to his wife on the way home from work. I hate to be sitting at a light and have my rear view mirror VIBRATING to some kid's BIG stereo amp going BOOM BOOM BOOM. CB could be, and often is a useful tool, but the big radios and big power amps ruin it for those who want it for a cheap way of keeping in touch. Even 4 watts "skips", but it isn't nearly as intrusive.

ese new nocode techs don't give a damn about radio knowledge, they are just waiting for the code to be dropped altogether so they can go wherever they want with minimal effort. They want the same parameters that the "higher" hammies have but don't want to work for it or educate themselves to attain it. This attitude is detrimental to the hobby and is a hindrance to those working to better it. These are probably the same ones that come down to the cb channels and raise hell and start BS. Of course I don't believe that, Jerry, (except for the part of negativity reflecting poorly on both services) but the illustration shows the pendulum can swing both ways."

I can agree with that. It is the (almost) same thing. It is more a reflection of a "gimme" society than just radio. We all seem to want everything with almost no effort. Those of us who got into Amateur prior to the 90s just looked at it and said, "(sigh), OK, this is what I have to do to earn the privilege", so we studied and fussed over the Code, went and took tests, failed, perhaps a few times, and went back/took it again until we passed. I took the Advanced test 3(?) times before I got it. That thing was HARD for me. I also do not believe in coming to 11 meters and hassling people. I USE 11 meters--a lot on the highway. I don't care for beeps, squeaks, and farts, or filthy language, so I just say what I want in plain language and hush. That's the military training in me! LOL!
I DO believe, however, that Amateur Radio offers so much more than 11 meters. It offers boo-koos of bands/freqs, a myriad of activities that can expand one's hobby into things ya never thought you'd be interested in! Heck,
I did the code just because I HAD to to even GET a license. Danged if I didn't get hooked on it--just bought me a new keyer at Shelby. I'd a-never thought!
Yes, ham radio has its share of geeks, freaks, and curmudgeons. So does CB. The CB curmudgeons are the "Channel Masters" who won't let you talk on "his" channel. It does go both ways. It's just that when I run to 'em on ham, I can just slide off to another freq or band--or go out to the shop and build an antenna or repair something.

Best to ya, TW,

Jerry

Have you looked at the prices, new and used, of 2 meter gear lately? The prices are comparable to most, or many, of the CB radios. They are MUCH more bang for the buck.

The logic is a bit convoluted but running a piece of non-certified gear means you are not operating within the blanket grant of permission which means you are operating without a license which means you have violated the Communications Act.

FCC INVESTIGATION LEADS TO ARREST
OF UNLICENSED AMATEUR RADIO OPERATOR
The Federal Communications Commission today announced that an investigation by its Enforcement Bureau led to the July 20, 2000, arrest of Mr. William Flippo, Jupiter, Florida, for operating an unlicensed radio station on amateur radio frequencies and for intentionally causing interference to licensed amateur radio stations.
The Enforcement Bureau, responding to numerous complaints, had previously warned Mr. Flippo to stop his illegal activities and had issued him a $20,000 forfeiture. Despite the Enforcement Bureau's administrative response, Mr. Flippo did not stop his illegal activity. The United States Attorney's Office for the Southern District of Florida charged Mr. Flippo with four counts of unlicensed radio operation (47 U.S.C. § 301) and four counts of interfering with licensed radio stations (47 U.S.C. § 333), which he allegedly committed between June 8, 1999, and April 11, 2000. The United States Marshals Service arrested Mr. Flippo at his Jupiter, Florida home, from which it also seized his radio transmitting equipment.
If convicted, Mr. Flippo could face up to one year in prison and a fine of up to $10,000 for each violation.
Commenting on behalf of the Enforcement Bureau, Jane E. Mago, Deputy Chief, commended the members of the amateur radio community, who provided information leading to Mr. Flippo's arrest, and thanked the United States Attorney's Office for the Southern District of Florida and the United States Marshals Service for their efforts in prosecuting the case.

FCC INVESTIGATION LEADS TO FINE
FOR LICENSED AMATEUR RADIO OPERATOR
I. INTRODUCTION

1. In this Memorandum Opinion and Order (``Order´´), we deny Leonard Martin´s petition for reconsideration and affirm the Forfeiture Order1 issued against Leonard D. Martin in the amount of four thousand dollars ($4,000) for willfully and repeatedly violating Sections 301 and 303(n) of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended (``the Act´´). 2 The noted violations involve Mr. Martin´s operation of a two-way radio station without Commission authorization and his refusal to allow inspections of his radio installation.
2. On March 3, 2000, the Houston Resident Agent Office (``Houston Office´´) issued a Notice of Apparent Liability for Forfeiture (``NAL´´) in the amount of seventeen thousand dollars ($17,000) to Mr. Martin for the referenced violations.3 Mr. Martin filed a response to the NAL. On July 12, 2000, the Enforcement Bureau (``Bureau´´) released a Forfeiture Order reducing the proposed forfeiture to $4,000.
II. BACKGROUND

3. Mr. Martin is the former licensee of amateur station KC5WHN. By letter of November 3, 1998, the Commission notified Mr. Martin of complaints concerning a station identifying as KC5WHN. The complaints asserted that the station identifying as KC5WHN was operating on frequencies which were not authorized for that station. In his telephone response to that letter, Mr. Martin denied the alleged unauthorized operation.
4. On February 27, 1999, an agent from the Houston Office (``the agent´´), using a mobile automatic direction finding (``MADF´´) vehicle, observed voice radio transmissions on frequencies 27.535 and 27.545 MHz. Frequency 27.535 MHz is allocated exclusively to Industrial radio stations. Frequency 27.545 MHz is allocated exclusively to United States Government radio stations. The transmissions were unidentified, but the operator responded to the name ``Leonard.´´ Using the MADF vehicle, the agent determined that the source of the transmissions was an antenna mounted on the residence at 4415 Spellman, Houston, Texas, which was then the address of record for Mr. Martin´s amateur service station. There was no record of a Commission authorization permitting Mr. Martin to operate on 27.535 MHz or 27.545 MHz.
5. On March 15, 1999, the agent, using an MADF vehicle, observed voice radio transmissions on 27.370 MHz, a frequency allocated as a ``guard´´ frequency between authorized channels in the Citizens Band Radio Service. The operator identified himself as ``Leonard.´´ Using the MADF vehicle, the agent determined that the source of the transmissions was a vertical antenna mounted on the residence at 4415 Spellman, Houston, Texas. Immediately after his monitoring observations, the agent knocked on the door of the residence. Mr. Martin answered the door and refused the agent´s request to inspect the radio station located in the residence. The agent informed Mr. Martin that his previously observed operation on 27.535 and 27.545 MHz was unlicensed and in violation of Section 301 of the Act because Mr. Martin held no Commission authorization to operate on those frequencies. The agent also informed Mr. Martin that his refusal to allow an inspection constituted violation of Section 303(n) of the Act.

6. On April 2, 1999, the Houston Office issued Mr. Martin an Official Notice of Violation (``NOV´´) for violations of Sections 301 and 303(n) of the Act. In Mr. Martin´s April 7, 1999, response to the NOV, he stated: ``I now fully understand that operation on the frequencies outlined is a violation ... that the FCC has the authority to inspect all radio installations... [and] ... I promise no further action by the Commission will be necessary to insure my complete compliance with the FCC Rules....´´

7. On July 22, 1999, Mr. Martin submitted his amateur service license for KC5WHN to the Commission for cancellation. By letter of July 23, 1999, the Commission acknowledged receipt of the license, and confirmed that it was cancelled effective July 23, 1999. The letter also warned Mr. Martin that any unlicensed radio operation would constitute violation of Section 301 of the Act.

8. On October 19, 1999, the agent investigated an interference complaint against Mr. Martin. The agent, using an MADF vehicle, observed voice radio transmissions on frequency 27.535 MHz, and determined that the source of those transmissions was a vertical antenna mounted on Mr. Martin's residence, at 4415 Spellman, Houston, Texas. This frequency is allocated exclusively to licensed Industrial radio stations. There was no record of a Commission authorization permitting Mr. Martin to operate on 27.535 MHz.

9. On October 26, 1999, the agent, using an MADF vehicle, observed voice radio transmissions on 27.455 MHz, a frequency allocated exclusively to Industrial radio stations. Using the MADF vehicle, the agent determined that the source of those transmissions was a vertical antenna mounted on Mr. Martin's residence, at 4415 Spellman, Houston, Texas. There was no record of a Commission authorization permitting Mr. Martin to operate on 27.455 MHz. Immediately after the monitoring, the agent knocked on the door of the residence and requested permission to inspect the station located there. Mr. Martin, who answered the door, refused to allow an inspection.

10. On March 3, 2000, the Houston Office issued a NAL in the amount of $17,000 to Mr. Martin for violations of Sections 301 and 303(n) of the Act. In his response to the NAL, Mr. Martin requested cancellation of the proposed forfeiture but did not deny violating Sections 301 and 303(n).

11. In its Forfeiture Order, released July 12, 2000, the Bureau concluded that Mr. Martin willfully and repeatedly violated Section 301 of the Act by operating radio transmitting apparatus without authorization on February 27, October 19, and October 26, 1999; and that he willfully and repeatedly violated Section 303(n) of the Act by refusing to make his radio installation available for inspection on March 15 and October 26, 1999. The Forfeiture Order assessed a monetary forfeiture of $4,000 for those violations. The sole basis for reducing the $17,000 forfeiture amount proposed by the NAL to $4,000 was Mr. Martin's inability to pay more than $4,000.

12. In his petition for reconsideration of the Forfeiture Order, Mr. Martin still does not deny operating radio transmitting apparatus without authorization or refusing to make his radio installation available for inspection. However, he propounds the following arguments for reduction or rescission of the forfeiture:
(a) The Commission ``failed to comply with its own procedures.'' Specifically, Mr. Martin asserts that, when an FCC agent requested permission to inspect his radio installation, the agent ``did not provide [Mr. Martin] proper notice to inspect [Mr. Martin's] communications devices or of any pending investigation, or allow [Mr. Martin] an opportunity to have an attorney present'' and did not allow sufficient time for Mr. Martin ``to exercise [his] rights as a U.S. Citizen to review any FCC rule or federal law that would permit unwarranted entry into [his] residence by the FCC.''
(b) The Forfeiture Order ``is based upon unsubstantiated allegations with insufficient evidentiary support.'' In particular, Mr. Martin contends that another station near his residence ``could have been'' the source of the transmissions observed by the FCC agent and that there is insufficient proof that Mr. Martin was the operator the station observed by the FCC agent.
(c) The forfeiture amount is ``grossly disproportionate to the alleged violations.'' Specifically, Mr. Martin asserts that the forfeiture amount of $4,000 is unreasonable ``given the nature and extent of the alleged violations.'' Mr. Martin also contends that the Bureau did not consider all the required mitigating factors. According to Mr. Martin, these include: the number of occurrences; the corrective measures Mr. Martin agreed to take; Mr. Martin's ability to pay; and ``the fact that no licensed radio station complained of interference nor was there any proof of actual harm caused by any radio transmission from [Mr. Martin's] residence.''
(d) The Commission, by imposing a forfeiture against Mr. Martin, has exceeded its authority to regulate interstate communications under the Commerce Clause of the Constitution. Mr. Martin argues that, although Section radio communications within one state as well as between states, the statute must be interpreted and applied in a manner consistent with constitutional limitations. In particular Mr. Martin claims that, because there has been no showing that his transmissions were capable of causing harmful interference to interstate communications, he cannot be prohibited from making those transmissions without a license.
(e) The prohibition of transmissions by Mr. Martin on frequencies for which he is not authorized and the imposition of a monetary forfeiture against Mr. Martin for making such transmissions violate the First Amendment to the United States Constitution.
(f) The imposition of a forfeiture against Mr. Martin without an opportunity for a hearing or ``to remedy [Mr. Martin's] alleged violation Section 301 of the Communications Act'' violates the Due Process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States

Constitution.
(g) The Commission is violating the Due Process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution by ``selectively´´ initiating a forfeiture proceeding against Mr. Martin and ``not targeting thousands of other stations´´ which operate without authorization.
III. DISCUSSION

13. We reject the arguments made in Mr. Martin's petition for reconsideration:
(a) The agent who requested permission to inspect Mr. Martin's radio installation on March 15 and October 26, 1999, followed proper procedures. On both occasions the agent informed Mr. Martin that Section 303(n) of the Act authorizes the Commission to inspect radio installations and that the agent had traced transmissions on frequencies for which Mr. Martin was not authorized to Mr. Martin's residence. Immediate, on-the-spot inspections are necessary in such circumstances because ``Any delay . . . can result in changed conditions of the transmitting equipment or its operation, adversely affecting the efficiency of inspections." Ralph Yago, 35 FCC 113, 125 (Rev.Bd. 1963). Further, nothing in the Communications Act requires the Commission to allow a subject of an inspection to have opportunity to have an attorney present during a civil investigation proceeding.
(b) The Bureau's conclusion that Mr. Martin operated radio transmitting apparatus without authorization on February 27, October 19, and October 26, 1999, is supported by substantial evidence. On each occasion, the agent determined electronically that transmissions on a frequency or frequencies for which Mr. Martin was not authorized emanated from an antenna installed at Mr. Martin's residence. The only person observed at Mr. Martin's residence on any of these occasions was Mr. Martin. Mr. Martin has had ample opportunity to provide information, if it exists, which shows that another person operated the station located at his residence; but he has not done so. During the transmissions observed on February 27, 1999, the operator of the station located at Mr. Martin's residence responded to the name ``Leonard.´´
(c) As the NAL explicitly states, the forfeiture amount in this case was assessed in accordance with Section 503(b) of the Act,4 Section 1.80 of the Rules,5 and The Commission's Forfeiture Policy Statement and Amendment of Section 1.80 of the Rules to Incorporate the Forfeiture Guidelines, 12 FCC Rcd 17087 (1997), recon. denied, 15 FCC Rcd 303 (1999) (``Policy Statement´´). Section 503(b) of the Act requires that, in examining Mr. Martin´s response, the Commission take into account the nature, circumstances, extent and gravity of the violation and, with respect to the violator, the degree of culpability, any history of prior offenses, ability to pay, and other such matters as justice may require.6 In the Forfeiture Order, we considered all factors applicable to this matter and reduced the monetary forfeiture from $17,000 to $4,000 on the basis of Mr. Martin´s inability to pay a larger amount. Mr. Martin has not furnished any information which justifies a further reduction.

(d) Mr. Martin's Commerce Clause argument is dependent on the incorrect assumption that transmissions emanating from his residence on 27.445, 27.535 and 27.545 MHz are not capable of interfering with interstate communications. In fact, transmissions on those frequencies are capable of long range (interstate) propagation through the natural phenomenon known as sky (``skip´´) wave. Furthermore, the view that the Commission cannot constitutionally regulate communications unless they are capable of interfering with interstate communications is erroneous. See National Broadcasting Co. v. United States, 319 U.S. 190, 209-217 (1943); FCC v. League of Women Voters of California, 468 U.S. 364, 377 (1984); and Stephen Paul Dunifer, 11 FCC Rcd 718, 727 (1995).
(e) The prohibition against unlicensed operation does not abridge Mr. Martin's First Amendment rights. The United States Supreme Court has held repeatedly that there is no constitutional right to use radio facilities without a license. See Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC, 395 U.S. 367, 388 (1969); and National Broadcasting Co. v. United States, 319 U.S. 190, 227 (1943).
(f) . The Commission did not abridge Mr. Martin's right to procedural Due Process by failing to provide opportunities for an evidentiary hearing and for correction of the violations prior to the imposition of the forfeiture. Sections 503 and 504 of the Communications Act7 provide safeguards which satisfy Due Process requirements.8 See Stephen Paul Dunifer, 11 FCC Rcd 718, 729 (1995). Further, nothing in the Communications Act requires the Commission to provide an unlicensed operator the opportunity for an evidentiary hearing or an opportunity to correct a violation prior to imposition of a forfeiture.
(g) The Commission did not abridge Mr. Martin's right to procedural Due Process by proceeding against him ``selectively.´´ The case against Mr. Martin arose from the routine investigation of a complaint. As the Commission stated in KMAP, Inc., 46 FCC 2d 978 (1974): ``While our limited resources may result in some violators going unpunished, that does not mean that we cannot impose sanctions against those violators we do find.´´9
14. We have examined Mr. Martin's petition for reconsideration pursuant to the statutory factors set forth above, and in conjunction with the Policy Statement as well. As a result of our reconsideration, we conclude that Mr. Martin has failed to provide a sufficient justification for rescission or further reduction of the forfeiture.
IV. ORDERING CLAUSES

15. ACCORDINGLY, IT IS ORDERED that, pursuant to Section 1.106 of the Rules, Mr. Martin's petition for reconsideration IS DENIED and the Forfeiture Order, 15 FCC Rcd 12699 (Enf. Bur. 2000), released on July 12, 2000, IS AFFIRMED.
16. Payment of the forfeiture of $4,000 shall be made in the manner provided for in Section 1.80 of the Rules within 30 days of the release of this Order. If the forfeiture is not paid within the period specified, the case may be referred to the Department of Justice for collection pursuant to Section 504(a) of the Act.10 Payment may be made by mailing a check or similar instrument, payable to the order of the

loses license and pays ($1000) fine

ORDER

Adopted: October 5, 2000 Released: October 10, 2000
By the Chief, Enforcement Bureau:
1. In this Order, we adopt a Consent Decree terminating a forfeiture proceeding against Robert L. Meyers (``Meyers´´) concerning operation of an Amateur Radio transmitter in violation of Section 333 of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended (the ``Act´´), and Sections 97.101(d) and 97.119(a) of the Commission´s Rules (the ``Rules´´).1 Meyers agrees to submit his Amateur Radio license for cancellation and not re-apply for an Amateur license for a period of 5 years. Meyers further agrees to make a voluntary contribution to the U.S. Treasury of $1,000.
2. The Enforcement Bureau assessed an $8,000 forfeiture against Meyers for violation of Section 333 of the Act and Sections 97.101(d) and 97.119(a) of the Rules.2
3. The Enforcement Bureau staff and Meyers have negotiated the terms of a Consent Decree that would terminate this proceeding. A copy of the Consent Decree is attached hereto and incorporated by reference.
4. We have reviewed the terms of the Consent Decree and evaluated the facts before us. We believe that the public interest would be served by approving the Consent Decree and terminating this proceeding.
5. Notice of Apparent Liability in the amount of ($8000)
issued against amateur radio operator Paul E. Holcombe K4TOF
FORFEITURE ORDER

Adopted: May 2, 2000 Released: May 3, 2000
By the Chief, Enforcement Bureau:
I. INTRODUCTION

1. In this Forfeiture Order (``Order´´), we issue a monetary forfeiture in the amount of eight thousand dollars ($8,000) against Paul E. Holcombe, licensee of amateur radio station K4TOF, Houston, Texas, for willful violation of Section 333 Communications Act of 1934, as amended (``the Act´´),1 and Sections 97.101(d) and 97.119 of the Commission´s Rules.2 The noted violations involve the operation of an amateur radio station so as to willfully or maliciously cause interference to radio communications and the transmission of unidentified amateur radio communications.

2. On January 13, 2000, the Commission's Resident Agent Office in Houston, Texas, issued a Notice of Apparent thousand dollars ($8,000) to Mr. Holcombe.3 Mr. Holcombe filed a response on February 4, 2000.
II. BACKGROUND

3. Between 1993 and 1999, the Commission's Houston Resident Agent Office received numerous complaints alleging intentional interference to users on the Memorial Emergency Repeater Association's 145.470/144.870 MHz amateur radio repeater in Houston (``MERA repeater´´). The interference was allegedly caused by stations transmitting unidentified tones, inflammatory or derogatory remarks, and unmodulated signals, none of which were identified with an FCC-assigned call sign.
4. On May 25, 1999, an FCC agent from the Houston Office, using a mobile automatic direction finding (``MADF´´) vehicle to monitor the MERA repeater, observed a radio signal consisting of unidentified tones and remarks being transmitted on the input frequency of the MERA repeater. The agent simultaneously monitored the output frequency of the MERA repeater and observed that this signal would transmit immediately after other stations began transmitting, resulting in interference to communications already in progress on the MERA repeater. At about 8:08 p.m., using the MADF equipment and direction-finding techniques, the agent determined that the source of the unidentified interfering transmissions was a silver Toyota bearing Texas license plate DVZ74F. This vehicle was registered to Paul E. Holcombe, licensee of amateur radio station K4TOF. Immediately thereafter, the Commission agent conducted an interview with Mr. Holcombe and inspected the vehicle. Inside the vehicle, the agent found an amateur radio transceiver which was tuned to the MERA repeater frequency pair and was capable of transmitting on the MERA repeater frequency pair. Although Mr. Holcombe admitted that he owned the vehicle and the amateur radio transceiver and that he was the licensee of amateur radio station K4TOF, he denied intentionally making any radio transmissions that day.
5. On June 2, 1999, the Houston Office issued to Mr. Holcombe an Official Notice of Violation (``NOV´´) for willful and malicious interference to radio communications in violation of Section 333 of the Act and Section 97.101(c)4 of the Rules and for transmitting unidentified amateur radio communications in violation of Section 97.119 of the Rules. In his June 4, 1999, response to the NOV, Mr. Holcombe stated that his amateur radio station may have been inadvertently activated on May 25, 1999, but he denied any intent to interfere with other stations. Mr. Holcombe also stated that he suffered from a nerve disorder in his hands which makes it difficult for him to manipulate the controls of the amateur radio transceiver in his vehicle.
6. On January 13, 2000, the Houston Office issued the subject NAL, citing Mr. Holcombe for willful violations of Section 333 of the Act and Sections 97.101(d) and 97.119 of the Rules. In his February 4, 2000, response to the NAL, Mr. Holcombe denies that the violations occurred. Mr. Holcombe asserts that there was a passenger in his car on May 25, 1999, Dennis Rogers, who is willing to testify that the alleged violations did not occur. Mr. Holcombe states that Mr. Rogers told the FCC agent at the time that the alleged violations did not take place, but the agent discounted his statement. In addition, Mr. Holcombe asserts that the NAL unfairly holds him responsible for violations dating back to 1993. Mr. Holcombe maintains that he is being charged for any and all violations occurring during the period from 1993 to 1999 as a ``convenient target.´´ Finally, Mr. Holcombe argues that he has been denied a fair hearing of the facts and the right to due process.

III. DISCUSSION

7. As the NAL explicitly states, the forfeiture amount in this case was assessed in accordance with Section 503 of the Act,5 Section 1.80 of the Rules, 6 and The Commission's Forfeiture Policy Statement and Amendment of Section 1.80 of the Rules to Incorporate the Forfeiture Guidelines, 12 FCC Rcd 17087 (1997), recon. denied, 15 FCC Rcd 303 (1999) (``Policy Statement´´). In examining Mr. Holcombe´s response, Section 503(b) of the Act requires that the Commission take into account the nature, circumstances, extent and gravity of the violation and, with respect to the violator, the degree of culpability, any history of prior offenses, ability to pay, and other such matters as justice may require. 7
8. Section 333 of the Act and Section 97.101(d) of the Rules both prohibit willful or malicious interference to radio communications. Section 97.119 of the Rules prohibits the transmission of unidentified amateur radio communications. While Mr. Holcombe generally denies that any violations of these provisions occurred, his denial is contradicted by the observations of the FCC agent. On May 25, 1999, using MADF equipment, the investigating FCC agent observed a radio signal consisting of unidentified tones and remarks which would transmit on the MERA repeater input frequency immediately after another station began transmitting, resulting in harmful interference to communications already in progress on the MERA repeater. The agent positively identified the source of the interfering transmissions to be Mr. Holcombe's vehicle. On inspection of Mr. Holcombe's vehicle, the agent found an amateur radio transceiver which was capable of transmitting on the MERA repeater frequency pair and was in fact tuned to the MERA repeater frequency pair. We conclude that this evidence is sufficient to establish that Mr. Holcombe willfully and maliciously interfered with radio communications in willful violation of Section 333 of the Act and Section 97.101(d) of the Rules. As stated in the NAL, the interference was both willful and malicious because Mr. Holcombe timed his transmissions to commence just after other stations had begun transmitting. Mr. Holcombe also willfully violated Section 97.119 of the Rules because he failed to transmit the required FCC identification during the transmissions.
9. While Mr. Holcombe asserts that there was a passenger in his car on May 25, 1999, Dennis Rogers, who is willing to testify that the alleged violations did not occur, Mr. Holcombe failed to provide a sworn statement or statement under penalty of perjury from Mr. Rogers. Even so, the credibility of such a statement would be questionable in the face of the substantial evidence that the violations occurred. Furthermore, while Mr. Holcombe claims that Mr. Rogers told the FCC agent at the time that the alleged violations did not take place, the agent's contemporaneous written notes of his May 25, 1999, interview with Mr. Holcombe and Mr. Rogers do not reflect that Mr. Rogers made any such statement.8 Thus, there is no evidence in the record to support Mr. Holcombe's claim that the violations did not occur.

10. Moreover, contrary to Mr. Holcombe's assertions, he is not being held responsible for violations dating back to 1993. The reference in the NAL to prior interference complaints was background information intended to show the basis for the investigation that led to issuance of the NAL. The NAL only cited Mr. Holcombe for the violations personally observed and documented by the FCC agent.

11. Finally, we reject Mr. Holcombe's argument that he has been denied a fair hearing of the facts and the right to due process. Mr. Holcombe is not entitled to a hearing as a matter of right because Section 503(b)(3)(A) of the Act, 47 U.S.C. § 503(b)(3)(A), explicitly states that such hearings may be held ``[a]t the discretion of the Commission.´´ (emphasis added). In lieu of holding a hearing, the Commission may proceed as it did in the instant case, using the NAL procedures set forth in Section 503(b)(4) of the Act, 47 U.S.C. § 503(b)(4). See also 47 C.F.R. § 1.80(e). These procedures do not deprive Mr. Holcombe of his right to due process because any forfeiture issued in accordance with these procedures is ultimately subject to a trial de novo in federal district court pursuant to Section 504(a) of the Act, 47 U.S.C. § 504(a), should Mr. Holcombe not pay prior to such time.

12. We have examined Mr. Holcombe's response to the NAL pursuant to the statutory factors above, and in conjunction with the Policy Statement. As a result of our review, we conclude that Mr. Holcombe has failed to justify cancellation or reduction of the proposed forfeiture. Therefore, we affirm the forfeiture of eight thousand dollars ($8,000).

IV. ORDERING CLAUSES

13. Accordingly, IT IS ORDERED THAT, pursuant to Section 503(b) of the Act,9 and Sections 0.111, 0.311 and 1.80(f)(4) of the Commission's Rules,10 Paul E. Holcombe, IS LIABLE FOR A MONETARY FORFEITURE in the amount of eight thousand dollars ($8,000) for willful and malicious interference to radio communications in violation of Section 333 of the Act and Section 97.101(d) of the Rules and for transmitting unidentified amateur radio communications in violation of Section 97.119 of the Rules.

14. Payment of the forfeiture shall be made in the manner provided for in Section 1.80 of the Commission's Rules11 within 30 days of the release of this Order. If the forfeiture is not paid within the period specified, the case may be referred to the Department of Justice for collection pursuant to section 504(a) of the Act.12 Payment may be made by credit card through the Commission's Credit and Debt Management

Center at (202) 418-1995 or by mailing a check or similar instrument, payable to the order of the Federal Communications Commission, to the Federal Communications Commission, P.O. Box 73482, Chicago, Illinois 60673-7482. The payment should note the NAL/Acct. No. X3254-002. Requests for full payment under an installment plan should be sent to: Chief, Credit and Debt Management Center, 445 12th Street, S.W., Washington, D.C. 20554.13
15. IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that a copy of this Forfeiture Order shall be sent by Certified Mail Return Receipt Requested to Paul E. Holcombe at 15103 Mira Vista Drive, Houston, Texas 77083-4208.

Forfeiture Order Against "Two Way Shop" in the amount of ($7000) for Offering Linear Amplifiers for Sale
FORFEITURE ORDER

Adopted: April 6, 2000 Released: April 7, 2000
By the Chief, Enforcement Bureau:
I. INTRODUCTION

1. In this Forfeiture Order (``Order´´), we issue a monetary forfeiture in the amount of seven thousand dollars ($7,000) against the Two Way Shop (``Two Way´´) for willful and repeated violations of Section 302 of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended (``Act´´),1 and Sections 2.803 and 2.815 of the of the Commission´s Rules (``Rules´´).2 These violations involve Two Way´s offer for sale of linear amplifiers capable of operation in the 26.965 to 27.405 MHz frequency band.
2. On July 14, 1999, the Commission's Seattle, Washington, Field Office, issued the referenced Notice of Apparent Liability for Forfeiture (``NAL´´) for a monetary forfeiture in the amount of seven thousand dollars ($7,000) to Two Way for the noted violations.3 Patrick Cleppe, owner and operator of Two Way, filed a response to the NAL on July 26, 1999.
II. BACKGROUND

3. Two Way is a consumer electronics dealer in Kennewick, Washington. On March 19, 1999, an FCC agent from the Commission's Seattle Field Office, who was posing as a member of the general public, visited Two Way's place of business at 220 Columbia Drive E., Kennewick, Washington. During that visit, a salesman who the agent believes is named Gary Greenfield offered to sell an external radio frequency power amplifier -- commonly known as a ``linear amplifier´´ -- to the agent. The linear amplifier offered to the agent was capable of operation in the 26.965 to 27.405 MHz frequency band, which is assigned to citizens band radio (``CB´´) operators. Such a linear amplifier is used to increase the power of CB stations beyond the authorized level. On May 15, 1999, two FCC agents from the Commission´s Seattle Field Office, who were posing as members of the general public, visited Two Way´s place of business. On this occasion, a salesman, who the agents believe to be Mr. Cleppe, showed the agents Galaxy XL350 and Palomar 80 linear amplifiers and told the agents that an additional model (Galaxy XL250) was expected to be in stock later that day. The salesman offered to sell these linear amplifiers, which were capable of operation in the 26.965 to 27.405 MHz frequency band, to the agents. Section 302 of the Act, and Sections 2.803 and 2.815 of the Rules prohibit the sale or offer for sale of linear amplifiers that are capable of operation in the 26.965 to 27.405 MHz frequency band. On July 14, 1999, the District Director, Seattle Field Office, issued an NAL to Two Way in the amount of $7,000 for willful and repeated violations of Section 302 of the Act, which prohibits the sale or offer for sale of transmitting equipment not in compliance with the FCC rules, and Sections 2.803 and 2.815 of the Rules, which prohibit the sale or offer for sale of linear amplifiers that are capable of operation in the 26.965 to 27.405 MHz frequency band.

4. On July 26, 1999, the Commission received the response to the NAL, in which Two Way requests the cancellation of the proposed forfeiture. Two Way asserts: that Gary Greenfield was not an employee of Two Way at any time during March 1999; that Two Way is a proprietorship which has never had any employees; that its business records indicate it never purchased any linear amplifiers; and that Two Way collects sales taxes and charges $38.50 for installation and tuning.5 In addition, Two Way states, if its response does not close this matter, it is making a ``motion for Discovery.´´

III. DISCUSSION

5. As the NAL explicitly states, the forfeiture amount in this case was assessed in accordance with Section 503 of the Act,6 Section 1.80 of the Rules, 7 and The Commission's Forfeiture Policy Statement and Amendment of Section 1.80 of the Rules to Incorporate the Forfeiture Guidelines, 12 FCC Rcd 17087 (1997), recon. denied, FCC 99-407, (Released Dec. 28, 1999) (``Policy Statement´´). In examining Two Way´s response, Section 503(b) of the Act requires that the Commission take into account the nature, circumstances, extent and gravity of the violation and, with respect to the violator, the degree of culpability, any history of prior offenses, ability to pay, and other such matters as justice may require. 8

6. The claims made in Two Way's attack upon the factual basis for the NAL are either immaterial or are directly contradicted by the observations of FCC agents. The agents who went to Two Way's place of business observed linear amplifiers on the premises and received offers to sell linear amplifiers from salespersons believed to be Mr. Greenfield and Mr. Cleppe. This is sufficient to establish the violations alleged in the NAL and contradicts the claim that Two Way did not possess any linear amplifiers. It is not material whether the persons who made the offers to sell were employees of Two Way or proprietors.

7. Discovery is available in Commission adjudication proceedings that have been designated for hearing.9 Since this case has not been designated for hearing, Two Way's discovery motion is inappropriate.

8. We have examined Two Way's response to the NAL pursuant to the statutory factors above, and in conjunction with the Policy Statement as well. As a result of our review, we conclude that Two Way has failed to justify cancellation or reduction of the proposed forfeiture amount. Therefore, we affirm the forfeiture of seven thousand dollars ($7,000).

IV. ORDERING CLAUSES

9. ACCORDINGLY, IT IS ORDERED that, pursuant to Section 503(b) of the Act, and Sections 0.111, 0.311 and 1.80(f)(4) of the Rules,10 the Two Way Shop, IS LIABLE FOR A MONETARY FORFEITURE in the amount of seven thousand ($7,000) for the repeated and willful violation of Section 302 of the Act, which prohibits the sale or offer for sale of transmitting equipment not in compliance with the FCC rules, and Sections 2.803 and 2.815 of the Rules, which prohibit the sale or offer for sale of linear amplifiers that are capable of operation in the 26.965 to 27.405 MHz frequency band.
10. Payment of the forfeiture shall be made in the manner provided for in Section 1.80 of the Rules within thirty (30) days of the release of this Order. If the forfeiture is not paid within the specified period, the case may be referred to the Department of Justice for collection pursuant to Section 504(a) of the Act.11 Payment may be made by credit card through the Commission's Credit and Debt Management Center at (202) 418-1995 or by mailing a check or similar instrument, payable to the order of the ``Federal Communications Commission,´´ to the Federal Communications Commission, P.O. Box 73482, Chicago, Illinois 60673-7482. The payment should note the NAL/Acct. No. 915ST0007. Requests for full payment under an installment plan should be sent to: Chief, Credit and Debt Management Center, 445 12th Street, S.W., Washington, D.C. 20554.
11. IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that a copy of this Order shall be sent by certified mail, return receipt requested, to Mr. Patrick Cleppe, the Two Way Shop, 220 Columbia Drive E., Kennewick, Washington 99336.

Forfeiture Order Against against "Dr. John G. Pierre" in the amount of ($10,000)
for Operation of a Radio Transmitter Without a License
FORFEITURE ORDER

Adopted: February 16, 2001 Released: February 20, 2001
By the Chief, Enforcement Bureau:
1. In this Forfeiture Order (``Order´´), we issue a monetary forfeiture in the amount of ten thousand dollars ($10,000) against Dr. John G. Pierre (``Dr. Pierre´´) for willful violation of Section 301 of the Communications Act of 1934 (``Act´´)1, as amended. The noted violation involves Dr. Pierre´s operation of a radio transmitter without a license.
2. On November 15, 2000, the District Director of the New York Field Office released a Notice of Apparent Liability for Forfeiture (``NAL´´) in the amount of eleven thousand dollars ($11,000) to Dr. Pierre. Dr. Pierre has not filed a response to the NAL. Based on the information before us, we affirm the assessment of a monetary forfeiture in this matter. However, ten thousand dollars ($10,000) is the base amount for this violation.2 Therefore, we are reducing the forfeiture amount to ten thousand dollars ($10,000) on our own motion.

3. ACCORDINGLY, IT IS ORDERED THAT, pursuant to Section 503(b) of the Act,3 and Sections 0.111, 0.311 and 1.80(f)(4) of the Commission's Rules,4 Dr. John G. Pierre IS LIABLE FOR A MONETARY FORFEITURE in the amount of $10,000 for willful violation of the provisions of Section 301 of the Act.
4. Payment of the forfeiture shall be made in the manner provided for in Section 1.80 of the Commission's Rules5 within 30 days of the release of this Order. If the forfeiture is not paid within the period specified, the case may be referred to the Department of Justice for collection pursuant to Section 504(a) of the Act.6 Payment may be made by mailing a check or similar instrument, payable to the order of the ``Federal Communications Commission,´´ to the Federal Communications Commission, P.O. Box 73482, Chicago, Illinois 60673-7482. The payment should reference NAL/Acct. number 20013238-0001. Requests for full payment under an installment plan should be sent to: Chief, Credit and Debt Management Center, 445 12th Street, S.W., Washington, D.C. 20554.7

Forfeiture Order Against Jerry Smith in the amount of ($13,500) for running a non-type-accepted transmitter
FORFEITURE ORDER

Adopted: April 18, 2001 Released: April 20, 2001
By the Chief, Enforcement Bureau:
1. In this Forfeiture Order (``Order´´), we issue a monetary forfeiture in the amount of thirteen thousand five hundred dollars ($13,500) to Jerry Smith for willful and repeated violations of Sections 95.409(a), 95.410(a) and 95.411(a)(1) of the Commission´s Rules (``Rules´´).1 The noted violations involve Mr. Smith´s operation of a Citizens Band (``CB´´) Radio Station with a non-type-accepted transmitter, with a transmitter output power greater than four watts carrier power in the AM (A3) mode, and with an external RF power amplifier.
2. On January 8, 2001, the Commission's Philadelphia, Pennsylvania Field Office issued a Notice of Apparent Liability for Forfeiture (``NAL´´) in the amount of thirteen thousand five hundred dollars ($13,500) to Mr. Smith for the noted violations.2 Mr. Smith has not filed a response. Based on the information before us, we affirm this forfeiture.
3. Accordingly, IT IS ORDERED that, pursuant to Section 503(b) of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended (``Act´´),3 and Sections 0.111, 0.311 and 1.80(f)(4) of the Rules,4 Jerry Smith IS LIABLE FOR A MONETARY FORFEITURE in the amount of thirteen thousand dollars ($13,500) for operating a CB Radio Station with a non-type-accepted transmitter, with a transmitter output power greater than four watts carrier power in the AM (A3) mode, and with an external RF power amplifier, in willful and repeated violation of Sections 95.409(a), 95.410(a) and 95.411(a)(1) of the Rules.
4. Payment of the forfeiture shall be made in the manner provided for in Section 1.80 of the Rules5 within 30 days of the release of this Order. If the forfeiture is not paid within the period specified, the case may be referred to the Department of Justice for collection pursuant to Section 504(a) of the Act.6 Payment shall be made by mailing a check or similar instrument, payable to the order of the Federal Communications Commission, to the Federal Communications Commission, Forfeiture Collection Section, Finance Branch, P.O. Box 73482, Chicago, Illinois 60673-7482. The payment should note the NAL/Acct. No. referenced above. Requests for full payment under an installment plan should be sent to: Chief, Revenue and Receivables Operations Group, 445 12th Street, S.W., Washington, D.C. 20554.7

5. IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that, a copy of this Order shall be sent by Certified Mail, Return Receipt Requested, to Jerry Smith, 125 Commonwealth Avenue, Claymont, DE 19703.

Jerry, these keyclowns advocate criminality. Many make profits off

I like the one below it, anyone who has heard the "Timtron" on 80 knows he is a riot with excellent broadcast quality audio on AM.
Dear Mr. Smith:

The Commission has reviewed monitoring information from your station on July 26 and 27, 2001 on 3.885 MHz. The transmissions from your station indicate an alarming lack of understanding of the basis and purpose of the Amateur Radio Service. The transmissions are characterized by sound effects such as belching, coughing directly into the microphone, and sound effects of other bodily functions probably best left undescribed. Furthermore, the repeated transmission of "testicle-ing" is not only juvenile but absurd as well.

Hi Popeye (or whatever it is today),

I think that Jerry is just seeing the ironic side to all this. Another debate about coax length, although the original coax length debate referred to SWR.

Don't get too worked up about it.

For that price range a good 40 channel CB would be the Uniden PC68LTW. A good deal on that radio would be about $100. It has the weather channels and all that.

http://www.uniden.com/cbhp_pc78ltw.html

If you are looking for an export or "extra channel" rig, a good one will cost you a little more. Most of them don't have weather capabilities though.

Bill, He is a Cber he was using a CB radio... His ham license carries no weight on the Cb band. If you look around there are many Cber's in this NG who just happen to have a ham license. He was a wayward Cber since everyone knows most hams have started as Cbers then come back to Cb.. Don't believe me ask the many in here who claimed they used to be hams.

You have snipped the part which explains my reply, so to recap...

YOU SAID:
> > In the same spirit, why would an unlicensed person in the > > UK need to buy a CB amp he can't use?

So why are you now referring to US rules? My reply was to your UK question.
Your replies show a degree of desperation. Taking the reply out of context in an effort to twist my words.
Can you really not debate a subject without resorting to such obvious tactics?

> Your use of the equipment assumes your acceptance of FCC regs.

No it doesn't, your memory seems to be failing you.
The FCC rules don't apply, as I am in the UK !!!

> It's just one more lame excuse given to justify your illegal CB crap > and make you feel better about yourself when you break the law.

More assumptions. Where do you see any evidence of your accusation that I break the law?

> Radio laws and regulations don't suit you? Change them instead of > making excuses for not obeying them.

Even more assumptions. I have never said that the Radio laws and regulations don't suit me.

And for your information, many UK CB rules have changed because the CBers have requested changes.

You probably wont like this, but it is a FACT that in the early days of UK CB, legal users caused much more inteference than illegal users. Antenna rules were changed to correct this problem.

> Don't like criticism in a public forum? Stop defending criminal > behavior and people won't have any reason to get on your case.

Boy, these assumptions keep on coming. Where have I said that breaking the law is OK? Where did I complain about "criticism in a public forum"?

Ok, I will help you out here... Nowhere, and nowhere.

Let's look at some facts:
It is you who keeps twisting peoples words to suit your standard replies.
It is you who keeps whining and complaining.
It is you who gets upset when people disagree with you.
It is you who resorts to questionable tactics to avoid a real discussion.
It is you who is so ashamed of your own opinions, or lack of a good reason for them, that you avoid giving them.

I only stated FACTS!!
If you dont like the facts, then stay in your dream world - safe from reality. But please dont expect me to join you there.

Mr. Brainbuster.

You may consider twisting a persons words to be logical, but I doubt if many sane people (politicians and journalists excluded) would view it the same way.

> Personally, I am not as concerned with CB DXing on the legal 40 as I

So why do you consider the "stealing" of frequencies (and using amps) to be more serious than illegally "exporting" signals? They are both illegal in your country, so what's the difference?

Why do you consider "freebanding to be serious enough to take up so much of your time on this personal "crusade"?

> Given that, if your purpose in asking my opinion about

Why should it be? We all have our own idea of morals and which laws are important. We all ignore people breaking certain laws, while we would vociferously push for the enforcement other laws.

> then what is it?

I want to see if you really are some nutcase who gets a "hard-on" when reading "part 95", or if you have a reason for your attitude.

Ah, but you were wrong. But then you were so scared of falling into a "trap" that you wouldn't wait to find out. What have you got to hide?

As I said, these are not trick questions. Do you really have opinions, or have you invented the "Aaron Voobner" character just to wind people up?

jesus told his apostles, Ceasers things unto Ceaser, and Gods things unto God. In other words,we are to follow the rules/laws of the land, so long as they do not go against his rules. Not one place in the bible does it say "though shalt interfere with other peoples radio communications by abusing fcc regulations.

I think it's wrong. I think about all of the other foreign nationals living here, who did it the legal way, which may have taken several years and thousands of dollars to make their dream of living here possible. To grant legal status to those who arrived here by floating to our shores on a raft, or wading across the Rio Grand is a slap in the face to those who worked hard to meet the legal requirements to come to this country to live.

This idea ranks right up there with our past US president Gerald Ford's idea to grant amnesty to all those Vietnam era draft evaders years ago. In one swift swipe of the pen he made the 50,000 plus who died there their deaths rendered meaningless.

Buster you have no idea how many times I get the same darn questions asked of me. I hope you won't mind, but this FAQ pretty much covers it all. If, after reading it, you still want to try and 'bamboozle' me then go ahead.

-Aaron-

Q: What is a KeyClown?

A: A 'KeyClown', in a nutshell, is a CBer gone bad. The name is derived from the term 'keydown', which is the equivalent of a dragrace using illegal radio amplifiers. A keyclown can be recognized by his or her open and public disregard for FCC regulations, total disrespect for other CBers,

and hostile aggression towards any form of criticism.

Q: What is an Anti-KeyClown?

A: An 'AntiKeyClown' is a legal CBer that actively confronts keyclowns on their own terms. Disrespect is countered with disrespect, hostility with hostility, etc. Any method or tactic used by the keyclown to harass legal

CBers, intimidate proponents of legal operation, or dominate either
the

Citizen's Band or any other aspect of legal CB use, will be considered a fair and viable method or tactic for use against the keyclowns.

Q: Are the AntiKeyClown posts actually all the work of N8WWM? Or Sparky? Or Leland? Or...?

A: There are many AntiKeyClowns. Each Anti takes upon him or herself the role that is best suited to their talents and abilities. While one Anti may choose to remain 'behind the scenes', another will perform their duties as a spokesperson. Some wish not to be indentified, while others enjoy the freedoms of full exposure. An Anti need not identify him or herself as such, and may make only a minor contribution to the effort. This describes the majority of the AntiKeyClowns. Only a few have choosen to be visible.

Q: Why do you hate illegal/outlaw CBers?

A: AntiKeyClowns are not about hate. An Anti is typically a person that has been offended, disturbed or victimized by the actions of keyclowns, and has chosen to take action instead of accepting defeat at the hands of outlaws.

Q: What do keyclowns do?

A: A keyclown generally ignores two important laws:

The first is by using radio frequency amplifiers with their CB radios.

These amplifiers are usually of poor design and construction, and will emit powerful harmonics. These harmonics, or "splatter," interferes with broadcast radio and television, as well as other legal radio communications such as police, fire, ambulance and aircraft communications. It also disrupts the Citizen's Band on other channels, making the channel or band useless for several miles within the radius of the keyclown. Many times this disruption is done with the deliberate intention of "shutting down" legal CBers.

The second law involves the use of frequencies that are outside of the Citizen's Band, and can even intrude on the 10 and 12 meter Amateur Radio bands. The primary reason for doing this is because people like themselves have made the legal channels useless in their area.

The behavior of keyclowns, if left unchecked, may eventually lead to the elimination of the Citizen's Band altogether. As the number of keyclowns increases, so will the need for more bandwidth and more power. This is a

"king of the hill" mentality, and anyone that operates legally gets thrown off the hill. At some point in the future the keyclowns will become so loud and disruptive that the only way to stop them will be to 'clear the board' by shutting down the Citizen's Band completely. We would like to prevent both from happening.

Q: So why don't you just make your point and then go away? You're being "rude" by contantly poking your nose where it doesn't belong.

A: The Anti's believe in the Golden Rule.

Q: But you're just riling up the illegals and making them angry. That's not being a responsible person.

A: Their actions and emotions are not our responsibility.

Q: Why don't you go back and clean up your own mess on the ham bands?

A: The AntiKeyClowns have nothing to do with the Amateur Radio Services. It is true that some of the Anti's are hams, but it is also true that some of the keyclowns are hams as well. Amateur Radio has no more relevance to this subject than does saltwater fishing.

Q: But I'm a ham and I don't care what goes on on CB.

A: You should. Every year the "CB problem" gets worse, not better. More phoney export radios are flooding the market. More freebanders and confused truckers are showing up on 10 meters. We guarantee that if nothing is done, amateurs will be unwillingly "sharing" the 10 and 12 meter bands with illegal CBers in a very short time. And with the increase of illegal amps splattering into your home entertainment systems and other consumer devices, this is an issue that needs to be addressed not only by CBers and hams, but also by the general public.

Q: I support legal CB, but I do it quietly.

A: As stated before in this FAQ, each person will do what they feel is best for them. However, illegal radio operation is making the radio spectrum a very noisy place. In time, your quiet legal radio operation will be silenced by the keyclowns. This is what the Anti's see in the very near future, and it is what we are trying to prevent.

Q: You can't stop people from posting. It's perfectly legal to talk about illegal CB.

A: It is not our intent, nor can we prevent anyone from excercising their rights under the 1st amendment to the US Constitution.

Q: So why don't you go to a CB coffee break and harass people?

A: Our methods are diverse, but legal. We have noted the hostility of many of these illegal operators, and any attempt to provoke a group with another group would probably incite large-scale violence. Violence is not our intent, and would not benefit anyone. We would prefer to stand at a distance and collect information that can be used by the proper authorities.

Q: But I thought the law said I can own an export radio.

ï¿½

A: The FCC has issued a reminder about those HF transceivers ostensibly marketed for "amateur" use but actually designed and intended specifically for the so-called "freeband" radio operators who operate primarily in the 26 to 28 MHz frequency range. This notice, as well as all other FCC related material my be found at www.fcc.gov.

Q: Why can't I sell my CB amp or export radio on the newsgroup?

A: We cannot provide any legal advice except to suggest that anyone interested should read the FCC regulations. If you are in doubt as to how those regulations apply to you, consult an attorney, or email the FCC and they will provide a quick and authoritative answer to your question.

Q: But illegal CBers are just "bending the law." These laws are trivial.

A: The laws that are being "bent" can result in fines up to $75,000 and up to 1 year in prison. The punishment is not trivial, nor is the crime.

Q: The FCC doesn't enforce these laws, so why should I bother to obey them?

A: The FCC's recent lack of enforcement is no reason to think that they cannot enforce these laws at any time they please. That is a decision to be made by the FCC, not the AntiKeyClowns.

Q: Illegal CB is civil disobedience. Like the Minutemen did during the Revolutionary War. Or Rosa Parks during the Civil Rights protests.

A: We are, and always have been, open-minded to any argument providing moral justification for this illegal behavior. Unfortunately, no one has provided such an argument.

Q: CB is CB.....legal or not!

A: Here's an analogy. A hunter is one who follows hunting laws. Once he stops following the laws he is a poacher. A CB'er is one who follows CB regulations. Once he stops following the regulations, he is a pirate.

Q: Are you flamers? Trolls?

A: Yes and no. We flame and troll as necessary. Keyclowns are the only targets, and only keyclowns that have previously trolled or flamed others.

Q: But you're screwing up the newsgroup.

A: Keyclowns have been "screwing up" the Citizen's Band for several years.

We exist as a consequence of their behavior. Please do not confuse 'cause'

(the keyclowns) and 'effect' (the AntiKeyClowns). Without keyclowns there would be no AntiKeyClowns.

Q: Your anti-illegal CB postings are useless.

A: Perhaps. Perhaps not.

Same things goes for guns. In fact they are a perfect example. All these rules just make it that much harder for a person to "legally" acquire a weapon. But then I can go down the street to my local gun nut and get anything I need without paperwork. All it takes is cash.

Hello Brainstorm: The Moonraker 4 and MaCo Beam Antennas are all over the place in the UK.

I took the train from London England to Etinburrow (SB?) Scotland, several times, and saw many many CB Beam Antennas. Even helped put a few up.

No one seemed to care, the only concern was if the coax was long enough!

Hello Train: Yes I remember the old days when I had a wife.

I got chewed out for the wind blowing the wrong way, not making as much money as her farther, the grass growing the wrong way, the paint peeling, the pipes making noises, and the earths and moons orbit was also one of my faults.

I traded her off, for child support payments, living in my home without getting my ass chewed for every little thing, furniture, and 23 dollars a week to my name. Life was great, I got a maid, then gardener, and as I finichannly recovered in a few years, I got a new honey, and a set of new tires for the 77 Ford Truck..............

I had a dream about re marring her up again, I dreamed I was going thru divorce again, and had to buy her a house, but I woke up looking at my Dave Made 8 pill amp, I use as a spare, setting on the counter..... Kind of a symbol that I can do what I want to with out all the "Bee Dah Bee whining and complaining. No one could piss me off the rest of the day, knowing she really wasn't back with me, and it was all just a night mare.

Whoooooo Good deal.!

What is a Palomar 300a 4 band w/ external power supply amplifier worth these days? The tubes, I am told, are new and there is a second set with it, unknown condition.

Has 2 6LB6 driving 4 6LB6

I find it odd that most all keyclowns think FCC rules should be changed or eliminated. I mean, they don't obey the laws anyway. So why do they cry about it so much?

> If the manufacturers must

Not all amateurs build. And the ones who build tend to build only for themselves. The responsibility for building and operating 'clean' equipment rests with the individual licensee. The majority do not obey the law out of fear of the FCC. They obey the law because it is the right thing to do.

Wrong. If there is independant documentation of your running illegal power levels in your home, then having an amp in the house is presumed to be the amplifier (or one of the amplifiers) used. Possessing an amp, by itself, is not proof.

Also, amps that operate on the 11 meter band are NOT illegal - although amps designed exclusively for the 10/11 meter bands are (unless built by a ham). If such amps were illegal, then hams could not use linears on 10 meters - as all 10 meter amps will work on 11 meters.

Making use of the First Amendment, The Hal Turner Show is the most controversial talk-show on the airwaves, bringing American-style talk radio to over 50 countries around the world! Hear Hal tell it like it is . . .and watch the sacred cows of the liberal-left, run for cover! Minorities, Fags, and Criminals beware: Hal Turner is on the air!

The US is the only nation on Earth that truly protects the free speech of its citizens; even speech that many find offensive. We proudly broadcast it for all the world to hear.

My post was directed at Aaron, as well as other international readers who may have been confused by this antenna rule. It would have been pointless directing this at the UK only.

So I can only assume that this was aimed at Aaron, who quotes FCC rules to the whole world, although they only apply to the US.

But this is a bit unfair, as not everyone on here will know how to use the "distribution" header. So please educate us, how is this done? Can you list several distribution areas for a posting?
While you are at it, I haven't seen your reply about how to block a sender by their ISP number. Did I miss that posting? (I am getting a limited feed).

Wrong-amundo. The FCC has stated, and it has been UPHELD IN COURT, that the possession of an RF amplifier is prima faciae evidence of violation of Part 95.

The FCC's position, and the courts have supported them, that if there is enough evidence to get them to show up at your door in the first place, then chances are you were using it.

Tell them that if you wish...say it over and over if it makes you feel good, but it's still not true.

If you have one and they find it, you are BUSTED.

They are if you don't happen to have a license that authorizes thier use, Bill. this means either an Amatuer General class license (or higher) in most cases. There are others, but none include CB.

Again, the FCC has busted people for this. Why are you misleading them?
No License = Illegal Possession. If the FCC makes a knock-knock and they find an amp on-premises, you had either better have a license or good legal representation.

Because their rules state as such that's why. PLEASE NOTE THE "AND"!!!

{C} The FCC will presume you have used a linear or other external [RF] power amplifier if-

[1] It is in your possession or on your premises; and
[2] There is OTHER EVIDENCE that you have operated your CB station with more power than allowed by CB Rule 10.
{D} Paragraph C above in this section does not apply if you hold a license in another radio service (Amateur, etc.) which allows you to operate an external RF power amplifier.

Presume is a word the FCC uses don't get mad at me for using it in the context they do, Mere possesion, may not be illegal but possesion of it in conjunction with a "cb radio station" at the premises maybe a different story.

> >> How do they "Catch You " using it?

They catch them by monitoring the field strength of the signal, lets say the FCC is investigating you for a complaint. You are on the air barefoot cussing, swearing, jamming etc etc the FCC decides to finally knock on your door. They ask to inspect your station You let them in a amplifier is laying on the floor not turned on, perhaps not even inline. The FCC will presume you have used the amp. But mere possesion like having one from dear old granpa when he was a Cber buried in the attic or garage probably is not illegal unless transmitting equipment is found to go along with it and there is evidence that a violation occured.

>> I'm not asking for any rule change. I've never had any problem with them.

You just don't follow them right?

This whole issue has been rehashed so many times it makes me sick, but for the recently anointed and the mentally challenged, here goes:
1. It is illegal to use any transceiver on the cb channels which is not certified for those frequencies.
2. It is illegal to modify any transceiver to operate beyond the specified channels or in excess of the 4/12 watt limits.
3. It is illegal to use any kind of amplification device which would have the effect of increasing the strength of the output signal.
4. It is not illegal to own an amplifier.
5. If, upon examination of the area near the transmitter, field strength readings indicate a signal in excess of the 4/12 watt limits, and upon examination of the station an amplifier is discovered, then it is logically presumed that the amplifier was used to increase the output power as indicated by the field strength meterings.

The Part 95 rules are written in very plain, down to earth, language, and it is inconceivable that anyone who has READ them would have any questions regarding the intent. What it really boils down to is one's respect for the intent and purpose of the law and respect for other operators.

Too high of a price for that radio to start with. With the poor paint on the receiver you are looking at even less. You're about $100 over what that radio will sell for in the condition shown in the eBay pics. $250 would be what you might expect for THAT radio in pristine condition.

Read Paragraph "D" very carefully why the need for the disclaimer of paragraph "D" saying if you hold a license in another radio service it is ok for you to have the amp in your possession ? since no one can use it on 11 meters what would be the other evidence against someone with a license?

Hello Jose:

No the 11 meter band was taken from the hams who really didn't want it as Richard has said. They really use 10 metres, and almost never 11 meters when it was a ham band. One good point one of the hams brought up that the antennas for the ham bands back then used mostly dipole antennas, made for like 80, 40, 20, & 10 meters, so the 11 meter band was not used due to most the antennas didn't work on 11 meters. Plus a lot of equipment didn't cover the 11 meter band.

Oh yes this has been talked about here some. But the guys here who try to disturb the news group, are not main line hams, and do not represent the other news groups. Going over there would just stir up more unneeded shit. I have had a few e-mails for some of the guys over at rec.radio.amateut.misc and they have their own nut cakes. Just go over there and read the mail!

NO the guys here on rec.radio.cb that are reciting rules, ect, don't not really care either way about legal or illegal CB use. Their purpose is to just stir up the ng, for entertainment purposes, and get some kicks for it all.

This can be seen from their twisting of the facts, not telling the hole story, and just plain lies. Not to mention their nut cake approach to things. Like calling names, sounding like a 6 year old child, ect.

They spout off about Illegal CB equipment, but at the same time try to sell illegal equipment on E-bay, the auction site. They will only complain about others illegal CB equipment, not their own.

This ng has seen em come and go, and there always probably will be a few goof balls out there as on all news groups, who want to stir things up.
Just get use to it.

Its like when your with a group of bitchen people, and none bitchen people say things to you from behind a tall wall.

See the way to make everyone (all the normal people here on the ng) look bad, is to out do them at their own game, come on out to a break, meet everyone, and cut everyones lips off with a better station. But as you can read between the lines that just isn't in them.

I proved no point for you, if a person is operating contrary to Fcc rules and the FCC inspects your home and finds your house full of amps they will presume you have used it, its very simple. trying to get around the law by saying oh they have to hear you using it I beg to differ. Thats like saying well if I speed down the road at 75 and no cops catch me I am not breaking any Laws. I would love to have you do work for me. I can see it now

Moped: Hey Jim, You gottsa pay that bill for the Chemicals I sprayed on your lawn the other day!

Jim: Oh yeah when was that Moped? I didnt see you do anything to my lawn.

Moped: Well Jim, just cause you didnt see me do it doesnt mean I did not do the work.

Jim: Well Moped according to your posts on rec.radio.cb you unless I catch you doing it I guess You didn't do anything.

Moped: Ah thats BS, Look I must have did it I have a full tank of friggin fertilizer.

Jim: But Moped a full tank doesnt mean nuthin, remember I have to see you do it, you can have all the fertilizer you want.

Hello Dave4eal: Take a look at e-bay ata:

http://listings.ebay.com/aw/listings/list/all/category1501/index.html

In the upper right hand of the page you can type in a custom "search" for the GE Base Radio. I have seen many parts radios advertised there.

Good luck.

I think it's wrong. I think about all of the other foreign nationals living here, who did it the legal way, which may have taken several years and thousands of dollars to make their dream of living here possible. To grant legal status to those who arrived here by floating to our shores on a raft, or wading across the Rio Grand is a slap in the face to those who worked hard to meet the legal requirements to come to this country to live.

This idea ranks right up there with our past US president Gerald Ford's idea to grant amnesty to all those Vietnam era draft evaders years ago. In one swift swipe of the pen he made the 50,000 plus who died there their deaths rendered meaningless.

Jay, If someone is selling an illegal item on ebay have it taken off, as far as doug's item If it is illegal have it taken off I don't think it is illegal myself.

Yes, the gang mentality again hanging in groups looking behind walls... Why not get your group of bitchen people and go to Wash Dc for the keydown then when its over go to the FCC Office and have them confront your bitchen group so you guys can beat them up for telling you your an illegal keyclown.. Yeah ok Jay.

What sort of freq do you want ?
How far out of band ?
Programming of this type of radio is done via a RIB (radio interface box) box and PC with software. The radio is only designed to work within the frequency range stated on the set.

A few thoughts below.
Twistedhed <twistedhed@webtv.net> wrote in message
news:9497-3B981539-26@storefull-127.iap.bryant.webtv.net... "First off, it's a welcome breath of fresh air to see someone so passionate about something they believe and still maintain dignity, integrity, and respect for themself and others. Some points I would like your input on, you will find below

long text snipped<<

"I don't tend to agree with that in it's entirety. I believe domestic money plays a much larger part than any concern over international harmony."

While domestic interests DO wave money at Congress and FCC, their efforts are mostly directed at the areas from 500+ MHZ. Their interests are in cell tech, microwave, and satellite comms. Nonetheless, we as a country have signed treaties that govern, especially, long-haul comms--those that can adversely affect all nations' use of the spectrum.
For example, the Amateur community is having to fight tooth and nail to ward off the industry
"sharks"
that seek to take a bit out of our "GHZ" allocations.

"You got that right. And from what looms on the horizon, it appears it is only going to worsen from the amateur's perspective."

"There is no industry clam-oring to take over 27 MHZ. But, again, comms on that band adversely affect other ITU signatories if used improperly.

"Ahhh, yes, in one manner I agree, but just what is "improper?" As you are aware, not all consider "illegal" and "improper" as interchangeable words meaning the same thing."

  give away the "real" agenda of many CB operators, especially those who operate in defiance of FCC regulations. That agenda is, if the truth is known, the abolishment of any and all regulations that "restrict" the operations of those who feel that the parameters granted to the CB service should be extended to no regulation at all. It is also a narrow view, that, when extensively examined, would actually hamper, not only the other users of radio,
but the same CBers who would want to be able to operate anyway, anyhow,

anywhere they want.

"I don't believe most cbers have an underlying secret agenda toward ANYTHING. For the most part, I feel cbers and hammies alike are an apathetic crowd when compared to any other collective organization of fans/hobbiests. Sure, winds of change may occur, but the cry has been wolf so long, no one pays it any mind."

I don't know how else to approach this, and it isn't to make anybody mad. The attitude of what we will call "militant" CBers, for lack of a better term, is best examined thru their actions. What they DO speaks more loudly than any words, spoken or non-spoken. Let's not rehash that pore old dead horse anymore. Suffice it to say that the law says one thing, the "militant CBer" defies
it. The law says another thing, the "militantCBer" ignores it. Another law is on the books restricting still another thing, the "militant CBer" thumbs his nose at that as well. You are, indeed, correct, that the regulations err on the side of caution. For example, that is one of the reasons one isn't supposed to operate on the frequencies "between" CB channels; it was to serve as a "guard" channel to minimize interference. Same in the so-called "freeband". Yes, some of them are "empty". These are guard channels as well.

"That is the best argument I have heard or read against freebanding to date.
Redundant -free."

Now, by operating outside the regulations, the "militant" CBer says he will do as he pleases, where he pleases, and how he pleases, and to
"I would agree with this statement as well, but I must first ascertain that I do not consider the majority of freebanders as militants. I believe MOST freebanders are polite and concerned with the integrity of their station (not rules) and have no desire to cause any intentional interference, harm, or malice."
Hell with the other users of the spectrum. Does this not say loudly that I am more important than anyone else? Does this not say that IF I am not free by law to do this that I will TAKE that spectrum for myself, because I think I should be allowed to do as I please, or turn up an amp to a gadzillion watts and jam every one else, or splatter--in or out of the 40 channels.

"This happens on the legal 40 daily, and I would also venture to say that most on the "in-betweens" have no desire to rule the roost. Most want contacts on SSB and no more. Most freebanders do not fit the oft repeated label and stereotypes of "cb militants" that is spread by negative propagandists."

There are legal and illegal CBers (legal and illegal hams, BTW), and could we not draw from this that there are folks who are willing to abide by the law---and maybe have a little appreciation of WHY those rules exist?

"You're doing a hell of a job defending those rules. Concise, direct, on topic, and approached in a logical manner. Great job, although some have already taken issue with your approach because your refusal to get dirty. Look at the reply one of the pound pups directed toward you."

<<snipped>>

to the chagrin of
certain hammies, even to the point where some of know that no amount of bitching about laws is going to make our identical radio setup you may have in your home bleed anymore on 11 meters than yours will on 10 with the same power.

That would go back to, for one thing, the power and radio type. The laws were set for 4 watts. This was agreed upon because, at the time of CB's in- ception, much negotiation had to be done to get a CB service approved. When a CBer has a 100 watt radio, then he can, of course, "git out" better. BUT then he can also be heard by Joe CBER out in Omaha who might NOT want to hear him because he is trying to talk to his wife on the way home from work. I hate to be sitting at a light and have my rear view mirror VIBRATING to some kid's BIG stereo amp going BOOM BOOM BOOM.

"Me, too. BUT, ya' know, certain big azzed (sic) dirty (but talkin') mobile amps cut that "Boom Boom" right out unless the driver is listening to a CD or tape...hehehe!"

CB could be, and often is a useful tool, but the big radios and big power amps ruin it for those who want it for a cheap way of keeping in touch. Even 4 watts "skips", but it isn't nearly as intrusive.

"I understand and acknowledge the point you are making. My point, however, was not about amps. Power levels notwithstanding, I stand by my statement that if one is running a ham transceiver correctly, the bleed or interference on 11 is no worse than what is found on 10. Going by what the lessers are attempting to propagandize here, the response is a knee jerk whine of "it's illegal", and they have no clue what they are even talking of when it comes to real world instances of serious interference problems."

ese new nocode techs don't give a damn about radio knowledge, they are just waiting for the code to be dropped altogether so they can go wherever they want with minimal effort. They want the same parameters that the "higher" hammies have but don't want to work for it or educate themselves to attain it. This attitude is detrimental to the hobby and is a hindrance to those working to better it. These are probably the same ones that come down to the cb channels and raise hell and start BS.

Of course I don't believe that, Jerry, (except for the part of negativity reflecting poorly on both services) but the illustration shows the pendulum can swing both ways."

I can agree with that.

"Most can. But did you see the way this post made those lessers so vocal over the weekend? I am continually amazed at the importance this small contingency of problematic nocodees place on my opinion, to the point of bribes, blackmail, harassment, forges, and now..heheh..telling the group that a "truce" will never occur as long as I continue to voice my opinions..ahhh, the power of the written word."

It is the (almost) same thing. It is more a reflection of a "gimme" society than just radio. We all seem to want everything with almost no effort. Those of us who got into Amateur prior to the 90s just looked at it and said, "(sigh), OK, this is what I have to do to earn the privilege", so we studied and fussed over the Code, went and took tests, failed, perhaps a few times, and went back/took it again until we passed. I took the Advanced test 3(?) times before I got it. That thing was HARD for me. I also do not believe in coming to 11 meters and hassling people. I USE 11 meters--a lot on the highway. I don't care for beeps, squeaks, and farts, or filthy language, so I just say what I want in plain language and hush. That's the military training in me! LOL!
I DO believe, however, that Amateur Radio offers so much more than 11 meters. It offers boo-koos of bands/freqs, a myriad of activities that can expand one's hobby into things ya never thought you'd be interested in! Heck,
I did the code just because I HAD to to even GET a license. Danged if I didn't get hooked on it--just bought me a new keyer at Shelby. I'd a-never thought!
Yes, ham radio has its share of geeks, freaks, and curmudgeons. So does CB. The CB curmudgeons are the "Channel Masters" who won't let you talk on "his" channel. It does go both ways. It's just that when I run to 'em on ham, I can just slide off to another freq or band--or go out to the shop and build an antenna or repair something. Best to ya, TW,
Jerry

"Understood completely. I don't go to hammie frequencies and hassle them, although I very easily could, and would probably get away with it until the cows came home. It could also be argued that justification is in the form of the identical self rationalization and mindsets displayed by our tiny contingency of disturbed and self loathing followers we appear to have garnered, but that would lower us to levels I have no desire in exploring, let alone interest. There are more important things in life. Great post Jerry. Informative, and as I said, the channel guard argument goes way further than the anything our acolytes who continue to amuse us by believing they are anonymous have ever said, under any name. As the song goes, "We go 'round in circles... "

Haaaaaarrrrassssssss, LMAO, I'm harassing you?
Oh that's rich.....

Har-rass : 1 set a dog on, to trouble, worry, or torment, as with cares, debts, repeated questions, etc. 2 to trouble with repeated raids or attacks, etc.

Have I set any dogs on you? If there are people dogging you, you have brought that on upon yourself.

Trouble? What have I troubled you with? e-mail?
no, that's out your to chicken to post your real address.

Worry? You, yourself said you don't worry about me (snicker)

Torment? Oh, I'm tormenting you..... HHHaaaaaaaa!

Cares? I certainly must not care about you that much,
10 minutes a day, whew that's a lot of care.

Debt? I'm not in debt, are you?

Repeated questions? Well if that's harassment, then I guess
I can say you have been harassing me a lot more.
Proof? why? where? who? how? when? why? oh, I already did that one.

Repeated raids and attacks? Again refer to above paragraph.

Just to enlighten your degenerating brain: this is a public forum, and as such I can respond to and what I feel like.
You, I, anyone that wants can responds to a post, can, it is not a private matter, otherwise you would do it through you AOL e-mail account, then it would be private.

I beginning to believe you are the only one, as you so proudly stated above,

"Every post I make you reply to me when you are not included in the thread."

Hi Sly,
You do know that what you are wanting is illegal, right?
Now don't get me wrong, I think your going to have a great sounding setup, but I do want our legal aids here to understand that you are, over 18, of sound mind and body, and hold no ill will towards them. On another note, you do realize that you might have to change your charging system to accommodate that setup too.

Good luck and good hunting,

The only real difference IMHO is that the power supply on the older one are much better.

I have a one 16Vlt Variable Alt already installed in my mini van with a plan for two. (Good Point though) So now back to the MODS on the ST 29 are they the same? I can do the 29 LTD but never tried the ST. I hold no Ill will to anyone I just want more Juice. and it would not be the first time the FCC bothered me. I plan to use the m400 as a DRIVER TOO.....HAHAHA

Nicely said, Jay. The 11 meter band, 26.96-27.23 was assigned to the Amateur Service after the Atlantic City treaty meeting in 1947 cut down the 20 meter band as a Region 2 (the Americas) allocation, not a treaty band. As Europe did not make a similar assignment, the lack of European DX did not help the popularity of 11 either. At the same meeting the present 15 meter band 21.0-21.45 was assigned but was not cleared of Marine users until about 1953. When it became available, no one really cared about 11 meters. As you note, 10 meters has a lot of room to swing a cat and did even in the Ancient Modulation days and a phone band starting at 28.5.

Get your General and try 12 meters. For a 60 kHz phone band, that has been a hell of a lot of fun.

Oh boy, you are a real piece of work,
Again, Prozac is now only twenty eight years old, in other posts you have claimed to be a ham operator for over twenty three years. That would mean that you got your ticket when you were five years old? So unless you were lying (like always) on those posts claiming to be a ham, you are not credible (I like it when I can use your own words against you) when making posts on either threats, fact or fiction or fantasy in your case.
Now please respond away, I won't be back till the morning, have family coming over for football games and BBQ.

Your the piece of work snapperhead If I use the name Prozac, then I am prozac no one has a copyright on the name Prozac, you are trying to say I am not Prozac. I am as much Prozac as you are Landshark. It is a made up name a fictisous name used on a Cb radio and or Compueter.Btw If you are talking about the person who used to use the nick Prozac he is only 21 so your spreading more mis information again. Look up the posts I know you look up all mine everyday You will see what age he claimed to be. Since he just graduated high school. Go smoke some sauseges before the game.

Straight from my ISP page, would you like to read yours?

HUmmmm, lets see, I have saved virtually ever post you have made concerning me. I think I can convince them that you have been attacking, accusing, harassing me, if what you are saying is true, but not.

I have never sent you harassing e-mail, or for that fact anyone else. I'm

What up Jay! Kinda missed you down there. All went well and everyone had a great time. The barbeque CC and the rest of the STAR CH. 20 crew put out was awesome and tasted great. Met some old aquaintances from previous breaks and just happened to bump into "Ghettoway Driver". His suburban was tight. But with all of the CBers who were there, only a hand full keyed. And here is the results (except for AC Sky)...

2 pill- Showdown (Killing Fields CA.)

4 pill- Showdown

8 pill- Private Eyes (High Desert CA.)

16 pill- Trouble (Killing Fields CA.)

24 pill- Mike Tyyson (On the Bridge CA.)

32 pill- Trouble

AC Sky- ???

Man too bad you had other business to take care off. Get some beer together and I'll stop buy the station to show you the Video. And make sure Dinah's there, 4-10??? Take care Jay...

Hello Dick: Thanks a million.

I wasn't old enough during those times, but heard a lot about it, as I got older.

I have sold a few antennas cut for 12 meters, wondering what all the activity was on 12 meters? Most of the guys are in Wi, Oh, Ill, Penn, or Mi, and eastern New York. Must be a lot activity there on 12, maybe a club or something? I have monitored 12 and haven't heard much from that area.

Speaking of antennas, I have sold a few 6 meter versions, about half scale of the 12 meter antennas. Now I am working to convert a 11 meter 5 element to a 6 meter 7 element beam, (the cheap aluminum design of the CB antenna will get stronger with the 6 meter lengths) and will put my ground plane antenna on top of the beam to have both vertical and horizontal antennas. Haven't heard anything on the TVI front, so far so good.

Yes I'll half to get the general class lic, all right.

Why Cardiff? I am in the Yorkshire area - central England.
It is a matter of how you are brought up, not the area. Also respect for those who may be offended by certain words.

My English dictionary says that the word is "not acceptable in polite use".

One would have to assume that it would be better if they didn't have the fear of the law catching up with them.
But this was not about removing a law, but toughening one up. Is this not something that you would want?

But the law does NOT say that they cannot sell their home built amp to a non-licenced CBer.
And the law does not require the Amateur to build the equipment to the same technical standard as a production amp.

How is asking you a question "trying to bamboozle" you. If you find simple questions are too "bamboozling" for you, that is not my fault.

Your "AKC FAQ" mentions "like for like", but I ask serious questions and what do I get?
You twist my words.
You accuse me of breaking laws, without any proof.
Any interest in your views is met with hostility.
Respect is met with attempts to discredit, and belittle the person.

This is simply terrorism. And you have the "bottle" to accuse others of exactly this!!

You are still trying to avoid giving straight answers to straight questions, you still snip the parts you cannot answer, or are too scared to. But now you snip more than you reply to.

I did NOT ask for another copy of a standard "AKC FAQ" posted some time back. I asked for YOUR opinions, but you seem to hide behind this idea that there is an "AKC" group, and that you are just their puppet.
I notice that the "anti-keyclown members" posted using three accounts - the same three accounts that you post from. This suggests to me that the whole "group" was one person - YOU.

Aw hell, why am I even trying to have a serious debate with someone who believes that he is several different people, who each do what they can to save the world from the potentially lethal force of the "Keyclowns".

In the UK, cable is not yet available in all areas. I cannot get any cable services yet, and there is no definite date planned for it.
But I believe that EMC problems here were reduced when they removed the antenna height rule. It was never a good idea to encourage CBers to use antennas that close to the ground.

Hi Train.

Not quite, we were limited to 1.5 Metres length, base loaded antennas. But this was changed some years back.
We are now allowed 5/8 wave vertical or 1/2 wave dipole antennas. Maximum element width is 55mm.

CB BAND (11 Meters)-

Pro's

1) A great place to use your classic AM boatanchor when you get sick of hearing about N3RD's new audio processor.

2) Never have to worry about those negative peaks when running class C

3) Isn't funny how you never hear ANY swearing on 27.025 channel 6....just listen.

4) "Keydown clowns" cook the best foods!!!

5) Replace "Hi bob this is P3NIS in the group...handle is Richard" with "How about that duckplucker in the sandpile."

6) 24/7 connections to Cali via backscatter.

7) Showing off your mobiles to hams! "Holly sh*t..."

Con's

1) Listening to same fat boring loser...only fatter and poorer.

2) "I'm getting 600 watts from my palomar"

3) Limited to 200 amp service at your house!

4) That dam pile of burnt antenna's that keeps growing.

5) Really getting 10k from a pair of 3-500z's....and having to prove it..again..again....

6) Bank accounts seem to get smaller after every keydown.

7) Crusty old hams.

Just wondering:

How many CBers from outside the USA are confused, offended, or feel terribly insulted when they see FCC rules or iother USA-specific topic posted or referred to in the course of a discussion?

So far we have one from the UK (Brainbuster) who is upset by mention of USA-specific topics (FCC rules) in the NG. Anyone else?

-Aaron-

(PS: I like Gary Danahers recap so much I'm going to repost it here. For those too dumb to figure it out, what he is referring to are FCC rules and the FCC is a USA institution, therefore it only applies to you if you are in the USA. However, I know of no country on earth where use of CB amplifiers is permitted)

--

1. It is illegal to use any transceiver on the cb channels which is not certified for those frequencies.
2. It is illegal to modify any transceiver to operate beyond the specified channels or in excess of the 4/12 watt limits.
3. It is illegal to use any kind of amplification device which would have the effect of increasing the strength of the output signal.
4. It is not illegal to own an amplifier.
5. If, upon examination of the area near the transmitter, field strength readings indicate a signal in excess of the 4/12 watt limits, and upon examination of the station an amplifier is discovered, then it is logically presumed that the amplifier was used to increase the output power as indicated by the field strength meterings.

The Part 95 rules are written in very plain, down to earth, language, and it is inconceivable that anyone who has READ them would have any questions regarding the intent. What it really boils down to is one's respect for the intent and purpose of the law and respect for other operators.

Artificial Aaron, not to be confused with Artificial Rhonda, more likely than not plagiarized from somewhere: I find it odd that most all keyclowns think FCC rules should be changed or eliminated. I mean, they don't obey the laws anyway. So why do they cry about it so much?

"They don't. You do."

Not all amateurs build. And the ones who build tend to build only for themselves.

"There ya' go, tryin' ta' speak for the masses. I was in the Ozarks a few years ago camping and they taught me a lil' catch phrase when in doubt..."Show me."

The responsibility for building and operating 'clean' equipment rests with the individual licensee.

"Your personal feelings and anger negate your comprehension of what the law actually constitutes."

The majority

"Show me."

do not obey the law out of fear of the FCC. They obey the law because it is the right thing to do.

This morning, South and Central America and the Azores came thru in a brief listen on 12. I think you might like 15 and the WARC bands (silly considering the WARC in question was 25 years ago) for no better reason than you are spared the organ recitals common on 75 and 20. These bands have a much better class of derelicts.

To pick the fly specs out of the pepper, not all Amateurs are allowed full power on ten meters.
Our licensing structure is a bit screwed up after the 5wpm change; there are three written elements and one code test. The first written element, no code, gets all above 50 MHz. Add the code test and you get phone in 28.3-28.5 but only at 200 watts output. You also get four segments to practice code which is kind of silly given you have to pass the code test to get them.
So a Technician plus code presumably will not help you when the Commission comes knocking.

The second written (plus the Morse) gets the General which gives most privileges and 1500 watt PEP output with presumably the right to build an amp, one per year of a given design. Amp manufacturers will also sell you the fix kit to get it on 10 and 12 meters. As power is essentially useless on these bands, most do not bother.

The third written gets you four 25kHz segments at the bottom of four bands and the lower half of the phone bands in the same four (80, 40, 20, and 15). You should be aware that the US 40 meter band runs to 7.3 and the 80 meter band to 4.0 and that we restrict the phone bands to less than the IARU standard to give the world a place to hide from us. The lower parts are in an area normally used only for Morse which made some sense in the 20 wpm days (yes, we had to do a speed illegal in Britain) but is monumentally stupid today.

The rules exist and they are followed but in general no one runs much beyond the 100-200 watts that come out of most standard ham rigs today. It is more of an academic exercise.

If you go to http://www.batlabs.com/gp300.html, you will find the following info and more. It's a great site for Motorola info.

Out of Band Information

To program frequencies outside of the rated bandsplit in the GP300/P110/GP350 is very simple, follow the listed steps:

Hold the shift key down while entering the frequency you want
You must release the shift key when you enter the decimal point
You must fill the entire field-use zeros(while holding down shift)
When you are done hit enter like normal and the frequency you entered will appear in regular decimal like any other frequency.

There is some really bitchen posters.

I think I am gonna have a poster made up of my old General Radiotelephone, Super MC11A, and Maverick 250 Linear Amplifier, with the Moonraker 4 element beam antenna in the background as seen thru the window.

Oh yeah!

Lights up the idea of having a CB Big Radio and Linear Amplifier Calendar. Yeah we'll throw some antennas in there also!

I would strongly advise finding a good source for EL 509 and 519 tubes. When you see what it is going to cost you when you drive this beast beyond about 150 watts on Antique Modulation you may well rethink the purchase. This may well be a fairly clean amp as they go but as with any broadbanded tube amp, you are well advised to run it with a good lo-pass filter in the output.

As you get the schematic and parts list, in European nomenclature, it should not take much to figure out how to mod it.

You might want to find out exactly where it was built. For $170 it may well have been Outer Mongolia.

Hi Mike, unfortunately the batlabs site does not work any more, and the "out of band" procedure is diffrent between a 5-tone and a standard gp300, the shift key trick does not work on a 5-tone, it is a completely diffrent software, thanks anyway Ian

Serious debate? Bollocks! I don't see any honorable intentions on your part, Buster. Just a lot of challenges, chest-thumping and bragging about how you can buy a CB amp in the UK. You'll continue to beat your drum about how Voobner won't answer your question for a bit and then you'll quietly fade into the sunset....

It seems this little item is cause for a keyclown celebration. Well go ahead guys, celebrate. I can see that RF amplifiers have a very powerful attraction for keyclowns. You want to talk about them, kiss pictures of them, and just have them around to drool over and dream about. It really is too bad they are illegal to actually USE though.

I have a wilson 1000 magnet mount antenna, which i was trading between cars. Recently I got a '92 f-150 and Im going to put the radio in that. The problem is I hate having to pull off the antenna and put it inside every time i leave it so it doesnt get stolen.
Im going to put the antenna on the bed rail corner right behind the cab, and I want to know if there is a way to take it apart and make some kind of plate i could bolt to the bed rail(I can weld/bend/fab up whatever) insted of using the magnet part.
Thanks alot.

Well the antenna unscrews fairly fast too. How about smack in the middle of the roof. Really hard to get to with the doors shut. Putting it on the bed isn't all that great because you will be putting most of your RF in the cab of the truck instead of into the air. Get it over with and drill the little hole and put in the mount. If you decide to sell the truck, you can pull the hardware back out and plug it with products that are available on the market for that. The cops use plugs on the cars they sell at auctions up here. They are hardly noticeable. You will be much happier with this setup and the rear slider wont have to be open for the coax to come in. :)

: Wonder why the problem only appears on some newsreaders, and some messages?

It depends on how the terminal and software are configured. If the software does not know what the value means, then it prints the hex representation instead (or sometimes the octal value). This often occurs when the poster is using a "foreign" keyboard - where some characters contain one of several circumflexes.

An example is the tilde over some n's in spanish, to indicate the n(y) sound - such as "senor" (tilde missing).

I don't mind any topic discussed on this NG, just stop quoting FCC rules, if you don't have anything original or helpful to contribute then I don't see the point of you posting.

I'm sure 95% of American freebanders reading this group are well aware of the FCC rule, you quoting them 'ad nauseam' isn't going to make the slightest bit of difference to them.

Wrong. Read the rules, rather than going on what others (including me) have told you. You will find that simple possession of an amp is not illegal, nor is it evidence (by itself) of illegal use.

: Again, the FCC has busted people for this. Why are you misleading them?
: No License = Illegal Possession. If the FCC makes a knock-knock and they find
: an amp on-premises, you had either better have a license or good legal
: representation.

The FCC needs evidence that you are using illegal equipment, before they can assume that any amp you have is being used illegally. Monitoring your transmissions and measuring an illegal field strength level would be such evidence. Then, it does not matter whether they find an amp or not, you are still busted. The only difference is that they would not be able to confiscate the amp.

The FCC can perform a "knock-knock" at any time. But if they have no evidence that I have been operating illegally, then I could have a dozen amps on my shelf, and there is nothing that they could do about it.

Read the FCC regulations, rather than believing what you read here.

You will note that, for CB operation, two things must occur before the FCC will presume you have used an amplifier illegally.

1) they monitor excessive power output from your location
AND
2) they find an amp at your location.

This is paraphrased from the regulations themselves. They are very clear and easy to understand on this point. I don't know why so many people keep on insisting that possession of an amp itself is illegal. There is nothing in the rules that makes such a statement.

Gadzooks... I see Voobner is still blowig hot air... Last time I was in here he was at it for quite some time... I think this debate with him goes back about a year. Definitely last October at least.

So, rather than me dig up old articles long since expired, let me sum up this guy in a couple of paragraphs.

He's a lonely pinko commie who wants everyones life micro-managed by the government, except for his own. He regards all "Amateur Gear" as "contraband" since it's not "type accepted" equipment. He has a burning desire to belong to some group (ANY GROUP) to the point that he actually started calling himself an "organization" about 6 - 8 months back. He's completely delusional, and has inferred in the past that he has been chartered by god himself to rid the 11 meter band of illegal activity. He thinks it's entirely ok to falsely accuse people in this group of illegal operation. When he's cornered in a debate, he often will resort to personally insulting the person that cornered him, or falsely accusing the aggressor of illegal operation in a feeble attempt to change the subject.

He's your typical liberal democrat who "feels" more than "thinks".

Thought I'd give ya all the rundown on Voobners personality profile. Take right hand, extend index finger and thumb so they make a reverse "L" shape. Apply back of hand to forehead with index finger pointing upwards. Turn and face voobner. That's him in a "nutshell"... -- pardon the pun.

I don't think anyone is "insisting" that mere posession of such amps are illegal. During discussion the term "illegal amp" gets used a lot, but anyone who doesn't understand that it means an amp being used on CB is dense or just trying to evade the point with technicalities.
The keyclowns want people to believe the amps being sold, traded, modded, discussed, promoted, and worshipped on this NG are not being used on 27 mHz. What a joke.

Hi all... Long time no post, but we just noticed that the old site that contained these files for download was taken down because someone bought webjump.com

We apologize that it took us this long to notice, but that is the old site, so.....

In any case, here's the new site for the manuals. You'll notice the manuals listed towards the bottom of the page.

http://hr2510.homeip.net:2510/search.html?fullpage=1&productid=HR2510&selectmain=Uniden%20Radios&selectsub=Amateur%20Radios

For those of you who already have the Chipswitch manual provided by Chipswitch, you may be interested in downloading the PDF version and printing it out. I took the time to do some formatting, spell checking, and make the charts a lot easier to understand. It also has a clickable index.

The HR2510 manual is laid out such that if you print it out, and then fold it in half it very much resembles the original document. Instructions for printing it are included in the PDF manual itself. Don't bother looking for the tri-fold schematic in the PDF version though. If there is enough demand perhaps I'll try to scan it on on something a bit better than my 600dpi flatbed and convert it to lineart. But it would still be supplied as a separate PDF since very few people have paper for their printer large (long) enough to print it out.

Catch ya all l8r.

Apparently both Dick and I 'disapprove' of CB amps. Dick's approach is to critique the engineering of the amp and deride the AM mode as "ancient mary", hoping to shame the user into feeling technically inferior. My approach is simply to put the cards on the table and say that using a CB amp is illegal and wrecks the band for your fellow CBers.

Check out Rule #11.

Federal Communications Commission (FCC)

Part 95 - Subpart D - Rules for CB Service Citizens Band (CB) Radio Service

General Provisions-

[RULE 1] Description
[RULE 2] Usage of Rules
[RULE 3] Who is Eligible [RULE 4] Licenses
[RULE 5] Areas Of Legal Operation
[RULE 6] Special Restrictions
[RULE 7] Operating Channels/Frequencies [RULE 8] Antenna Height
[RULE 9] Equipment
[RULE 10] Power Output
[RULE 11] Linear Amplifiers
[RULE 12] Permitted Communication [RULE 13] Illegal Communication [RULE 14] Paying for Actual Use [RULE 15] Who Is Held Accountable [RULE 16] Time Limit of Transmissions [RULE 17] Identification Methods
[RULE 18] Emergency Usage and Assisting Travelers [RULE 19] Remote Control Operations
[RULE 20] Telephone Patches and Telephony with CB [RULE 21] Penalties [RULE 22] Correspondence from FCC
[RULE 23] Notice of Interference
[RULE 24] Service to Transmitters and Antennas
[RULE 25] Modifications to Transmitters
[RULE 26] FCC Inspections

[RULE 27] Keeping Station Records
[RULE 28] Contacting the FCC

RULE 1 - Descriptions The Citizens Band Radio Service (CB) is a private, two-way, short-distance voice communications service for personal or business activities. The CB Radio Service may also be used for voice paging.
RULE 2 - Usage of Rules You must comply with these rules when you operate a station in the CB Service from:
{1} Within or over the territorial limits of places where radio services are regulated by the FCC.
{2} Aboard any vessel or aircraft registered in the United States or
{3} Aboard any unregistered vessel or aircraft owned or operated by a United States citizen or company.
Your CB must comply with Part 95/Subpart E [Technical Rules].
Where the rules use the word "you", "you" means a person operating a CB station. Where the rules use the word "person" the rules are concerned with an individual, a corporation, a partnership, an association, a joint stock company, a trust, a state, territorial or local government unit, or other legal entity. Where the rules use the term "CB station", that means a radio station transmitting in the CB Radio Service.
RULE 3 - Eligibility To Use CB You are authorized to operate a CB station unless:
{A} You are a foreign government, a representative of a foreign government, or a federal government agency.
or
{B} The FCC has issued a cease and desist order to you, and the order is still in effect.
RULE 4 - Licenses You do not need an individual license to operate a CB station. You are authorized by this rule to operate your CB station in accordance with the rules stated in this Subpart. (*also read Rule 17)
RULE 5 - Areas of Legal Operation You are authorized to operate your CB station from:
{A} Within or over any area of the world where radio services are regulated by the FCC. Those areas are:
[1] The 50 United States
[2] The District Of Columbia
[3] Commonwealth of Puerto Rico
[4] Navassa Island
[5] United States Virgin Islands, it's 50 islets and cays
[6] American Samoa
[7] Baker Island
[8] Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands
[9] Guam Island
[10] Howland Island
[11] Jarvis Islan
[12] Johnston Island
[13] Kingman Reef

[14] Midway Island
[15] Palmyra Island, and it's 50+ islets
[16] Wake Island
{B} Any area of the world, except, within the territorial limits of areas where radio services are regulated by -
[1] An agency of the United States other than the FCC, you are subject to it's rules.
[2] Any foreign government, you are subject to it's rules.
{C} An aircraft or ship, with the permission of the captain, within or over any area of the world where radio services are regulated by the FCC or upon or over international waters. You must operate your CB station according to any applicable treaty to which the United States is a party.
RULE 6 - Special Restrictions
{A} If your CB station is located on premises controlled by the Department of Defense you may be required to comply with additional regulations imposed by the commanding officer of the installation.
{B} If your CB station will be constructed on land of environmental or historical importance (such as a location significant in American history, architecture or culture), you may be required to provide information to comply with Part 1.1305 through 1.1319 of the FCC Rules.
RULE 7 - Operating Channels/Frequencies Your CB station may transmit only on the following channels / frequencies:

Channel	Frequency	Channel	Frequency
1	26.965	21	27.215
2	26.975	22	27.225
3	26.985	23	27.255
4	27.005	24	27.235
5	27.015	25	27.245
6	27.025	26	27.265
7	27.035	27	27.275
8	27.055	28	27.285
9*	27.065	29	27.295
10	27.075	30	27.305
11	27.085	31	27.315
12	27.105	32	27.325
13	27.115	33	27.335
14	27.125	34	27.345
15	27.135	35	27.355
16	27.155	36	27.365
17	27.165	37	27.375
18	27.175	38	27.385
19	27.185	39	27.395
20	27.205	40	27.405

{B} * Channel 9 may be used ONLY for emergency communications OR for traveler assistance.
{C} You must, at all times and on ALL channels, give priority to emergency communication messages concerning the immediate safety of life or the immediate protection of property.

{D} You may use ANY channel for emergency communications or for traveler assistance.
{E} You must share each channel with other users.
{F} The FCC will not assign any channel for the private or exclusive use of any particular CB station or group of stations.
{G} The FCC will not assign any channel for the private or exclusive use of CB stations transmitting single sideband or AM.
RULE 8 - Antenna Height
{A} "Antenna" means the radiating system (for transmitting, receiving or both) and the structure holding it up (tower, pole or mast). It also means everything else attached to the radiating system and the structure.
{B} If your antenna is mounted on a hand-held portable unit, none of the following limitations apply;
{C} If your antenna is installed at a fixed location (whether receiving, transmitting or both) it must comply with EITHER one of the following:
[1] The highest point must not be more than 20 feet (6.10 meters) higher than the highest point of the building or tree on which it is mounted;
or
[2] The highest point must not be more than 60 feet (18.3 meters) above the ground.
{D} If your CB station is located near an airport, and if your antenna structure is more than 20 feet (6.10 meters) high, you may have to obey additional restrictions. The highest point of your antenna must not exceed 39.37 inches (1 meter) above the airport elevation for every 109.36 yards (100 meters, 1 hectometer) of distance from the nearest point of the nearest airport runway. Differences in ground elevation between your antenna and the airport runway may complicate this formula. If your CB station is near an airport, you may contact the nearest FCC field office for a worksheet to help you figure the maximum allowable height for your antenna.
WARNING: Installation and removal of CB station antennas near powerlines is dangerous. For your safety follow the installation directions included with your antenna.
RULE 9 - Equipment
{A} You must use an FCC type accepted CB transmitter at your CB station. You can identify an FCC type accepted transmitter by the 'type acceptance'label placed on it by the manufacturer. You may examine a list of type-accepted equipment at any FCC Field Office or at FCC Headquarters. Use of a transmitter which is not FCC type-accepted voids your authority to operate the station.
{B} You must not make, or have made, any internal modifications to a type-accepted CB transmitter. (*read Rule 25) Any internal modification to a type-accepted CB transmitter cancels the type-acceptance, and use of such a transmitter voids your authority to operate the station.
RULE 10 - Power Output

{A} Your CB station transmitter power output must not exceed the following values under any conditions:
AM [Amplitude Modulation] - 4 watts carrier power [CP]
SSB [Single Side-Band] - 12 watts peak envelope power [PEP]
{B} If you need more information about the power rule, see Part 95/ Subpart E.
{C} Use of a transmitter which has carrier [CP] or peak envelope power [PEP]in excess of that authorized voids your authority to operate the station.
RULE 11 - Linear Amplifiers
{A} You may not attach the following items (power amplifiers) to your type-accepted CB transmitter in any way:
[1] External radio frequency [RF] power amplifiers, also called linear amplifiers, or linears;
or
[2] Any other devices which, when used with a radio transmitter as a signal source, are capable of amplifying the signal.
{B} There are no exceptions to this rule and use of a power amplifier voids your authority to operate the station.
{C} The FCC will presume you have used a linear or other external [RF] power amplifier if-
[1] It is in your possession or on your premises; and
[2] There is OTHER EVIDENCE that you have operated your CB station with more power than allowed by CB Rule 10.
{D} Paragraph C above in this section does not apply if you hold a license in another radio service (HAM, etc.) which allows you to operate an external RF power amplifier.
RULE 12 - Permitted Communications {A} You may use your CB station to transmit two-way plain language communications. Two-way plain language communications are communications without codes or coded messages. Operating signals such as "ten codes" (10-4, etc.) are not considered codes or coded messages. You may transmit two-way plain language communications only to other CB stations, to units of your own CB station, or to authorized government stations on CB frequencies about-
[1] Your personal or business activities, or those of members of your immediate family living in your household;
[2] Emergencies;
[3] Traveler assistance;
[4] Civil Defense activities in connection with official tests or drills conducted by, or actual emergencies announced by, the Civil Defense Agency with authority over the area in which your station is located.
{B} You may use your CB station to transmit a TONE SIGNAL only when the signal is used to make contact, or to continue communications (Examples: tone operated squelch, selective calling circuits). If the signal is an audible tone, it must last no longer than 15 seconds at one time. If the signal is a subaudible tone, it may be transmitted continuously only as long as you are talking.
{C} You may use your CB station to transmit one-way communications (messages not intended for two or more CB stations) only for emergency communications, traveler assistance, brief tests (radio checks) or voice paging.

RULE 13 - Illegal Communications {A} You must NOT use a CB station-
[1] in connection with activity which is against federal, state or local law;
[2] to transmit obscene, indecent or profane words, language or meaning;
[3] to interfere intentionally with the communications of another CB station;
[4] to transmit one-way communications, EXCEPT for emergency communications, traveler assistance, brief tests (radio checks) or voice paging;
[5] to advertise or solicit the sale of any goods or services;
[6] to transmit music, whistling, sound effects or any material to amuse or entertain;
[7] to transmit any sound effect solely to attract attention;
[8] to transmit the word "MAYDAY" or use any other international distress signal, EXCEPT when your station is located in a ship, aircraft or other vehicle which is threatened with GRAVE AND IMMINENT danger and you are requesting IMMEDIATE assistance.
[9] to communicate with, or ATTEMPT to communicate with, any CB station more than 155.3 miles (250 kilometers) away;
[10] to advertise a political candidate or political campaign (You may use your CB radio for the business or organizational aspects of a campaign, if you follow all other applicable rules);
[11] to communicate with stations in other countries, except stations in Canada (on General Radio Service).
[12] to transmit a false or deceptive communication.
{B} You must not use a CB station to transmit communications intended for live or delayed rebroadcast on radio or television. You may use your CB station to gather news items or to prepare programs.
RULE 14 - Paying for Actual Use {A} You may not accept direct or indirect payment for transmitting with a CB station.
{B} You may use a CB station to help you provide a service, and be paid for that service, as long as you are paid only for the service and not for the actual use of the CB station.
RULE 15 - Who Is Held Accountable You are responsible for all communications which are made BY YOU from a CB station.
RULE 16 - Time Limit of Transmissions {A} You must limit your CB communications to the minimum practical time.
{B} If you are communicating with another CB station or stations, you, and the stations communicating with you, must limit each of your conversations to no more than five (5) continuous minutes.
{C} At the end of your conversation, you, and the stations communicating with you, must not transmit again for at least one minute.
RULE 17 - Identification Methods {A} You need NOT identify your CB communications...
{B} You are ENCOURAGED to identify your CB communications by any of the following means:

[1] Previously assigned FCC CB call sign
[2] K prefix followed by operators initials and residence zip code
[3] Your name;
or
[4] Description of your organization including name and any applicable operator unit number
{C} You are encouraged to use a "handle" (nickname) ONLY IN CONJUNCTION WITH the methods of identification listed above in paragraph B of this section.
RULE 18 - Emergency Usage and Assisting Travelers {A} You must at all times and on all channels, give priority to emergency communications.
{B} When you are directly participating in emergency communications, you do not have to comply with Rule 16 about length of transmissions. You must obey all other rules.
{C} You may use your CB station for communications necessary to assist a traveler to REACH A DESTINATION or to RECEIVE NECESSARY SERVICES. When you are using your CB station to assist a traveler, you do not have to obey Rule 16 about the length of transmissions. You must obey all other rules.
RULE 19 - Remote Control Operations {A} You MAY NOT operate a CB station transmitter by RADIO remote control.
{B} You MAY operate a CB transmitter by WIRELINE remote control IF you obtain specific approval in writing from the FCC. To obtain FCC approval you must show why you need to operate your station by wireline remote control. Send your request and justification to: FCC, Gettysburg, PA 17325.
If you receive FCC approval, you must keep the approval as part of your station records (read Rule 27 on station records).
RULE 20 - Telephone Patches and Telephony with CB {A} You MAY connect your CB station transmitter to a telephone if you comply with ALL of the following:
[1] You or someone else must be present at your CB station and MUST-
(i) manually make the connection (the connection cannot be made by remote control);
(ii) supervise the operation of the transmitter during the connection;
(iii) listen to each communication during the connection; and
(iv) stop all communications if there are operations in violation of these rules.
[2] Each communication during the telephone connection must comply with all of these rules.
[3] You must obey any restriction that the telephone company places on the connection of a CB transmitter to a telephone.
{B} The CB transmitter you connect to a telephone must not be shared with any other CB station.
{C} If you connect your CB transmitter to a telephone, you must use a phone patch device which has been registered with the FCC.
RULE 21 - Penalties may not be current penalty information. {A} If the FCC finds that you have WILLFULLY or REPEATEDLY violated the Communications Act or FCC Rules, you may have to pay as much as $2,000 for each violation, up to a total of $5,000.

{B} If the FCC finds that you have violated any section of the Communications Act or FCC Rules, you may be ordered to stop whatever action caused the violation.
{C} If a federal court finds that you have WILLFULLY and KNOWINGLY violated any FCC Rule, you may be fined up to $500 for each day you committed the violation.
{D} If a federal court finds that you have WILLFULLY and KNOWINGLY violated any provision of the Communications Act, you may be fined up to $10,000 or may be imprisoned for one year, or both.
RULE 22 - Correspondence from FCC {A} If it appears to the FCC that you have violated the Communications Act or these rules, the FCC may send you a discrepancy notice.
{B} Within the time period stated in the notice, you must answer with:
[1] A complete written statement about the apparent discrepancy;
[2] A complete written statement about any action you have taken to correct the apparent violation and to prevent it from happening again; and
[3] The name of the person operating at the time of the apparent violation.
{C} If the FCC sends you a letter asking you questions about your CB radio station or its operation, you must answer each of the questions with a complete written statement within the time period stated in the letter.
{D} You must not shorten your answer by references to other communications or notices.
{E} You must send your answer to the FCC office which sent you the notice.
{F} You must keep a copy of your answer in your station records.
RULE 23 - Notice of Interference {A} If the FCC tells you that your CB station is causing interference due to technical reasons, you must follow all instructions in the official FCC notice (This notice may require you to have technical adjustments made to your equipment).
{B} You must comply with any restricted hours of CB station operation which may be included in the official notice.

RULE 24 - Service to Transmitters and Antennas {A} You may adjust an antenna to your CB transmitter and you may make radio checks (One-way transmissions for a short time in order to test the transmitter).
{B} Each internal repair and each internal adjustment to your FCC type-accepted CB transmitter must be made BY or under the DIRECT SUPERVISION of a person licensed by the FCC as a GENERAL RADIOTELEPHONE OPERATOR.
{C} Except as provided in paragraph D below in this section, each internal repair and each internal adjustment of a CB transmitter in which signals are transmitted must be made using a NON-RADIATING antenna (Dummy Load).
{D} Brief test signals (signals not longer than one minute during any five minute period) using a radiating antenna may be transmitted in order to:
[1] adjust an antenna to a transmitter;

[2] detect or measure radiation of energy other than the intended signal;
or
[3] tune a receiver to your CB transmitter.
RULE 25 - Modifications to Transmitters {A} You must not make or have any one else make any internal modification to your CB transmitter.
{B} Internal modification does NOT include:
[1] Repair, or servicing of a CB station transmitter; or
[2] Changing plug-in modules which were type-accepted as part of your CB transmitter
{C} You must not operate a CB transmitter which has been modified by anyone in any way, including modification to operate on unauthorized frequencies or with illegal power.
RULE 26 - FCC Inspections {A} If an authorized FCC representative requests to inspect your CB station, you must make your CB station and records available for inspection.
{B} A CB station includes all of the radio equipment you use.
RULE 27 - Keeping Station Records Your station records include the following documents, as applicable: [1] A copy of each response to an FCC violation notice or an FCC letter.
[2] Each written permission received from the FCC.
RULE 28 - Contacting the FCC {A} Write to your nearest FCC Field Office to: [1] Report an interference complaint; or [2] want to know if the FCC has type-accepted a particular transmitter for CB service.
{B} Write to the FCC if you have questions about the CB Rules: FCC Private Radio Bureau Personal Radio Branch Washington, DC 20554

[RULE 23] Notice of Interference
[RULE 24] Service to Transmitters and Antennas
[RULE 25] Modifications to Transmitters
[RULE 26] FCC Inspections
[RULE 27] Keeping Station Records
[RULE 28] Contacting the FCC

RULE 1 - Descriptions The Citizens Band Radio Service (CB) is a private, two-way, short-distance voice communications service for personal or business activities. The CB Radio Service may also be used for voice paging.
RULE 2 - Usage of Rules You must comply with these rules when you operate a station in the CB Service from:
{1} Within or over the territorial limits of places where radio services are regulated by the FCC.
{2} Aboard any vessel or aircraft registered in the United States or
{3} Aboard any unregistered vessel or aircraft owned or operated by a United States citizen or company.
Your CB must comply with Part 95/Subpart E [Technical Rules].
Where the rules use the word "you", "you" means a person operating a CB station. Where the rules use the word "person" the rules are concerned with an individual, a corporation, a partnership, an association, a joint stock company, a trust, a state, territorial or local government unit, or other legal entity. Where the rules use the term "CB station", that means a radio station transmitting in the CB Radio Service.
RULE 3 - Eligibility To Use CB You are authorized to operate a CB station unless:
{A} You are a foreign government, a representative of a foreign government, or a federal government agency.
or
{B} The FCC has issued a cease and desist order to you, and the order is still in effect.
RULE 4 - Licenses You do not need an individual license to operate a CB station. You are authorized by this rule to operate your CB station in accordance with the rules stated in this Subpart. (*also read Rule 17)
RULE 5 - Areas of Legal Operation You are authorized to operate your CB station from:
{A} Within or over any area of the world where radio services are regulated by the FCC. Those areas are:
[1] The 50 United States
[2] The District Of Columbia
[3] Commonwealth of Puerto Rico
[4] Navassa Island
[5] United States Virgin Islands, it's 50 islets and cays
[6] American Samoa
[7] Baker Island
[8] Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands
[9] Guam Island
[10] Howland Island
[11] Jarvis Islan
[12] Johnston Island
[13] Kingman Reef
[14] Midway Island
[15] Palmyra Island, and it's 50+ islets
[16] Wake Island
{B} Any area of the world, except, within the territorial limits of areas where radio services are regulated by -

[1] An agency of the United States other than the FCC, you are subject to it's rules.
[2] Any foreign government, you are subject to it's rules.
{C} An aircraft or ship, with the permission of the captain, within or over any area of the world where radio services are regulated by the FCC or upon or over international waters. You must operate your CB station according to any applicable treaty to which the United States is a party.
RULE 6 - Special Restrictions
{A} If your CB station is located on premises controlled by the Department of Defense you may be required to comply with additional regulations imposed by the commanding officer of the installation.
{B} If your CB station will be constructed on land of environmental or historical importance (such as a location significant in American history, architecture or culture), you may be required to provide information to comply with Part 1.1305 through 1.1319 of the FCC Rules.
RULE 7 - Operating Channels/Frequencies Your CB station may transmit only on the following channels / frequencies:

Channel	Frequency	Channel	Frequency
1	26.965	21	27.215
2	26.975	22	27.225
3	26.985	23	27.255
4	27.005	24	27.235
5	27.015	25	27.245
6	27.025	26	27.265
7	27.035	27	27.275
8	27.055	28	27.285
9*	27.065	29	27.295
10	27.075	30	27.305
11	27.085	31	27.315
12	27.105	32	27.325
13	27.115	33	27.335
14	27.125	34	27.345
15	27.135	35	27.355
16	27.155	36	27.365
17	27.165	37	27.375
18	27.175	38	27.385
19	27.185	39	27.395
20	27.205	40	27.405

{B} * Channel 9 may be used ONLY for emergency communications OR for traveler assistance.
{C} You must, at all times and on ALL channels, give priority to emergency communication messages concerning the immediate safety of life or the immediate protection of property.
{D} You may use ANY channel for emergency communications or for traveler assistance.
{E} You must share each channel with other users.

{F} The FCC will not assign any channel for the private or exclusive use of any particular CB station or group of stations.
{G} The FCC will not assign any channel for the private or exclusive use of CB stations transmitting single sideband or AM.
RULE 8 - Antenna Height
{A} "Antenna" means the radiating system (for transmitting, receiving or both) and the structure holding it up (tower, pole or mast). It also means everything else attached to the radiating system and the structure.
{B} If your antenna is mounted on a hand-held portable unit, none of the following limitations apply;
{C} If your antenna is installed at a fixed location (whether receiving, transmitting or both) it must comply with EITHER one of the following:
[1] The highest point must not be more than 20 feet (6.10 meters) higher than the highest point of the building or tree on which it is mounted;
or
[2] The highest point must not be more than 60 feet (18.3 meters) above the ground.
{D} If your CB station is located near an airport, and if your antenna structure is more than 20 feet (6.10 meters) high, you may have to obey additional restrictions. The highest point of your antenna must not exceed 39.37 inches (1 meter) above the airport elevation for every 109.36 yards (100 meters, 1 hectometer) of distance from the nearest point of the nearest airport runway. Differences in ground elevation between your antenna and the airport runway may complicate this formula. If your CB station is near an airport, you may contact the nearest FCC field office for a worksheet to help you figure the maximum allowable height for your antenna.
WARNING: Installation and removal of CB station antennas near powerlines is dangerous. For your safety follow the installation directions included with your antenna.
RULE 9 - Equipment
{A} You must use an FCC type accepted CB transmitter at your CB station. You can identify an FCC type accepted transmitter by the 'type acceptance'label placed on it by the manufacturer. You may examine a list of type-accepted equipment at any FCC Field Office or at FCC Headquarters. Use of a transmitter which is not FCC type-accepted voids your authority to operate the station.
{B} You must not make, or have made, any internal modifications to a type-accepted CB transmitter. (*read Rule 25) Any internal modification to a type-accepted CB transmitter cancels the type-acceptance, and use of such a transmitter voids your authority to operate the station.
RULE 10 - Power Output
{A} Your CB station transmitter power output must not exceed the following values under any conditions:
AM [Amplitude Modulation] - 4 watts carrier power [CP]
SSB [Single Side-Band] - 12 watts peak envelope power [PEP]

{B} If you need more information about the power rule, see Part 95/ Subpart E.
{C} Use of a transmitter which has carrier [CP] or peak envelope power [PEP]in excess of that authorized voids your authority to operate the station.
RULE 11 - Linear Amplifiers
{A} You may not attach the following items (power amplifiers) to your type-accepted CB transmitter in any way:
[1] External radio frequency [RF] power amplifiers, also called linear amplifiers, or linears;
or
[2] Any other devices which, when used with a radio transmitter as a signal source, are capable of amplifying the signal.
{B} There are no exceptions to this rule and use of a power amplifier voids your authority to operate the station.
{C} The FCC will presume you have used a linear or other external [RF] power amplifier if-
[1] It is in your possession or on your premises; and
[2] There is OTHER EVIDENCE that you have operated your CB station with more power than allowed by CB Rule 10.
{D} Paragraph C above in this section does not apply if you hold a license in another radio service (HAM, etc.) which allows you to operate an external RF power amplifier.
RULE 12 - Permitted Communications {A} You may use your CB station to transmit two-way plain language communications. Two-way plain language communications are communications without codes or coded messages. Operating signals such as "ten codes" (10-4, etc.) are not considered codes or coded messages. You may transmit two-way plain language communications only to other CB stations, to units of your own CB station, or to authorized government stations on CB frequencies about-
[1] Your personal or business activities, or those of members of your immediate family living in your household;
[2] Emergencies;
[3] Traveler assistance;
[4] Civil Defense activities in connection with official tests or drills conducted by, or actual emergencies announced by, the Civil Defense Agency with authority over the area in which your station is located.
{B} You may use your CB station to transmit a TONE SIGNAL only when the signal is used to make contact, or to continue communications (Examples: tone operated squelch, selective calling circuits). If the signal is an audible tone, it must last no longer than 15 seconds at one time. If the signal is a subaudible tone, it may be transmitted continuously only as long as you are talking.
{C} You may use your CB station to transmit one-way communications (messages not intended for two or more CB stations) only for emergency communications, traveler assistance, brief tests (radio checks) or voice paging.
RULE 13 - Illegal Communications {A} You must NOT use a CB station-[1] in connection with activity which is against federal, state or local law;

[2] to transmit obscene, indecent or profane words, language or meaning;
[3] to interfere intentionally with the communications of another CB station;
[4] to transmit one-way communications, EXCEPT for emergency communications, traveler assistance, brief tests (radio checks) or voice paging;
[5] to advertise or solicit the sale of any goods or services;
[6] to transmit music, whistling, sound effects or any material to amuse or entertain;
[7] to transmit any sound effect solely to attract attention;
[8] to transmit the word "MAYDAY" or use any other international distress signal, EXCEPT when your station is located in a ship, aircraft or other vehicle which is threatened with GRAVE AND IMMINENT danger and you are requesting IMMEDIATE assistance.
[9] to communicate with, or ATTEMPT to communicate with, any CB station more than 155.3 miles (250 kilometers) away;
[10] to advertise a political candidate or political campaign (You may use your CB radio for the business or organizational aspects of a campaign, if you follow all other applicable rules);
[11] to communicate with stations in other countries, except stations in Canada (on General Radio Service).
[12] to transmit a false or deceptive communication.
{B} You must not use a CB station to transmit communications intended for live or delayed rebroadcast on radio or television. You may use your CB station to gather news items or to prepare programs.
RULE 14 - Paying for Actual Use {A} You may not accept direct or indirect payment for transmitting with a CB station.
{B} You may use a CB station to help you provide a service, and be paid for that service, as long as you are paid only for the service and not for the actual use of the CB station.
RULE 15 - Who Is Held Accountable You are responsible for all communications which are made BY YOU from a CB station.
RULE 16 - Time Limit of Transmissions {A} You must limit your CB communications to the minimum practical time.
{B} If you are communicating with another CB station or stations, you, and the stations communicating with you, must limit each of your conversations to no more than five (5) continuous minutes.
{C} At the end of your conversation, you, and the stations communicating with you, must not transmit again for at least one minute.
RULE 17 - Identification Methods {A} You need NOT identify your CB communications...
{B} You are ENCOURAGED to identify your CB communications by any of the following means:
[1] Previously assigned FCC CB call sign
[2] K prefix followed by operators initials and residence zip code
[3] Your name;
or

[4] Description of your organization including name and any applicable operator unit number
{C} You are encouraged to use a "handle" (nickname) ONLY IN CONJUNCTION WITH the methods of identification listed above in paragraph B of this section.
RULE 18 - Emergency Usage and Assisting Travelers {A} You must at all times and on all channels, give priority to emergency communications.
{B} When you are directly participating in emergency communications, you do not have to comply with Rule 16 about length of transmissions. You must obey all other rules.
{C} You may use your CB station for communications necessary to assist a traveler to REACH A DESTINATION or to RECEIVE NECESSARY SERVICES. When you are using your CB station to assist a traveler, you do not have to obey Rule 16 about the length of transmissions. You must obey all other rules.
RULE 19 - Remote Control Operations {A} You MAY NOT operate a CB station transmitter by RADIO remote control.
{B} You MAY operate a CB transmitter by WIRELINE remote control IF you obtain specific approval in writing from the FCC. To obtain FCC approval you must show why you need to operate your station by wireline remote control. Send your request and justification to: FCC, Gettysburg, PA 17325.
If you receive FCC approval, you must keep the approval as part of your station records (read Rule 27 on station records).
RULE 20 - Telephone Patches and Telephony with CB {A} You MAY connect your CB station transmitter to a telephone if you comply with ALL of the following:
[1] You or someone else must be present at your CB station and MUST-
(i) manually make the connection (the connection cannot be made by remote control);
(ii) supervise the operation of the transmitter during the connection;
(iii) listen to each communication during the connection; and
(iv) stop all communications if there are operations in violation of these rules.
[2] Each communication during the telephone connection must comply with all of these rules.
[3] You must obey any restriction that the telephone company places on the connection of a CB transmitter to a telephone.
{B} The CB transmitter you connect to a telephone must not be shared with any other CB station.
{C} If you connect your CB transmitter to a telephone, you must use a phone patch device which has been registered with the FCC.
RULE 21 - Penalties may not be current penalty information. {A} If the FCC finds that you have WILLFULLY or REPEATEDLY violated the Communications Act or FCC Rules, you may have to pay as much as $2,000 for each violation, up to a total of $5,000.
{B} If the FCC finds that you have violated any section of the Communications Act or FCC Rules, you may be ordered to stop whatever action caused the violation.
{C} If a federal court finds that you have WILLFULLY and KNOWINGLY violated any FCC Rule, you may be fined up to $500 for each day you committed the violation.

{D} If a federal court finds that you have WILLFULLY and KNOWINGLY violated any provision of the Communications Act, you may be fined up to $10,000 or may be imprisoned for one year, or both.
RULE 22 - Correspondence from FCC {A} If it appears to the FCC that you have violated the Communications Act or these rules, the FCC may send you a discrepancy notice.
{B} Within the time period stated in the notice, you must answer with:
[1] A complete written statement about the apparent discrepancy;
[2] A complete written statement about any action you have taken to correct the apparent violation and to prevent it from happening again; and
[3] The name of the person operating at the time of the apparent violation.
{C} If the FCC sends you a letter asking you questions about your CB radio station or its operation, you must answer each of the questions with a complete written statement within the time period stated in the letter.
{D} You must not shorten your answer by references to other communications or notices.
{E} You must send your answer to the FCC office which sent you the notice.
{F} You must keep a copy of your answer in your station records.
RULE 23 - Notice of Interference {A} If the FCC tells you that your CB station is causing interference due to technical reasons, you must follow all instructions in the official FCC notice (This notice may require you to have technical adjustments made to your equipment).
{B} You must comply with any restricted hours of CB station operation which may be included in the official notice.

RULE 24 - Service to Transmitters and Antennas {A} You may adjust an antenna to your CB transmitter and you may make radio checks (One-way transmissions for a short time in order to test the transmitter).
{B} Each internal repair and each internal adjustment to your FCC type-accepted CB transmitter must be made BY or under the DIRECT SUPERVISION of a person licensed by the FCC as a GENERAL RADIOTELEPHONE OPERATOR.
{C} Except as provided in paragraph D below in this section, each internal repair and each internal adjustment of a CB transmitter in which signals are transmitted must be made using a NON-RADIATING antenna (Dummy Load).
{D} Brief test signals (signals not longer than one minute during any five minute period) using a radiating antenna may be transmitted in order to:
[1] adjust an antenna to a transmitter;
[2] detect or measure radiation of energy other than the intended signal;
or
[3] tune a receiver to your CB transmitter.

RULE 25 - Modifications to Transmitters {A} You must not make or have any one else make any internal modification to your CB transmitter.
{B} Internal modification does NOT include:
[1] Repair, or servicing of a CB station transmitter; or
[2] Changing plug-in modules which were type-accepted as part of your CB transmitter
{C} You must not operate a CB transmitter which has been modified by anyone in any way, including modification to operate on unauthorized frequencies or with illegal power.
RULE 26 - FCC Inspections {A} If an authorized FCC representative requests to inspect your CB station, you must make your CB station and records available for inspection.
{B} A CB station includes all of the radio equipment you use.
RULE 27 - Keeping Station Records Your station records include the following documents, as applicable: [1] A copy of each response to an FCC violation notice or an FCC letter.
[2] Each written permission received from the FCC.
RULE 28 - Contacting the FCC {A} Write to your nearest FCC Field Office to: [1] Report an interference complaint; or [2] want to know if the FCC has type-accepted a particular transmitter for CB service.

Well I survived the short drive to Findlay on sunday, had a great time, ran into some freinds from my home county. Met some really friendly helpfull people, including some of the ARRL reps, the sales reps from Allinco, and many Hams, all offering me some great advice, and encouragement.

Turns out onf of the members of the FIndlay club that put on the hamfest is an aquaintance of mine, I'll be seeing him again tuesday for a meeting.

I even saw someone with what is either a fake call or a vanity call either way it was amusing call was "LO5ER".

Hey Leland, Doug, what happened you guys said you'd be there. I was there from the time the gates opened until the closed down, wearing a bright white shirt with a big RED CROSS disaster relief logo, and my Red Cross id name tag.

Oh well maybe next time in Adrian eh?

Keith "WebDoc" Hosman

p.s. I was bummed they didn;t have th testing there, but I did pick up a code practice occilator, a ARRL General study book so I can start studying for the next class.

Bullshit It is not illegal to use a CB amp it is illegal to transmit on the 11 meter band using a so called CB amp. I can use an amp all day long as soon as I hook it up to an antenna and transmit on 11 meters it becomes illegal. Anyone can use one into a dummy load or other test equipment. There is nothing wrong with trying to develop an amp that does not splatter and cause interference. The day that happens and it is summited to the FCC for approval the laws will change. Oh one more thing that day is very close. Hummmmm think about it an FCC approved 11 meter amp. What will Aaron have to cry about then?

>My approach is simply to put the cards on the table and say >that using a CB amp is illegal and wrecks the band for your fellow >CBers.

> [1] The highest point must not be more than 20 feet (6.10 meters) > higher than the highest point of the building or tree on which it is > mounted;
> or > [2] The highest point must not be more than 60 feet (18.3 meters) > above the ground.
> {D} If your CB station is located near an airport, and if your antenna > structure is more than 20 feet (6.10 meters) high, you may have to > the nearest FCC field office for a worksheet to help you figure the > maximum allowable height for your antenna.

> WARNING: Installation and removal of CB station antennas near > powerlines is dangerous. For your safety follow the installation > directions included with your antenna.

> RULE 9 - Equipment
> {A} You must use an FCC type accepted CB transmitter at your CB > station. You can identify an FCC type accepted transmitter by the > 'type acceptance'label placed on it by the manufacturer. You may > examine a list of type-accepted equipment at any FCC Field Office or > at FCC Headquarters. Use of a transmitter which is not FCC > type-accepted voids your authority to operate the station.
> {B} You must not make, or have made, any internal modifications to a > type-accepted CB transmitter. (*read Rule 25) Any internal > modification to a type-accepted CB transmitter cancels the > type-acceptance, and use of such a transmitter voids your authority to > operate the station.
> RULE 10 - Power Output
> {A} Your CB station transmitter power output must not exceed the > following values under any conditions:
> AM [Amplitude Modulation] - 4 watts carrier power [CP]
> SSB [Single Side-Band] - 12 watts peak envelope power [PEP]
> {B} If you need more information about the power rule, see Part 95/
> Subpart E.
> {C} Use of a transmitter which has carrier [CP] or peak envelope power > [PEP]in excess of that authorized voids your authority to operate the > station.
> RULE 11 - Linear Amplifiers
> {A} You may not attach the following items (power amplifiers) to your > type-accepted CB transmitter in any way:
> [1] External radio frequency [RF] power amplifiers, also called linear > amplifiers, or linears;
> or
> [2] Any other devices which, when used with a radio transmitter as a > signal source, are capable of amplifying the signal.
> {B} There are no exceptions to this rule and use of a power amplifier > voids your authority to operate the station.
> {C} The FCC will presume you have used a linear or other external [RF]
> power amplifier if-
> [1] It is in your possession or on your premises; and > with more power than allowed by CB Rule 10.

> {D} Paragraph C above in this section does not apply if you hold a > license in another radio service (HAM, etc.) which allows you to > operate an external RF power amplifier.
> RULE 12 - Permitted Communications {A} You may use your CB station to > transmit two-way plain language communications. Two-way plain language > communications are communications without codes or coded messages.
> Operating signals such as "ten codes" (10-4, etc.) are not considered > codes or coded messages. You may transmit two-way plain language > communications only to other CB stations, to units of your own CB > station, or to authorized government stations on CB frequencies about-

> [2] Emergencies;

> [3] Traveler assistance;
> [4] Civil Defense activities in connection with official tests or > drills conducted by, or actual emergencies announced by, the Civil > Defense Agency with authority over the area in which your station is > located.
> {B} You may use your CB station to transmit a TONE SIGNAL only when > the signal is used to make contact, or to continue communications > (Examples: tone operated squelch, selective calling circuits). If the > signal is an audible tone, it must last no longer than 15 seconds at > one time. If the signal is a subaudible tone, it may be transmitted > continuously only as long as you are talking.
> {C} You may use your CB station to transmit one-way communications > (messages not intended for two or more CB stations) only for emergency > communications, traveler assistance, brief tests (radio checks) or > voice paging.
> RULE 13 - Illegal Communications {A} You must NOT use a CB station-> [1] in connection with activity which is against federal, state or > local law;
> [2] to transmit obscene, indecent or profane words, language or > meaning;
> [3] to interfere intentionally with the communications of another CB > station;
> [4] to transmit one-way communications, EXCEPT for emergency > communications, traveler assistance, brief tests (radio checks) or > voice paging;
> [5] to advertise or solicit the sale of any goods or services;
> [6] to transmit music, whistling, sound effects or any material to > amuse or entertain;
> [7] to transmit any sound effect solely to attract attention;
> [8] to transmit the word "MAYDAY" or use any other international > distress signal, EXCEPT when your station is located in a ship, > aircraft or other vehicle which is threatened with GRAVE AND IMMINENT > danger and you are requesting IMMEDIATE assistance.
> [9] to communicate with, or ATTEMPT to communicate with, any CB > station more than 155.3 miles (250 kilometers) away;
> [10] to advertise a political candidate or political campaign (You may > use your CB radio for the business or organizational aspects of a > campaign, if you follow all other applicable rules);
> [11] to communicate with stations in other countries, except stations > in Canada (on General Radio Service).
> [12] to transmit a false or deceptive communication.
> {B} You must not use a CB station to transmit communications intended > for live or delayed rebroadcast on radio or television. You may use

There were 4 of those radios at the hamfest in Findlay yesterday, 3 of them had both speakers, and looked to be in near mint condition, no mods, no scratches, no dings. Also saw several brownings in excellent shape. IO almost bought one of the brouwnings, love the Ping.

True, I do not buy items over the internet, there is a reason for that. I am kinda old fashioned in that if I am going to shell out good hard earned money, I want to be able to chew the persons ass in person if it doesn;t work, I do not like playing phone tag, being put on hold for ages, and the stupid " for tech support press 1 - Tech support, if you are having problems turning it on press 55" I want to talk to a real person, and then if he gives me the run around I can grab him by the shirt, pull him over the counter, and shove the item thats giving me problems down his neck, work his jaws, and make him swallow it.

Needless to say, I only ever have to take something back once, they never do me wrong a second time.

That was the brother of "PH Zero NY".

You have to write down these calls to appreciate them! The computer does not do them justice!

A woman wrote to the FCC to complain about her newly-issued ham call sign: K*NAG.

Her husband wrote, the same day, complimenting the FCC on the appropriateness of the call sign assignment.

I was there around 7:40 AM. If you want to find those "bargains" you have to hit the gates EARLY. I parked the first row back from the fence running along the service drive in to the fairgrounds. That was the service drive running right by the prize booth. I was driving my red Dodge van with my Ham call license plate on the back. I was wearing blue jeans, a dark green tee-shirt that said "Look Out Mountain" on the front, and a black Yeasu hat. You may have seen me on the road, next to the prize booth, holding on to a set of stacked 70cm 11 element yagi antennas, and talking to a couple of other Hams I know around about 9AM. I split around 9:45/10:00 AM after spending about $300. It takes me about 2-1/2 hours to drive down there and another 2-1/2 hours back home. Before I left I did look around for you, but that is a large swap spread out on the fairgrounds. There were also a lot of Hams there too. I didn't see anybody with a Red Cross shirt on.

I also found a nice clean RF Concepts low drive 70cm amp (10w in for 100w out) with high SWR shut down protection for about $175. These amplifiers are about $400 new. The Mirage I have now does not have that. It seems 70cm all mode amps are hard to find, and when you do find one they are the typical 30w in for 100w out design. I can find 2m amps almost all the time at swaps. In fact the same guy was also selling a 2m version of the RF Concepts amplifier (175w out) for the same price.

There's another swap coming up in Michigan in a week or so. I plan on being there too. You plan on going? If so we can try meeting up there again.

There is a female Ham that posts from time to time on the policy news group with a call sign of "W5TIT" out of Texas. And she requested that call sign too!

I was in that area alot, talking with the people from Hancock County Red Cross, who were friends of mine, and were part of the local club sponsoring the hamfest, they had their disaster services communications/field office truck there set up as an aid station, and since I work with the Fire&Rescue I was able to relieve them a time or two so they could take care of other things.

Good luck, Keith. Too bad I didn't know earlier. I have a code oscillator laying around here somewhere packed away. (I just moved, so EVERYTHING's still in boxes. :-( ) I'd have been glad to give it to you. Once again, good luck and knock 'em dead. Take care and 73.

Sure you do, remember you were using his nic exactly.
I merely pointed out to him that someone was forging his screen nic and he should be aware of this. I didn't say a thing to AOL, so I don't quite know why you are again accusing me of something you know very little about.

> Please stop your

What do you mean harass, it is not I, that is making you read these post. I do not change my screen name every other day like you do John. I mean really get a grip on it man.
Just go ahead and place a filter on me and I will guarantee that you will not see me again.

> Remember your forged kilowattkid ... Ill play your game.

Now that's a great defense.

You:
Mr. ISP he forged this persons screen nic and I want to report him.

ISP:
Oh, ok lets see..... Hum, there is no such person registered anywhere with that screen nic or isp, you sure you have that right?

You:
Yes sir, oh, wait a minute, never mind, I forgot that I made that screen name up myself and was using it to by pass newsgroup filters. Forget everything I've said.

Again, old boy, you have not proved a thing other than, you need a little more cheese :>)

Hi & good morning Richard,
Yes, I'm sorry it is a little on the boring side, but I am having such fun showing this old boy how wrong and what a liar he really is.
Please forgive me if it's not funny for you, but by the e-mail I'm getting, it seems like there is quite a few people that thinks it's very funny to them.

Hello & Good Morning Geno,
Yes, you are right there, but it seems to me that it's a lot of work for very small results.
They sound ok when properly installed though.

Hasta,

Hey Jay, careful now, his feelings are getting hurt and he thinks were harassing him. I didn't know I had such an influence over him, to make him read my posts.

Landshark

P.S. did you get my response to your question concerning the theory of relativity you sent me the other day?

"3-500zees" <3-500zees@home.comno>
Hello Jose: As you can see the unfriendly and snotty replies from 3-500zees, he is just trying to stir the pot with no substance, name calling, and as usually none productive replies.

Mom and Dad made him drop the CB hobby, he had a web site with his linear amplifiers and such, that Mom and Dad bought for him. So you can see the type of caliber he is.

> the nearest FCC field office for a worksheet to help you figure the > maximum allowable height for your antenna.

> WARNING: Installation and removal of CB station antennas near > powerlines is dangerous. For your safety follow the installation > directions included with your antenna.
> RULE 9 - Equipment
> {A} You must use an FCC type accepted CB transmitter at your CB > station. You can identify an FCC type accepted transmitter by the > 'type acceptance'label placed on it by the manufacturer. You may > examine a list of type-accepted equipment at any FCC Field Office or > at FCC Headquarters. Use of a transmitter which is not FCC > type-accepted voids your authority to operate the station.

> type-accepted CB transmitter. (*read Rule 25) Any internal > modification to a type-accepted CB transmitter cancels the > type-acceptance, and use of such a transmitter voids your authority to > operate the station.
> RULE 10 - Power Output
> {A} Your CB station transmitter power output must not exceed the > following values under any conditions:
> AM [Amplitude Modulation] - 4 watts carrier power [CP]
> SSB [Single Side-Band] - 12 watts peak envelope power [PEP]
> {B} If you need more information about the power rule, see Part 95/
> Subpart E.
> {C} Use of a transmitter which has carrier [CP] or peak envelope power > [PEP]in excess of that authorized voids your authority to operate the

> RULE 11 - Linear Amplifiers
> {A} You may not attach the following items (power amplifiers) to your > type-accepted CB transmitter in any way:
> [1] External radio frequency [RF] power amplifiers, also called linear > amplifiers, or linears;
> or
> [2] Any other devices which, when used with a radio transmitter as a > signal source, are capable of amplifying the signal.
> {B} There are no exceptions to this rule and use of a power amplifier > voids your authority to operate the station.
> {C} The FCC will presume you have used a linear or other external [RF]
> power amplifier if-
> [1] It is in your possession or on your premises; and > with more power than allowed by CB Rule 10.

> {D} Paragraph C above in this section does not apply if you hold a > license in another radio service (HAM, etc.) which allows you to > operate an external RF power amplifier.
> RULE 12 - Permitted Communications {A} You may use your CB station to > transmit two-way plain language communications. Two-way plain language > communications are communications without codes or coded messages.
> Operating signals such as "ten codes" (10-4, etc.) are not considered > codes or coded messages. You may transmit two-way plain language > communications only to other CB stations, to units of your own CB

> station, or to authorized government stations on CB frequencies about-

> RULE 13 - Illegal Communications {A} You must NOT use a CB station-> [1] in connection with activity which is against federal, state or > local law;
> [2] to transmit obscene, indecent or profane words, language or > meaning;
> [3] to interfere intentionally with the communications of another CB > station;
> [4] to transmit one-way communications, EXCEPT for emergency > communications, traveler assistance, brief tests (radio checks) or > voice paging;
> [5] to advertise or solicit the sale of any goods or services;
> [6] to transmit music, whistling, sound effects or any material to > amuse or entertain;
> [7] to transmit any sound effect solely to attract attention;
> [8] to transmit the word "MAYDAY" or use any other international > distress signal, EXCEPT when your station is located in a ship, > aircraft or other vehicle which is threatened with GRAVE AND IMMINENT > danger and you are requesting IMMEDIATE assistance.
> [9] to communicate with, or ATTEMPT to communicate with, any CB > station more than 155.3 miles (250 kilometers) away;
> [10] to advertise a political candidate or political campaign (You may > use your CB radio for the business or organizational aspects of a > campaign, if you follow all other applicable rules);
> [11] to communicate with stations in other countries, except stations > in Canada (on General Radio Service).
> [12] to transmit a false or deceptive communication.
> {B} You must not use a CB station to transmit communications intended > for live or delayed rebroadcast on radio or television. You may use > your CB station to gather news items or to prepare programs.
> RULE 14 - Paying for Actual Use {A} You may not accept direct or > indirect payment for transmitting with a CB station.

> {B} You may use a CB station to help you provide a service, and be > your CB station transmitter to a telephone if you comply with ALL of > the following:

> [1] You or someone else must be present at your CB station and MUST-
> (i) manually make the connection (the connection cannot be made by > remote control);

> (ii) supervise the operation of the transmitter during the connection;
> (iii) listen to each communication during the connection; and > (iv) stop all communications if there are operations in violation of > these rules.
> [2] Each communication during the telephone connection must comply > with all of these rules.
> [3] You must obey any restriction that the telephone company places on > the connection of a CB transmitter to a telephone.
> {B} The CB transmitter you connect to a telephone must not be shared > with any other CB station.
> {C} If you connect your CB transmitter to a telephone, you must use a > phone patch device which has been registered with the FCC.
> RULE 21 - Penalties may not be current penalty information. {A} If > the FCC finds that you have WILLFULLY or REPEATEDLY violated the

[2] There is OTHER EVIDENCE that you have operated your CB station with more power than allowed by CB Rule 10.

Does this mean when my neighbors Toaster Modulates from my transmission?

Ah, but Darkhorse,

The point of the postings by the AKC Komrades isn't to inform, or make a difference, to the freebanders.

Their point, it seems, is to flood this newsgroup with useless, extraneous, repetitive, abusive information in order to disrupt any information being passed here.

I, and others on this newsgroup, here have been trying to advocate efficient antenna design and implementation as an alternative to "running power"... after all, what good is all that power if you can't radiate it efficiently? But that message gets lost amongst the "this is illegal and I'm going to cry about it all month long" posts which seem to prevail here...

As the song by Metallica says... "Sad but true!"

Actually I've already run the coax inside, I went between the bed and cab underneath, and there is a rubber gromet you can pop out and pull up the carpeting behind the bench seat. So it doesnt go thru the back window or door. I just want something that is alot harder to steal than a magnet mount.
If its mounted to the roof all they have to do it climb in the bed and walk over there. Also the truck is lifted, I think it might be too high with an antenna sticking out of the top.

I would agree....however most of these "hams" are 11 meter ops from the git-go who just brought their already bad manners to the Amateur Service...they just never stopped being idiots on 11 meters, too......

But you are right...who ever it is, if they can't get along with the relatively simple rules of either Service, they need to part with some green...enough to make 'em think twice about it in the future...And if THAT doesn't stop 'em, put them in jail like Burton in California or Flippo in Florida. Pair them up with a serial rapist named Bruno and let the wedding bells ring!

(And that's my LIBERAL opinion)

Sorry about that Scott,

I went away this weekend and am just getting around to perusing the NG today. I didn't make the stickers themselves, the folks at www.makestickers.com did. The envelopes are number 12's and I used Microsoft Word to generate the postal barcodes along with the standard names and addresses. The envelopes were fed into a HP Laserjet IV printer.

All in all, I think they did a pretty good job on the bumperstickers. I might try another vendor to produce the next batch. Perhaps the quality will be even better. I can't say I'm disappointed in the response. I mailed out over eighty stickers to people, mostly from this NG last week. Thanks again.

Since he's going to be there I guess the CBers looking for amplifiers and export radios may as well stay home. The local FCC field engineers will likely do a walk through the area and give those with questionable wares a warning. They can't let the boss think they are slacking off on the job. I have heard of this happening at other swaps where Riley Hollingsworth was the guest speaker. 8-))

Hello,
I am in need of some help.
The radio works great, but there is a strange problem, so mayby someone out there has a valid solution.
The frequency counter and clock don't work right.
The clock reads 12:00 all the time and cannot be changed.
When pushing in the freq button it reads 12.000. or 12.0000 (can't remember how many digits) push in auto button and it reads 12:00 until keyed up, then goes to 12.000.
Really a wierd deal, but hopefully you can help me out.
I also am in need of the Mod/SWR meter if you have a working one laying around.
Please email me direct at...
tramd300@aol.com

Thank you in advance...

One thing I did see that was rather amusing was a guy walking around with papers taped to his chest and back advertising a scanner he wanted to sell, it was almost 5 years old, looked rather abused, and was asking $250. Also talked quite a bit with some guys from Lima, the one was a crazy old fart, we had a ball chatting while they were drawing the prizes.
They had some great prizes to give away, I didn't win anything.

Fifteen has been a favorite since my Novice days. There has been a lot of opinions on this group re the 'organ recitals' and outlawry on 20 and 75 supposedly the crown jewels of the ham bands; fifteen has neither. It was a new band when I got on it in 1955 and over the years was the source of a lot of good long-distance friends including reciprocal trips with a G4.

Part of what you might be seeing, Tim, is the reality that people work for a living here and elsewhere plus the lack of the retired stalwarts that habituate 20 and the mobiles on ten. So activity on 15 tends to be in the European, American, and Oceanic evenings.

The thing that makes 12 different is its hominess (the band is only 100 kHz wide with a 60 kHz US phone band and the fact that you have to whomp up an antenna for it. So the people tend to be tinkerers and more independent souls. Plus it is contest-free which is, as Martha puts it, a good thing.

Wait until you go to the Dayton Hamvention in May. You see all sorts or weird things people do. One guy for the past few years has a scale model crank up tower he built on the top of a hard hat. The top of the model tower was where he stuck his HT Antenna, and the FAA tower warning lights were blinking LED's.

I heard about that guy, in fact he was a topic for discussion in Findlay sunday. Another rather amusing sight, was a tiny car with a trunk about 20-24 inches deep (trunk lid), this guy I swear had an antenna mounted about every 4 inches. Now I know some people have multiple radios in their cars, and might have one antenna per radio. But I know there is no way he could have that many radios in his tiny car he had to have 20-30 antennas on his trunk lid, plus about 6 on the roof of his car. And I thought my 3 antennas was bad enough on my car, one for my CB, one for my scanner, and one for the emergency services radio.

Here we have the FCC rules interpreted by a person who profits from the sale of NONAME AMPS. How many think he is credible?

How do you figure the laws will suddenly change if you come up with a clean "box' designed for 11 meters? The only way you could get it approved would be to "disguise" it as a ham amp, which is dishonest.

Dishonesty also comes into play when you encourage CBers to acquire amps only for "testing".

Say all you want about me, call me names, scream and pout. But you guys break the law and are dishonest as hell - which makes you either criminals or politicians.

Body handling: Binary attachment payload not displayed: fp_20010910shootout.jpg

It's actually the picture from Netscape about the punk in Cali.

Makes you wonder if the no-lifes in here look like that!

Twisted I don't post any more off topic posts than you.
The post you just made was off topic do you have a clue about what you are saying. How was the Cb radio today?
